Peking, Viet Cong Appear To Differ On Ending War

Cong Continuing Siege Of Camp; Hit Vietnamese Force

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — The Viet Cong maintained their siege of Plei Me with mortar shells Saturday night and pounced on a Vietnamese task force 10 miles away that presumably was marching to the relief of the Special Forces garrison.

A U.S. spokesman said the task force was hit on a secondary road northeast of Plei Me in the central highlands 210 miles northeast of Saigon, and the Viet Cong knocked out several of its armored vehicles.

Both sides were on the move elsewhere.

Communist forces assaulted a government unit in Phu Yen Province, between Plei Me and the South China Sea, where several battalions of government troops have been on guard for 10 days to protect the Province's rich rice harvest. Air strikes helped break up the Red attack and government casualties were described as light.

HIT BY BATTALION

Airplanes also sped to help a government road reconnaissance unit hit Friday in Quang Duc Province, midway between Saigon and Plei Me, by a Viet Cong force estimated to total a battalion — perhaps 500 men. Contact slackened.

U.S. Marines killed five Viet Cong in scattered clashes in the Da Nang and Chu Lai areas on the northeast coast and seized a weapons cache that included four cases of Communist Chinese hand grenades, a spokesman said. He said the Marines suffered light casualties.

A raid by U.S. B52 jet bombers from Guam seemed to be their closest of the war to Saigon, striking suspected Viet Cong installations south of the capital. The explosives appeared to fall only seven to 10 miles away. The previous closest raids were 20 miles away and even they rattled windows in Saigon.

U.S. supersonic twin-turbojet F5AsN called Freedom Fighters, went into action in Viet Nam for the first time. Two attacked a suspected Viet Cong concentration 30 miles northeast of Saigon in the D-zone jungle. A forward air controller said the two blanketed the target with 90 per cent of their explosive cargo — two tons of bombs.

A squadron of 12 is being assigned to the Bien Hoa Air Base, 12 miles northeast of Saigon. The F5A, which packs two 20mm cannon and can carry three tons of bombs and missiles, is designed for close support of friendly troops and is considered especially effective against enemy concentrations and supply lines.

Many March In Support Of U.S. Policies

NEW YORK (UPI)—Angered by last weekend's nationwide demonstrations against U.S. policies in Viet Nam, several hundred persons marched in protest here Saturday to the blaring strains of "Yankee Doodle Dandy" and "God Bless America."

Young and old —men, women and children —paraded in front of the News Building at 42nd Street in the heart of midtown Manhattan.

"We're proud of our men in Viet Nam," read one sign. "Crush Communism in Viet Nam —and New York City," said another.

By 2:30 p.m. EDT an estimated 600 persons had gathered to picket outside the building "to support our boys in Viet Nam."

A sound truck, the only vehicle permitted on the south side of the block, blared patriotic music, such as "My Country 'Tis Of Thee," and "The Marines' Hymn."

At the corner of 42nd Street and Second Avenue, the marchers passed a John Birch Society book stand. "Join the John Birch Society," read a sign hanging over about a dozen pieces of society literature, such as "American Opinion," and the controversial "Blue Book."

"I'm an old Commie fighter from way back," said 72-year-old William O'Connor of Brooklyn, who said he was a member of the John Birch Society.

O'Connor passed out —free of charge —"Better Dead Than Red" and "Let's Win in Viet Nam!" buttons.

A member of the American Legion approached the elderly man and tried to give him 25 cents for a "Better Dead Than Red" button.

A Shut In

Persons around town who are missing the smiling face of Mrs. Mary Jo Inzina might be surprised to learn she's been shut in, and not, she says, in the parish jail. Mary Jo, the wife of Monroe fireman Mike Inzina, checked into the St. Francis Hospital Friday for a weekend of recuperation from a bad case of a bad cold.

She expects to be "released from custody" in Room 671 by Monday.

Ironically, Mary Jo spent many hours at the hospital earlier in the week — for another reason. Her daughter, Mimi, was just released after a long battle with pneumonia.

No Saucer

No, it wasn't a slow-moving flying saucer that appeared in the southern part of the sky here Saturday afternoon. FAA at Selman Field identified the object as a clear weather balloon winding its way east-southeast and gathering information on the area from an altitude of about 4,000 feet.

Indonesians Warned To End Protests

SINGAPORE (AP) — President Sukarno warned the Indonesian people Saturday to stop anti-Communist demonstrations or be shot. The warning, broadcast by army controlled Radio Jakarta, heard here, appeared to move Sukarno nearer a showdown with the army.

In an angry voice, Sukarno said he would order the army, which has given tacit approval to the demonstrations, to "shoot and kill" demonstrators.

Maj. Gen. Suharto, newly-appointed army chief, supported the president's appeal for calm but the broadcast did not carry any comment by him on the warning to anti-Communist demonstrators.

IGNORE APPEALS

Army leaders have ignored earlier appeals by the 64-year-old Indonesian president since it seized control of the country after an abortive Oct. 1 coup. The army charges Indonesia's Chinese-oriented Communist party — PKI — had a hand in the coup.

Speaking at a meeting he held with top provincial leaders and military commanders at his Jakarta palace, Sukarno repeated earlier instructions to end what he described as "racialism, slander and vengeance."

This was an obvious reference not only to the anti-Communist campaign directed by the army but to mob activities against Chinese.

Sukarno blamed Jakarta newspapers for not giving his instructions sufficient space. The papers, all non-Communist, operate only with army permission. He said that once his instructions against demonstrations are carried fully in the Jakarta press, he would order the army to "shoot to kill" violators.

Sukarno said he wanted the demonstrations halted to avoid "all actions which can ruin our struggle.

"Our struggle is against necolim (neocolonialism, colonialism and imperialism) — it is our efforts to build a society that is fair and just," he declared. "It is our struggle to crush Malaysia."

Ellender Will Seek 6th Term In U.S. Senate

WASHINGTON (AP)) — Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., announced he will be a candidate for renomination and re-election to the Senate next year.

Now serving his 29th year in the Senate, Ellender will be seeking his sixth term.

He made his formal announcement Saturday in a talk for broadcast in Louisiana. He said that there had been "rumors to the effect that I may not be a candidate" next year.

"I would like to take this opportunity to lay that rumor to rest once and for all," he told his constitutents. "I will be a candidate, and I shall spend the months between now and election day asking for your votes and support. I firmly believe my past record and my accomplishments justify your continued confidence."

Ellender, now 75, is fourth among the 100 U.S. senators in point of seniority, ranking behind Sens. Carl Hayden, D-Ariz., Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., and Harry Byrd, D-Va. He is chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee and third Democrat on the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Forecast Fair For Vicinity

The weather in a word is fair. Area forecast calls for clear skies and lower temperatures through Monday. The predicted high for the Twin Cities today is 66 to 72, a sizable drop from Saturday's 78. The low should dip to the 40 to 45 range. Saturday's low was a chilly 36.

FAA at Selman Field reported no rainfall in the last 24 hours, and none is foreseen. Northerly winds will be from 8 to 18 miles per hour today, while 75 per cent sunshine is expected.

Space Flight Preparations Checked Out

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — Preparations proceeded so smoothly toward Monday's dramatic chase in space that Gemini 6 astronauts Walter Schirra and Thomas Stafford found time to watch a football game Saturday.

Weather appeared to be the only threat to plans for the toughest manned space-flight the nation has ever tried. Forecasters said late Saturday that skies were expected to be cloudy at launch time but the weather was "expected to be satisfactory."

'GO' REPORTS

"Go" reports flowed ito Houston's control center from around the world for the flight of Gemini 6, in which Schirra and Stafford must hook up with another satellite while orbiting at 17,500 miles an hour.

At a 5 p.m. EST briefing, the federal space agency said preparations were proceeding "on schedule" for the flight.

Contrary to earlier reports, the agency said Schirra and Stafford decided to forego final simulated flight tests and spent the morning in their quarters, reviewing the flight plan.

Saturday afternoon, they watched parts of the Notre Dame-Southern California football game on television and Schirra got his thick shock of hair cut.

The mission is a key to America's plan to send three Apollo astronauts to the Moon in 1969. To do it, space pilots must master the two-satellite hookup that Schirra and Stafford will be trying for the first time.

If the intricate dual countdown goes without a hitch Monday, a powerful Atlas booster will shoot Gemini's rendezvous satellite into space at 10 a.m.

Then the space chase will be on. Schirra and Stafford, flying in a lower and faster orbit like the racehorse on the inside rail, will gradually overtake their 16-foot target.

With precise maneuvers performed at exactly the right time, the bell-shaped two-seater will switch orbits and head toward its speeding quarry.

If all goes according to plan, and few scientists believe it will, Schirra and Stafford will nudge and hook up to the Agena on their fourth swing over the Pacific about five hours and 40 minutes after launch. If the rendezvous occurs on the fourth orbit, the flight probably would end Tuesday; but if the meeting is delayed it will be a two-day mission.

America's Apollo Moon explorers must perform a similar feat to return to Earth. They will blast off from the lunar surface in their landing "bug" and rendezvous with their mother ship orbiting the Moon.

Peace Talks With Hanoi Seem Closer

LONDON (UPI) — Differences appeared Saturday to be growing between Peking and the Communist Viet Cong over Red China's opposition to ending the Viet Nam war.

The differences were disclosed by the Viet Cong representative in Moscow, Nguyen Van Dongh, according to a broadcast by Radio Prague.

The surprise broadcast monitored here quoted the Communist leader as saying the Viet Cong insisted that the United States recognize it as a partner in any peace negotiations, but did not demand that American troops withdraw from South Viet Nam before talks begin.

BROADCAST

The broadcast coincided with fresh suggestions from Hungarian diplomats that their latest contacts with Hanoi have indicated a possibility for peace talks if the United States unconditionally stopped bombing the north.

As hints of reported Communist readiness for peace talks have been proved wrong repeatedly in the past, diplomatic sources in London remained skeptical. Nevertheless, latest developments were being studied with interest as a possible indication of real changes to come on the Communist side.

Nguyen Van Dongh was reported to have said at a press conference in Helsinki that relations between Communist China and the Viet Cong are "very tense now." He is the diplomatic representative in Moscow of the South Vietnamese National Liberation Front (NLF) which is the political arm of the Viet Cong guerrillas.

The NLF has not, so far, formally backed his statement and there was no way of knowing, therefore, whether he was talking out of turn. But diplomats dismissed this as highly unlikely.

Government Drafts Plans For Justice

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government lawyers are busy drafting legislation that would provide new federal powers to combat racial discrimination in the administration of justice in the South, it was learned Saturday.

One proposal being prepared for submission to Congress early next year is aimed at tightening standards for selection of trial juries.

This came to light after an all-white jury in Hayneville, Ala., Friday acquitted Ku Klux Klansman Collie Leroy Wilkins of the murder last March of Mrs. Viola Liuzzo, a white civil rights worker from Detroit.

Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenback had no comment on the result of Wilkins' second trial. The first ended in a hung jury.

But informed sources said that a wave of protests over the trial and a similar acquittal in Hayneville of Thomas Coleman in the death of another civil rights worker could be the catalyst for legislative action.

Area Wreck Kills Mother, Daughter

FERRIDAY (Special) — Mrs. Avis Lilly Wiley, 47, and her 19-year-old daughter Beverly Sue Wiley, both of Ferriday, were killed in a car-truck collision at the intersection of Highways 84 and 15 just inside the Ferriday city limits at 1:45 a.m. Saturday.

The two were traveling east on U.S. Hwy. 84 when their 1965 model car collided with an oil well service truck driven by Edward Farmer, 21, of Vidalia, which was headed east on La. Hwy. 15, according to Ferriday police.

Mrs. Wiley was apparently killed instantly and Miss Wiley died before an ambulance arrived, according to investigating officer Kenneth McKnight of Ferriday. Both were pronounced dead on arrival at Concordia Parish Hospital in Ferriday.

PROBE PUSHED

McKnight said Farmer was not injured. An investigation was being continued late Saturday night.

Funeral services for the mother and daughter will be at 2 p.m. today at Larto Pentecostal Church with the Rev. Jack Knapp officiating. Burial will be in Peas Cemetery in Larto by Young's Funeral Home at Ferriday.

Mrs. Wiley is survived by her husband, Dennis Wiley of Ferriday; three sons, Alden Lee Wiley, Hayven Dennis Wiley and Mitchell Roy Wiley, all of Larto; her mother, Mrs. Florence Wiley of Larto; three brothers, Hayven Wiley of Jonesville, A. W. Wiley of Ferriday and Hubert Wiley of Larto; four sisters, Mrs. Rowena Sanders, Mrs. Verbie Bordelon and Miss Vera Wiley, all of Larto, and Mrs. Delia Bordelon of Jonesville, and seven grandchildren.

Miss Wiley is survived by her father, three brothers and her maternal grandmother.

Pallbearers will be Hilton Bordelon, Henry Bordelon, Ervin Bordelon, Harold Bordelon, Wayne D. Sanders, Carlos Sanders, Michael Wiley Jr., and Rodney Wiley.

Motorist Dies After Accident; Area Kin Noted

WINNSBORO (Special) — A woman with several Northeast Louisiana relatives was fatally injured Saturday night when her automobile went out of control and slammed into a ditch near LeBeau in South Louisiana.

She was Mrs. Nettie Kennerson Sproles, 41, of Melville, who died two hours after the wreck in an Opelousas hospital.

Funeral services will be 2 p.m. today at Turkey Creek Baptist Church near Gilbert with the Rev. Mack Walker officiating.

Burial will be in Central Cemetery by Mulhearn Funeral Home of Winnsboro.

Surviving are five sons, Larry Dale Sproles of Baton Rouge, Lavonne Sproles of Busche and Randall Sproles, Ronnie Lee Sproles and David Earl Sproles, all of Jonesville; a brother, Robert Kennerson of Jigger and two sisters, Mrs. Ollie Sproles of Busche and Mrs. Margaret Sproles of Gilbert.

No Explosives Found In Dolls From Viet Nam

FT. BENNING, Ga. (UPI)—Army authorities Saturday discounted reports that American servicemen in Viet Nam are unknowingly shipping Viet Cong booby-trapped dolls into this country.

A spokesman at the Ft. Benning public information office said over 200 dolls had been checked by Army demolition experts in the Columbus area and no explosive-rigged dolls have been found.

The spokesman, Sgt. Major Albert W. Spratley, said the dolls, in addition to a careful inspection, also were X-rayed and nothing was found.

Reports of the dolls cropped up around the nation. Officers at Ft. Benning received about 200 telephone calls asking about the dolls.

Spratley also said the army had checked reports that American servicemen in Viet Nam had been injured by exploding dolls. He said there was no evidence that any such injuries ever occurred.

'War Turns Against Reds'

HONOLULU (AP) — Adm. U.S. Grant Sharp Jr., commander of all U.S. forces in the Pacific, says he believes the tide has turned against the Communists in South Viet Nam.

"I believe that the (South) Vietnamese and the United States are no longer losing the war," the four-star admiral said after his return this week from a trip to Southeast Asia.

Sharp, 59, attended military conferences of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO) at Bangkok, Thailand, and conferred in Saigon with Gen. William C. Westmoreland, top U.S. commander in South Viet Nam.

He told a planeside news conference Tuesday he thought the war could be won and added, "There is no doubt we will stay in there until we get it cleaned up."

Asked about the war trend, Sharp replied through a spokesman he believed that the United States and South Viet Nam have stopped losing the war.

This was in contrast with Sharp's view of the situation earlier this year. Until about June, Sharp said, "there had been some worsening of the situation in South Viet Nam."

In a talk before the Honolulu Rotary Club last month Sharp had noted that the coming days may see "a change in (Communist)) strategy caused by their heavy casualties and the commitment of U.S. forces." He said the Viet Cong had suffered a heavy toll.

"Their use of larger units in the open made them vulnerable to firepower of the U.S. and Vietnamese units and increasingly exposed them to air power," he said.

The admiral said Viet Cong casualties this year, through September, were more than double those of the same period in 1964.

Sharp cited "the recent highly successful Vietnamese army enagement at Duc Co, an operation involving the effective use of air power in support of ground forces." He said about 400 Viet Cong had been killed, while government losses were "minor."

Sharp called the U.S. Marines' battle near Chu Lai a "decisive victory." Viet Cong losses were heavy — '613 dead by actual count and probably more than twice that many" — while U.S losses were light.

American strength in Viet Nam is steadily increasing, the admiral said, and U.S. Forces are being used more effectively.

He was asked if air attacks on North Viet Nam are hurting the Communists.

"We have destroyed most of the important bridges in the area in which we are operating," he replied.

Johnson Returns To Texas Ranch

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson came home to Texas Saturday night to recuperate further from major surgery, saying "I feel good but weak" and that he intends to get as much rest as possible.

The President and Mrs. Johnson flew down from Washington by jet.

Talking with reporters enroute, Johnson discussed his health and remarked "I hurt good. "I'm going to force myself to take exercise to strengthen myself." By that, he said, he meant walking and swimming.

The chief executive said he weighs between 195 and 200 pounds now, which is a little below the 202 pounds he scaled just before he entered the hospital.

Johnson said he wants to get down to 187 pounds because that would allow about three pounds leeway in case he wanted to have a cocktail or two with friends before dinner.

"I haven't had a drink since the last of August — not even wine," the President said.

He said he has complained to Mrs. Johnson about the way he felt and his curtailed activities. He added with a smile: "She said you can't run the country if you can't run yourself."

The President said he intends to get up early in the morning, and spend his time out with his dogs, walking, seeing the sheep and cattle, looking at the deer, boating on Lake Lyndon B. Johnson, and signing some bills.

He plans to attend church this morning at Johnson City, he said.

The President and Mrs. Johnson landed at Austin, 65 miles east of their ranch, and shifted to a small jet Star for the rest of the trip home.

For the first time on a recent trip, Johnson walked along a fence where about 150 spectators had gathered to welcome him. For about 10 minutes he just touched fingertips with them, no real handshakes.

Some of the presidential relaxation at the ranch will include seeing old friends, such as U.S. Circuit Court Judge Homer Thornberry, a former congressman from Texas.

At one point Johnson was told that a lot of people want to see him. He answered that "I'll see some people. But we'll let time determine that."

On the flight to Austin the President received regular reports on the latest flare-up in the Dominican Republic.

Aides said these had come in every 15 minutes. Johnson also spent part of the time on the telephone with Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

But Johnson said he believed the Organization of American States (OAS) had the prime measure of responsibility in the Dominican situation.

Before departing Washington the President again had praised the now-departed Congress.

Johnson is expected to remain for more than two months at his ranch, until he completes his recovery from the Oct. 8 surgery for removal of his gall bladder and a kidney stone.

The President may return to Washington briefly from time to time but is not expected to resume full-time duty at the White House much before Jan. 10. That is the date on which his favorite Congress begins its second session.

Johnson, who left the hospital Thursday, put in several busy hours of clean-up work before his late afternoon take-off from Andrews Air Force Base in nearby Maryland.

Among is callers was the Senate Majority Leader, Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., with whom he discussed the first session of the 89th Congress which ended shortly before 1 a.m. Saturday, after having filled an amazingly tive requests.

White House press secretary Bill D. Moyers said Johnson had told Mansfield "he was very pleased with what they had done" and had special tribute for the leadership of the Montanan in the Senate and of Speaker John W. McCormack of Massachusetts in the House.

But the talk obviously wasn't all of what the President sees as the accomplished glories of the Democrat-dominated Congress. Indicating Johnson isn't forgetting the relatively few things he didn't get from the legislators, Moyers said: "Of course, there are a good many things left on the agenda we want to get at-23 in all."

Moyers gave no breakdown, but such a total would have to include many comparatively minor legislative items. Only four or five of the big ones eluded the persuasive President this year.

But, lest anyone think the President is unhappy with the Congress, Moyers added that Johnson "thought it had been a good year for the American people — a period unparalleled in American political life, that produced more benefits than in any comparable period."

Soviets Tell U.S. To Get Out Of War

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev demanded Saturday that the United States get out of Viet Nam. He also stepped up the current Soviet attack on West Germany.

He warned that if "minor conflagrations" such as the Vietnamese war are not "extinguished in time, they may flare up into a universal missile war."

Speaking at ceremonies in Kiev honoring the city for its "hero's role" in World War II, Brezhnev said West Germany "has never dropped the idea of revenge for the second World War and is asking for access to rockets and nuclear weapons."

He warned that any German attempt at revenge will mean "nuclear war with all its consequences."

The angry speech was seen by Western diplomats here as another step in the current anti-German campaign. The Kremlin apparently hopes to convince its Eastern European allies that their sole protection against new West German "militarism" is Russia.

Brezhnev claimed some Germans think the time is ripe for revenge now because the West is their ally and they "will not have to struggle on two fronts."

"This is naive," Brezhnev said. "Nowadays a war on the Eastern front will mean a national catastrophe for Germany. And it cannot rely on its Western rear because the people of Europe do not forget the German occupation."

Brezhnev renewed his attacks on "imperialist wars" in Southeast Asia.

Swiss Envoy In Washington To Discuss Cuban Exodus

WASHINGTON (AP) — Swiss Ambassador Emil Stadelhofer flew up from Havana Saturday to work on details for an anticipated exodus of thousands of Cubans to the United States.

The envoy arrived for weekend conferences at the State Department amid Washington optimism that an agreement will be reached soon.

Stadelhofer declined to predict when an accord would be reached. The Swiss Ambassador to Cuba told newsmen he had asked to come to Washington because he said the status of negotiations now makes it worthwhile to talk things over directly with U.S. authorities here.

The negotiations are "proceeding in a normal way" and he himself has seen Prime Minister Fidel Castro three times, including twice Friday, the Swiss diplomat added.

Just how many will ride the proposed refugee lift to Florida still hinges on how the deal is worked out and how many Cubans decide to leave U.S. sources said. Estimates range from 20,000 to 55,000.

Because the Swiss represent the United States in Cuba, Stadelhofer has been a middleman in negotiations set off by Castro's Sept. 28 offer to let his countrymen leave and President Johnson's Oct. 3 acceptance.

A Cuban plane flew the ambassador to Nassau Saturday morning, and a U.S. Air Force jet whisked him to Washington.

State Department authorities headed by John H. Crimmins, coordinator of Cuban affairs, promptly began talks with Stadelhofer which are expected to run into early next week.

Such items as the means of transportation, identification and health checks and embarkation facilities are among the details involved in the U.S.-Cuban negotiations as well as the broader question of which refugees should get priority.

A major transportation means is expected to be an America airlift from V[illegible], about 85 miles east of Havana. Castro already has set up the nearby port of Camarioca for the refugee flow, and the formal exodus could go partly by ship, too, informants said.

More than 1,000 refugees have jumped the gun on the negotiators by crossing the Florida Straits in small boats.

Washington and Havana exchanged a pair of diplomatic notes so far on setting up a safe and orderly procedure. U.S. sources say the negotiations may have narrowed to the point now at which no more note sending is needed.

Assessing Castro's motives in allowing fellow Cubans to escape his Red rule, U.S. officials say they are inclined to accept the explanation given by the bearded Communist himself. Castro says he wants a "truly free society of Socialist men and women," and "those who do not wish to live under socialism, under our new society," can get out.

Some 270,000 have fled to the United State since Castro's take-over in 1959. The flow dwindled to about 1,000 a month after the Cuban missile crisis had cut regular Havana-Miami traffic.

In guessing at how many will come over now that Castro has lifted the bars, U.S. officials estimate more than 20,000 persons qualify as close relatives of exiles already in the United States. Castro has agreed in principle to the U.S. proposal that they get first priority.

Some 30,000 others, by U.S. estimate, are political prisoners. But Castro has balked at Washington's proposal to free them, and he also has barred departure of draft-age males.

Tens of thousands more have indicated they want to leave their Red-ruled homeland. The U.S. sources say they do not have any precise figure on that number.

Explosive Crisis Faces Young Government Of Garcia-Godoy

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP)—An explosive crisis confronted the wobbly seven week-old provisional government Saturday, caught up in the continuing bid for power between the contending factions in the Dominican revolution.

President Hector Garcia-Godoy scheduled another radio-television appearance. The city was alive with rumors that the Cabinet would resign and that the armed forces chiefs would be removed.

Another shooting incident in the rebel sector Friday night pointed up one of the key factors in the crisis: the presence of government troops in a downtown fortress rebel sympathizers regard as a revolutionary shrine.

At least three persons were killed in the shooting between armed rebel partisans and troops quartered in the ancient fortress. The president ordered the troops there last Monday night to support a smaller military detachment in the dock area. This angered rebel supporters.

The current crisis revolves around the armed forces leaders whom rebel partisans, Cabinet members among them, want removed claiming they ordered an indiscriminate bombing and shelling of the city in the early days of the revolution. With equal vehemence, the military chiefs want the president to remove or at least mute the influence of high government officials they regard as overly sympathetic to the rebel cause.

Patria, leftist newspaper, said Saturday the Cabinet was ready to resign en masse unless the president dismissed the army chiefs. The cabinet was in conference with the president Saturday afternoon. The Patria report could not be verified.

It was learned from authoritative sources, however, the president was set to fire the armed forces secretary, Commodore Francisco J. Rivera Caminero and the three chiefs of staff early Saturday morning.

These same sources said the president had changed his plans after a talk with U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker, Organization of American states troubleshooter during the Dominican crisis.

Pressures to force the president to remove the military chiefs were building up in still another quarter, labor. There were signs that a general strike, being urged by rebel leaders, was gaining momentum in the center of the city once controlled by the rebel military.

The central post office has been closed since Friday and ship unloading has stopped at the docks.

Evasion Of Draft Movement 'Flop'

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Draft card burnings in public and anti-war demonstrations have thoroughly aroused patriotic Americans who wonder what effect they will have on future military manpower pools. The answer, according to Selective Service Director Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey is very little. He states his reasons in the following exclusive interview the United Press International.)

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey said Saturday attempts to organize a draft evasion movement among American youths have been "a complete flop."

The white-haired, 72 year old general, who has headed the Selective Service System since 1940, said he is disturbed by anti-draft demonstrations —but not because of any effect they're likely to have on his ability to meet the manpower needs of the armed forces.

"My real concern," he told UPI in an interview, "is that some local boards may react to all of his agitation by canceling student deferments."

"I hope that won't happen," he said. "It would be unwise, because the national interest is served by keeping young men in college to complete their education. It also would be unfair, because the vast majority of students have had noting whatever to do with this draft evasion movement."

He said that of two million college boys who are continuing their studies under student deferments, "only a tiny fraction of one per cent have been involved in staging protest parades, burning draft cards or other demonstrations of unwillingness to serve in the armed forces."

"If I were the people who are trying to promote this movement, I'd feel it had been a complete flop," Hershey declared. "The effect on our ability to meet draft calls has been negligible, and I am confident it will remain negligible.

"If anything, the agitators may make my job easier. There is always a patriotic counter-reaction to this kind of thing —especially when it happens at a time when casualty lists are coming in from a war front in Viet Nam."

He said there have already been some intimations from various parts of the country that the "patriotic counter-reaction" may affect the attitude of some local draft board members toward student deferments.

National Selective Service headquarters can advise local boards to grant deferments to college students who are doing well in their studies, he said. "But we can't order them to defer anyone. The Selective Service Law specifically says that the local board has complete discretion in deciding whether to grant or deny a student deferment."

Gen. Hershey is not troubled by reports that some youths are devising ingenious ways to beat the draft by deliberately flunking mental and physical examinations.

"We also have ingenious ways of detecting these little frauds," he said. "There are always some people who try to fool the examiners. But only a very few get away with it."

He said a youth who has been classified 4-F may be called back for re-examination and reclassification at any time if selective service officials have reason to suspect he had pulled a fast one.

"But re-checks usually indicate that the guy who brags about fooling the draft examiners is just covering up the fact that he's really 4-F," Hershey said.

Since draft calls shot up to 45,000 men a month, the armed forces have relaxed their mental examination requirements somewhat. In the past, a high school graduate might be rejected if his score on the induction examination ranked him in the bottom third of his age group intellectually. Now he has to be in the lowest 10 per cent to flunk.

"A man with a high school diploma is now virtually assured of acceptability," Hershey said.

He acknowledged that there is one way a youth can beat the draft.

"If he tells the examiner that he's to homosexual, he'll be rejected," the general said. "We recognize that he might be lying, but a person who'll say that has certainly got something wrong with him. We have enough men to defend this country without having to draft self proclaimed homosexuals."

Police Brace For Trouble During Hearings On KKK

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a big roomy chamber, hung with crystal chandeliers, the names of Ku Klux Klan klaverns and dragons flashed on a screen.

Watching intently as the secrets of his so-called "Invisible Empire" were exposed, Imperial Wizard Robert Shelton was reported to have grumbled: "What happened to our security?"

At stake this week, and for weeks to come in the shopworn elegance of the House caucus room, is the future of the Ku Klux Klan and its wizards, dragons, klaliffs and titans.

And with the promise of mystery and suspense, the hearings by the House Committee on Un-American Activities became the top show of Capitol Hill with a long run ahead of it.

On opening day there was a waiting line in the marble hallway for the 216 seats.

Youngsters who turn up at practically every civil rights demonstration were on hand, brushed and neat, the boys even wearing ties.

George Lincoln Rockwell, fuehrer of the American Nazi party, dropped in, puffing on a corncob pipe. There was a sprinkling of Negroes, some sitting near Shelton and his klansmen.

With the committee's reputation for attracting riotous demonstrations there was a good chance of violence and the authorities had sent in a small army of uniformed police, plainclothesmen and U.S. marshals.

But not a ripple of trouble was evident.

The klansmen sat quietly in their white shirts and somber suits. The policemen warily eyed the crowd, which waited for exciting revelations. But about the only break in the decorum was the laughter as the Klan's odd terminology was read out — klaliff, klokard, kludd. . . .

As one bored policeman put it, "this is more like a PTA meeting."

One reason for the decorous atmosphere was the politeness of the Chairman Edwin E. Willis, D-La., whose courtesy was exceeded only by that of the klansmen's lawyer, soft-spoken Lester B. Chalmers Jr. of Raleigh, N.C.

But despite the Southern charm, Chalmers didn't let his clients give the committee any information except their names.

The biggest show on Capitol Hill was starting slowly. The committee obviously was bent on discrediting Klan leaders in the eyes of their sympathizers and followers by alleging misuse of dues and collection money. It presented bank returns, vouchers, and income tax returns in an effort to show Klan leaders were financial failures until they donned the robes of Klan leadership and became wizards at lining their own pockets.

The spectators' section began thinning out in this dusty atmosphere of financial records and Fifth Amendment pleadings — with the Klan doing all its counter-punching outside the hearing room.

Churches Urge U.S. End U.N. Opposition

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The National Council of Churches' World Order Study Conference urged Saturday that the United States end its opposition to seating Red China in the United Nations.

About 500 delegates to the conference asked that the U.S. take the step "without prejudice to its own policy of diplomatic recognition."

A himilar action in 1958 by the Study Conference resulted in widespread criticism of the National Council of Churches, even though the council's general board did not act on the declaration.

The recommendation on Red China Saturday said that the position of Nationalist China (Taiwan) should not be compromised by admitting the Red Chinese to United Nations membership.

That recommendation was one of several dealing with so-called Christian approaches to world problems passed as the conference ended.

The recommendations and the reports of various committees on international problems will be presented to the General Board of the National Council when it meets Dec. 2-3 at Madison, Wis.

Delegates to the conference also recommended to the National Council that:

1. United States bombing of North Viet Nam be halted "for an indefinite period in an effort to create more favorable circumstances for negotiations."

2. The South Vietnamese government "immediately ... begin negotiations for a cease-fire agreement, including cessation of terrorist activities."

3. Member churches recognize the right of the individual to protest government policies or actions.

4. Freedom for Rhodesia be supported "only when effective guarantees are provided for participation of the African majority in the government."

5. The U.S. take unilateral steps toward free travel between the United States and Red China and that an embargo on travel to Cuba be lifted.

Several other recommendations were passed. Among them were declarations to encourage the peaceful use of outer space, strengthening of the United Nations, and collection of birth-control information for distribution to churches that request such information.

The delegates also asked that efforts to be made to include the Roman Catholic and Jewish faiths in the next study conference, still unscheduled.

Administration Search At LSU Called Illegal

BATON ROUGE (AP) — The student government association at Louisiana State University has called the recent search of men's residence halls and confiscation of "Playboy" magazines illegal acts in violation of the fourth admendment to the U.S. Constitution.

The president of the association, Steve Carter, issued a statement urging the LSU administration to review its regulation concerning men's dormitory rooms in view of the recent "Playboy" controversy.

The statements carried the endorsement of student presidents of major campus organizations.

John Capdeville, head of men's housing, recently ordered the magazines seized, contending they were covered by a housing rule which bans nude pictures in dormitories.

A university spokesman said a revision of men's housing regulations is already under study and there would be no comment on the resolution at this time.

Comet Stages Dazzling Show For Scientists

HONOLULU (AP) — Elusive Comet Ikeya-Seki redeemed itself with scientists by staging a dazling performance over the mid-Pacific early Saturday.

Scientists aboard a research jet plane were so elated with the exhibition that they radioed a report from the plane. They said the comet had given no indication of breaking up.

Later Bob M. Cameron, of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Ames Research Center, reported the comet "finally has developed a spectacular tail about 10 degrees in length."

Cameron added that "some structure can be seen in the tail, and there are intensity changes within the tail itself."

Saturday's predawn flight was to have been the last. But because of the success of the mission, the 37-member team of scientists and technicians scheduled another for Sunday.

"We also saw a very bright head on the comet," Cameron 10 degrees above the horizon before sunrise and, at sunrise, the tail extended almost straight up.

"We were quite pleased, he said. "Todays performance was quite beyond expectations.

Cameron said the observations made indicated that Ikeyaeki has very strong emissions of sodium D.

He said other data would not be analyzed until later.

Phi Mu Sorority Float Chosen Homecoming Parade Winner

A pretty girl "Swinging to Victory" took top honors in the 1965 Northeast Louisiana State College Homecoming Parade here Saturday morning.

The float, entered by Phi Mu social sorority, won its sponsoring organization $75 first prize money. Taking runner-up honors and the $50 cash prize for second place was Alpha Omicron Pi's "Cage the Lions" entry. Third place prize money — $30 — went to the Jester's "Bewitched" float.

Three other floats won honorable mention. They were the entries of the NLSC Geological Society, American Pharmaceutical Association and Health and Physical Education Club.

In the car competition the smallest — or one of the smallest — entries won its sponsors, Beta Sigma biological society, the first place cash prize of $30. The little yellow "bug" with hood up and a set of shark-like artificial false teeth showing suggested the Indians "Chuck 'em Up" on the gridiron.

Cars given honorable mention were entered by Westminster House, NLSC Honor Society and Pi Sigma Epsilon sales and marketing fraternity.

Several of the winning entries in the House Decorations contest suggested an Indian feast with lion meat the main course. Teke's first prize-winner depicted a lion being roasted on a spit. The scene, which earned the social fraternity $50 for its efforts, included a teepee and totem pole on the lawn.

Cosper Hall, women's residence, took second place honors and a $30 cash prize. Their entry depicted Indians seated at a dinner table with lion meat the bill of fare.

In third place in the house competition was the College's newest "house" — the new, and as yet unnamed, men's dormitory across the bayou. Their theme was "The Lions Are Our Target Tonight" and their display showed a realistic lion's head in the center of a huge bulls-eye. Their cash prize was $20.

Honroable mention in the house decorations event were displays by the Catholic Student Center, Bon Aire Hall and Kappa Alpha fraternity.

In all, there were some 30 entries in the parade and 14 house displays.

Judges found it necessary to deliberate for several hours before completing their task. Groups taking part were complimented highly for the large number of entries of championship quality.

Wallace Facing Decision About Political Plans

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)— Gov. George C. Wallace, his efforts to succeed himself as Alabama governor scotched by a dissident state Senate, faced a decision on his political future this weekend.

The governor's press secretary, Ed Ewing, said Saturday that Wallace may announce Monday the time and date of a promised television appearance to discuss his defeat on a constitutional amendment that might have allowed him a second straight four-year term.

Speculation also mounted that the governor now may try to unseat Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., who comes up for re-election next year.

Pope Paul Gives Personal Appeal On Mission Day

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—Pope Paul VI Saturday urged greater zeal for the church because of "the sadnesses of these times and the threats to peace."

He urged all Christians to get together in missionary work, which he said grows ever harder because of the rising numbers of non-Christians, nationalism and the scarcity of priests and money.

Dr. George T. Walker, president of the college, was one of the featured speakers at the business meeting.

Funeral For Film Star Is Quiet Affair

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actress Marie McDonald, 42, was given a simple, quiet funeral Saturday and then entombed at Forest Lawn Memorial Park in nearby Glendale.

About 50 persons attended the rites for the blonde film player.

Her sixth husband, actor-producer Don Taylor, found her slumped over a dressing table in their San Fernando Valley home Thursday morning.

Coroner's officers have yet to specify a cause of death.

The Rev. Richard L. Brooks, of Chatsworth Methodist Church, conducted the brief service in the Church of the Recessional on the Forest Lawn burial grounds.

The minister noted the loss suffered by the actress' three children, saying: "When a child loses his mother early in life, it seems like life will stretch on endlessly with the loss. You have learned to love the love you have received from her."

Among pallbearers was actor Efrem Zimbalist Jr. of television's "77 Sunset Strip" and "The FBI."

GEORGE T. WALKER, Northeast Louisiana State College president, crowns Chryl McDonald as queen of homecoming during half-time ceremonies at the football game Saturday night. The queen is escorted by her father, Byron McDonald.

Searchers Comb Moorland For Missing Bodies

GREENFIELD, England (UPI) — An army of police, weekend hikers, mountain rescue experts and tracker dogs fanned out across 100 square miles of desolate moorland in near-freezing temperatures Saturday in a grim hunt for bodies.

"Look for anything out of the ordinary, especially patches of moorland that look as if they have been dug over at some time," police ordered. Experts and amateurs aided the grisly search.

Two bodies of children already have been unearthed in isolated graves on the windswept Pennine Moors, a stretch of bleak wasteland.

Police believe they may find at least two more bodies.

The naked body of 10-year-old Lesley Ann Downey was uncovered near here last Saturday nearly 10 months after she disappeared from a local fairground.

On Thursday police dug up the body of 12-year-old John Kilbride from a shallow moorland grave. He disappeared Nov. 23, 1963, after leaving his home to visit a cinema in nearby Ashton Under Lyne. His mother Friday identified clothing found in the grave as belonging to the eldest of her seven children.

A man and a woman, stock clerk Ian Brady, 27, and shorthand typist Myra Hindley, 23, have been charged with the murder of Lesley Ann.

Ex-Klansman Says He Was Threatened

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A used-car salesman who quit the Ku Klux Klan while testifying Un-American Activities said Saturday he and his family had been threatened.

Joseph G. DuBois, who said he was treasurer of the Goldsboro Klavern, told The Goldsboro News-Argus several persons had telephoned his wife before he arrived home from Washington after his testimony Friday.

"One person told my wife I had better not show my face in Goldsboro again," DuBois said. "I don't know who it was, but I'il be here as long as I live."

He said there were other telephoned threats but did not elaborat.

DuBois not only resigned while testifying Friday but turned over records of his unit to the committee which had subpoenaed them.

DuBois said he and his family had been deluged with congratulatory telephone calls and telegrams.

"There was a telegram from Fulton, N.Y.," he said. "It was one of the sweetest things I've ever gotten in my life.

"It said just: 'Fulton, N.Y. — Another profile in courage. Signed Sally and John Coleman.'

"I don't know these people. I don't know what race they are. But they are concerned for me and my family, and I'm grateful."

DuBois added, "My wife got a call from the wife of a Marine in Pensacola, Fla. She told me I exemplified the true American spirit.

Water Dashed On Columbia Flood Control

VICKSBURG, Miss. (Special) — The U.S. Corps of Engineers, Vicksburg District, has reported that it would be inadvisable at this time to undertake any measures for additional flood control facilities at Columbia. Benefits derived from these measures would be less than the cost of improvement, the engineers said.

The report was made in response to a resolution of the Committee on Public Works of the House of Representatives in 1957 which authorized a review of the reports on the Ouachita River and tributaries in Arkansas and Louisiana to determine the advisability of constructing additional facilities in the Columbia area. A public hearing was held at Columbia earlier this year.

After considering various plans to alleviate the interior drainage problems, the Vicksburg district engineer found that the most practicable plan, which has a benefit to cost ratio of only 0.7, would be by open-ditch diversion of Town Creek around the southern perimeter of the town. This would be done in conjunction with a dam across the present channel of Town Creek at the south end of Riser Street.

The district engineer's report, which contains three other proposals, which engineers said would produce even less favorable benefit - cost ratios, will be referred for review to the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors in Washington, D.C. It is also subject to review by the Chief of Engineers, U.S. Army, and the Secretary of the Army before it is transmitted to Congress.

Critical Questions Facing Wilson, Ian Smith

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Will the winds of change sweeping Africa blow with renewed strength through Rhodesia after the coming visit by British Prime Minister Harold Wilson?

Or will white supremacy, grimly defending one of its last toeholds in Africa, be able to hang on to this British colony?

Or will negotiations in Rhodesia's independence crisis be reopened?

These are the critical questions as Wilson and Prime Minister Ian Smith of Rhodesia prepare for their face-to-face encounter next week.

Smith, determined to get independence one way or another, has threatened to seize it with a unilateral declaration of independence if he cannot negotiate it.

Wilson, equally determined not to agree to independence unless it contains safeguards satisfactory to him for eventual majority rule by the country's 3.8 million Africans, has hit back with a counter-threat of an economic blockade of Rhodesia in the event of such a declaration.

Wilson, making his first visit to Rhodesia, will arrive Monday night knowing Smith's cabinet has already made a decision on the question — a decision almost certainly in favor of defying Britain, although not made public.

The announcement that Wilson was flying to Rhodesia with Commonwealth Secretary Arthur Bottomley was by far the most dramatic development this week in the independence issue which has stirred all of Africa.

The week had begun at a hectic pace on Monday with Smith rejecting Wilson's proposal for a mission of Commonwealth leaders to intervene in the crisis.

"Think again," Smith told Wilson.

Wilson reacted by appealing to Smith to reconsider for the sake of his own country and Africa the consequences of a unilateral declaration of independence, known here and all over Africa just by the initials UDI.

That night there was a shock. Garfield Todd, prime minister from 1953 to 1958 of what was then Southern Rhodesia and is now Rhodesia, had a restriction order slapped on him. Police served the order as he was about to leave Rhodesia to speak out against UDI at an Edinburgh University teach-in.

Todd was besieged the next day by foreign and local journalists on his 60-square mile cattle ranch to which he is restricted for the next 12 months.

Russian Press Reports New Missile Sites Are Relocations

WASHINGTON (AP) — An account in the Russian press may explain in part the sighting of new antiaircraft installations in North Viet Nam.

Indications are that some of the new sightings by U.S. planes may be relocations of previous missile and antiaircraft artillery positions.

One clue to this is found in a dispatch in the Russian publication Pravda earlier this month.

The U.S. Navy made available Saturday a translation of the report, apparently written by a Soviet correspondent in Viet Nam and translated for the Navy by retired Marine Brig. Gen. James F. Moriarty.

The Russian dispatch deals with antiaircraft defenses against the mounting attacks by U.S. Navy and Air Force planes, especially with the defenses for a bridge near Than Hoa. The Soviet correspondent calls it the "Ham Jong" bridge.

The article reports that antiaircraft defenses have been moved from original close-in positions around targets out to rice paddies and other areas.

The Pravda article says that at the time of the first attacks on the bridge, the antiaircraft battery "was not far from the electric power station," which apparently was in the vicinity of the bridge.

"Now the weapons are standing in rice fields," Pravda reports.

Such shifts in positions may have been going on at other permanent sites, as well as at mobile positions into which missile launchers and weapons are moved in and out. This could explain some of the new antiaircraft locations which the Pentagon said on Thursday had been observed.

All of the surface-to-air missiles — SAM — and probably much of the conventional air defense artillery are believed of Russian manufacture. Soviet military men presumably have been helping and may still be helping the North Vietnamese in operation of the missiles.

So far, the SAM weapons have brought down five U.S. aircraft, the Pentagon says. More than 100 other American planes have been downed during missions over bridges and other targets in North Viet Nam. Conventional guns and even small arms fire from machine guns and carbines presumably have accounted for nearly all these latter losses.

Freed Klansman Returns Home

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Collie Leroy Wilkins Jr., 22, Ku Klux Klansman acquitted in a civil rights slaying, rested at his suburban Fairfield home Saturday, shielded by parents who are convinced he was framed.

"I'm just glad it's over," said his mother, Mrs. Leroy Wilkins, who accompanied her son to his trial in Hayneville, Ala., where he faced first-degree murder charges in the highway slaying last March 23 of a white civil rights Volunteer Viola Gregg Liuzzo, of Detroit.

Wilkins was pointed out by Gary Thomas Rowe, an FBI informer, as the trigger man in the Liuzzo death. Wilkins was freed by a white, male jury Friday. The verdict brought cheers from court-room spectators.

"I hadn't raised my boy to go out on a lonely highway to do something like that," Mrs. Wilkins, mother of four children, said. "I always felt like that. I felt like my boy was framed in this, I always felt it was comspiracy."

She said her son, who has had no comment on the trial, needs rest and quiet. The phone began ringing early Saturday, and young Wilkins got little sleep, if any, she said.

The Wilkins house is a three-bedroom, single-story frame dwelling in Fairfield, a suburban area mainly populated by industral and steel workers. Many neat lower and middle-income homes dot the area. U.S. Steel Corp.'s Fairfield works are there.

There is a slum area on one edge, largely populated by Negroes. Willie Mays, star center fielder of the New York Giants, was born in that section.

Wilkins, like his father, is an auto mechanic but now is unemployed. During summer months cars are brought to his home for repairs, or he makes house calls. In the winter, however, he rarely has any work.

"He's a good mechanic," Mrs. Wilkins said. "He can just listen to a car and tell you what's wrong with it."

The mother said she doesn't know what her son will do in the future.

"They have hurt him so much. They have blackened his name."

Repercussions from Wilkins' acquittal came from all sections of the country.

In Alabama, Atty. Gen. Richmond Flowers said he would press the prosecution of two other klansmen accused in the Liuzzo slaying, Eugene Thomas and William O. Eaton.

He expects the cases to come up in the May term of court, and "the state will answer "ready."

The attorney general handled the Wilkins case personally after the State Supreme Court had ruled against him on a question of qualification of jurors.

Flowers also said he intends to go back to the State Supreme Court with his request for a ruling on the suitability of prospective jurors who say they believe civil rights workers are inferior.

He said if the court rules that such jurors are qualified to serve, he will carry the case "all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, if a constitutional issue can be made of it."

A civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., who was leading a civil rights voter registration demonstration in Montgomery hours before Mrs. Liuzzo was shot to death on U.S. Highway 80, said in Paris he was cutting short a European trip to return and lead protest demonstrations against the acquittal and southern justice.

In Detroit the husband of the slain Mrs. Liuzzo expressed admiration for Flowers but was critical of Alabama.

Badman Captured Without Violence

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Compared with John Dillinger, Clyde Barrow and Pretty Boy Floyd, he was a panty-waist. But in an 18-day crime spree baby-faced Delbert Harmon Garmon, Jr., kidnaped or held hostage 20 persons and led the law a wild chase. UPI staff correspondents in Texas and Oklahoma here reconstruct the story of a scared badman whose last taste of freedom was a sip of beer.)

By PRESTON McGRAW
United Press International

DALLAS (UPI) — The beer foam was still on Delbert Harmon Garmon's lips when two FBI agents walked up to him in a Dallas bar.

"Stand up!" they ordered. Garmon did and a .357 Magnum revolver slid down a leg of his trousers and banged on the floor.

Thus ended on Friday a crime spree in the best tradition of Southwestern badmen — with one exception. There was a minimum of violence. Garmon kidnaped or held hostage 20 persons in 18 days but he did not harm them. He treated them all politely.

"Gamon feels that if the policeman hadn't shot him in the face he probably wouldn't have panicked and run in the first place," his lawyer, Cletus Schenk of Wichita Falls., Tex., said Saturday.

A new scar left by a buckshot from the policeman's shotgun is on the right side of Garmon's mouth. He got it Oct. 5, when his wife leaped into an automobile with policeman John Burkett at Wichita Falls, 140 miles northwest of Dallas.

Mrs. Garmon wanted protection; she told Burkett that her husband was threatening to kill her. While they talked in the front seat of the car, Garmon emerged from a hiding place behind a row of grease barrels and put the muzzle of a .22-caliber pistol against Burkett's head.

He made Burkett surrender his pistol — the same .357 Magnum Garmon had Saturday when he was seized. But he made a mistake: he failed to take Burkett's shotgun from the car.

As Garmon leaped a fence to run down an alley, he took two shots at Burkett. Burkett blasted away with the shotgun. Garmon fired two or three more shots as he scrambled down the alley.

Burkett had shot out the tires of Garmon's automobile, so Garmon went to the home of L. J. Prince, 78, a retired oilman, and his 76-year-old wife.

He made the Princes drive him in their Cadillac to Altus, Okla. and there took Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Lotts' automobile.

Johnson's Surgery Discussed By Doctor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "It occurred to every one of us involved that this would be a bad one to muff."

This understatement belonged to Dr. George A. Hallenbeck, the Mayo Clinic surgeon called upon to operate on the President of the United States.

Hallenbeck met with newsmen Friday to discuss the removal of Lyndon B. Johnson's gall bladder. Other details were released Saturday by the White House.

"Allow me to start by reminding you that for any patient who needs an operation, the medical advisors and the surgeons feel the same great responsibility to take all steps they can to be certain that what must be done well, be done as safely as possible," Hallenbeck said.

"Now it would be foolish indeed if I were to tell you that the fact that our patient was the President did not color our planning and thinking in this particular case. I am sure it occurred to every one of us involved that this would be a bad one to muff."

Press Secretary Bill D. Moyers sat in on the interview with Hallenbeck along with Vice Adm. George GM Burkley, White House physician to the President, and Dr. David P. Osborne, chief of surgery at Bethesda.

As a prelude to the interview, Moyers gave two interesting aspects of the situation leading up to the surgery on Johnson for removal of his gall bladder and a kidney stone:

—Once it was virtually decided that Johnson would have to undergo surgery, the President asked Moyers to study all available material, even press conference transcripts, about other presidential illnesses. Johnson joined his press secretary in poring over the history of other presidential illnesses dating back to the 19th century. Their purpose: settle a policy on how to keep the public informed of Johnson's illness.

—On Oct. 4 Johnson telephoned former President Dwight D. Eisenhower who suffered three major illnesses while he was in the White House.

The next morning, Tuesday, Oct. 5, Johnson sent an Air Force jet to Ohio to pick up Eisenhower who was on a speaking trip.

Kennedy On Tour Of Viet Refugee Sites

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., set out Saturday on a whirlwind tour of Viet Nam's refugee camps.

Accompanied by three other U.S. lawmakers, Kennedy planned to visit a center for paraplegics in the coastal city of Vung Taum, 45 miles southeast of Saigon, and then fly to Ban Me Thuot and Pleiku, key cities in the central highlands. He expected to spend the night at Da Nang, 380 miles north of Saigon, before returning here Monday.

The Massachusetts Democrat, chairman of the U.S. Senate subcommittee on refugees and escapees, arrived in the country Saturday on a five-day private visit.

Government Is Working With FBI, Attorneys

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department is now working with the Federal Bureau of Investigation and U.S. attorneys in a broad investigation of the group behind the current antidraft movement, a spokesman said Saturday night.

Atty. Gen. Nicholas deB. Katzenbach announced last week that the probe was under way.

"There are some communists involved in it," he said then, and added: "We may very well have some prosecutions."

The Justice Department spokesman emphasized that the investigation is fundamentally concerned with violations of federal laws.

There are 92 federal districts in the United States.

Air Force Takes Wraps Off B52 Bombers

ANDERSEN AIR FORCE BASE, Guam (AP) — The Air Force finally has taken the wraps off its B52 bomber base on the northern tip of Guam.

Although the mighty B52 bombers have been methodically smashing Communist military targets in the Viet Nam war zone for months, only authorized U.S. military personnel have been allowed to look at Anderson Air Force Base.

That is, until Friday, when by order of the Department of Defense, the closed base, carved out of the Guamanian jungles for B29 operations in World War II, was opened to newsmen.

Until then no one except Air Force and other military personnel with business there ever ventured close enough to see the giant bombers, let alone photograph the Strategic Air Command's "Sunday punch," as the B52 bombers have been dubbed.

Newsmen who got their first look Friday came away convinced that Guam is the mightiest air base of all time, with its dual capability of using conventional "iron bombs" such as are being dropped on the Viet Cong targets in Viet Nam or, if it ever becomes necessary, resorting to nuclear weapons.

At the same time, Guam, with its vast U.S. naval base rising from Apra harbor, has become doubly important to the American defense system in the Western Pacific.

Andersen Air Force Base, under command of Maj. Gen. William J. Crumm, is home of the 3rd Air Division, Strategic Air Command (SAC), on the alert 24 hours a day as part of the SAC's global force for deterrence.

Touring Andersen's ramp and support facilities, one gets the feeling of what Gen J.P. McConnell, head of SAC, meant when he said recently that the B52s are being used as a "strategic persuader."

A B52 is able to carry a load of 51 "iron bombs," a simple field conversion enabling airmen to switch from nuclear to conventional bombs in minimum time.

When a strike is ordered from headquarters in Viet Nam, it is relayed directly to the Commander in Chief, Pacific, thence to the Joint Chiefs of Staff in Washington and SAC headquarters. Operational orders then flow down to the 3rd Air Division at Andersen.

But the final detail work of the "milk run," as Navy pilots jocularly refer to the bomber flights, must be accomplished by crewmen of the 7th Bombardment Wing, temporarily assigned to Andersen from Carswell Field, Fort Worth, Tex.

Supporting the SAC operations are the unsung service units which also contribute their specialized effort to a combat mission: Detachment 2 of the 1st Weather wing, the outfit responsible for plotting and forecasting weather conditions for bomb runs over Viet Nam; the 54th Weather Recon Squadron (MATS), assigned to work jointly with the Navy in providing weather reconnaissance for the joint typhoon warning system located at the Naval Air Station, Agana, Guam; Detachment 1, 1507th Support Squadron (MATS), responsible for the military air transportation of personnel and equipment; 1958th Communications Squadron (AFCS), whose duties consist of maintaining the long-range radio system, as well as the aircraft-control system in the Andersen area; 79th Air Rescue Squadron (MATS), a part of the vast air-rescue network in the Pacific; the 4440-11th Aircraft Delivery Squadron, the "movers" of Tactical Air Command elements in the area; and the Air Force's morale booster, the 11th Air Postal Squadron.

Mines Bureau Director Named

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Johnson announced Saturday the appointment of Dr. Walter R. Hibbard Jr., an internationally known metallurgist as new director of the U.S. Bureau of Mines.

The White House said Hibbard would be given a recess appointment pending Senate action next year.

Hibbard will succeed Marling J. Ankeny, who retired last Dec. 30 after eight years as bureau director.

More Revolution Activity Is Seen

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — The first shot of a Dominican revolution was fired the night dictator Rafael Leonidas Trujillo was slain four years ago. The last is still in the future.

This is an evaluation of this stricken little country's situation by some Dominicans who regard the April revolt merely a phase in the post-Trujillo struggle against despotic rule from the left or right.

The nature of this conflict was exposed by the cold-blooded killing last Saturday of Angel Severo Cabral, 56, a leading conservative politician. Leftist extremists, against whom Cabral acted vigorously while interior minister three years ago, are believed responsible for his death.

The incident was preceded and followed by a wave of violence whose unrestricted range underlined an absence of civilian authority. There is hardly any question that the life of the provisional government depends entirely on the presence of the Inter-American Peace Force.

Most foreign observers and many Dominicans agree that without armed forces of the Organization of American States behind it, the government would be toppled in a battle for power between the Dominican military and still well-armed rebel partisans.

The far right claims to have an armed vigilante corps of more than 500. Rebel leaders at one time claimed to have 12,000 armed partisans. The "army" they offered for integration in the regular armed forces numbered less than 1,500. The weapons they turned over to the OAS amount to a trickle of what military authorities claim the rebels took from army arsenals in April.

The deteriorating situation is believed the motive behind the governments decision to crack down on civilians illegally in possession of weapons. But implementing the law may be difficult.

Civilian authority has been abused in this country. Law enforcement has become discredited. The Dominicans' negative reaction to law enforcement, a product of 31 years of Trujillo repression, appears to have swung over to the extreme of anarchy, particularly among the underprivileged classes.

"One can't even issue a routine warning," said a ranking police official, "without being called genecide or traitor."

Rebel leaders, asked about looting and vandalism in their sector during the revolution, explained it was impossible to control without force and they would not resort to that.

Under such circumstances, a forcible search for illegally held weapons might draw vigorous and possibly violent resistance. Just finding the weapons may be difficult if not impossible.

It is known some revolutionaries, far leftists among them, weeks ago undertook a movement to conceal arms and ammunition. These revolutionaries feel their best defense against a far right dictatorship are their weapons.

"If there is any authority in this country I regret I cannot find evidence of it," says Dr. Viriato Fiallo, conservative leader and defeated presidential candidate in the 1962 elections.

Like the slain political leader Cabral and scores of others with similar political views, Fiallo abandoned the rebel sector at the start of the revolution last spring. His home was ransacked by rebel followers, as were the homes of others. After nearly a half century of labor, the elderly physician has nothing. He lost all his possessions, all his medical equipment.

Looters wrecked or heavily damaged many homes and businesses. Along George Washington Ave. an army of curbside vendors sells watches, radios, fans, even television sets at subbargain basement prices. A fleet of second-hand cars, ordered by a taxi drivers' union, disappeared from customs in the rebel area. Armando Barletta, a wealthy businessman who once operated in Cuba, lost more than 50 autos from his downtown agency.

Major Function Of News Media Cited By Dodd

BATON ROUGE (AP)—Newspapers, television and radio serve a major educational function, State Education Supt. William J. Dodd said Saturday.

This was proven, he said, by the recent tests given citizens classified by federal census standards as functional illiterates.

Many who earned literacy certificates in the tests, said Dodd, had educated themselves beyond their six grades of formal schooling by reading newspapers, watching television and listening to radio.

Dodd spoke before a 125-citizen committee which met to study possible means of updating the state's elementary and high school system.

He predicted that the legislature, which assembles in May, will look with favor on the committee's recommendations, to be based on studies made over a period of months.

Pakistan Requests U.N. Council Meet

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Pakistan accused India Saturday of planning a new offensive and asked the U.N. Security Council for prompt action to bolster the Sept. 22 cease-fire.

Pakistani Ambassador Amjad Ali stated his government's position in a letter formalizing its request for an urgent meeting of the 11-nation council.

Uruguayan Sen. Hector Paysse Reyes, council president for October, was consulting the other members formally on the idea of calling the meeting for 4 p.m. Monday. He claimed he already had their informal agreement to that on the basis of Pakistan's earlier oral request for the meeting.

Ambassador Ali's letter was sent Friday night and made public Saturday. It asked that the president call an urgent meeting immediately to consider a "grave and rapidly deteriorating situation between India and Pakistan" and "to take prompt action to implement" the council's Sept. 20 cease-fire resolution.

Ali said the cease-fire that both sides agreed to for Sept. 22 had suffered virtual collapse because of total disregard by India of the letter and spirit" of the resolution.

"We have evidence to show," he said, "that India is planning to launch a major offensive against our northern salient in Rajasthan, which would inevitably compel Pakistan to take necessary countermeasures."

He accused India of carrying on a "campaign of genocide," or group extermination, against Kashmiris on the Indian part of divided, disputed Kashmir. He said that and the Indian arrest of "all popular leaders" there was "bound to have immediate repercussions on peace between India and Pakistan."

Ali noted that U.N. Secretary-General U Thant earlier this week pronounced the cease-fire "precarious."

He said that while Pakistan had agreed to Thant's Oct. 13 proposal for Indiana-Pakistan talks on arrangements for withdrawal of forces behind the cease-fire line, India had sought to impose conditions.

Indian Ambassador Golapaswami Parthasarathi, meanwhile, in a letter to Thant sent Friday night and published Saturday, accused Pakistani troops of 28 "cease-fire violations and other incidents" early this week, including the burning of a village in Rajasthan.

Neither ambassador answered a proposal, Thant made Friday night for sending Brazilian Maj. Gen. Syseno Sarmento to India and Pakistan for talks on withdrawal.

India previously had agreed to take part in withdrawal talks only after the cease-fire had been "effectively established."

Pakistan had agreed to such talks without conditions but said the only way to get effective cease-fire and withdrawals was to give the job to "a commission of the Security Council located in this area."

Pakistan has spoken of having Britain, France, the Soviet Union and the United States on the commission. But India is against the whole idea.

Nevertheless, Pakistani Foreign Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto is expected to bring it up when the council meets — and Indian Foreign Minister Swaran Singh is expected to turn it down publicly.

Pakistan would like the commission to seek settlement of the Kashmir dispute.

Pakistan wants the dispute settled through a plebiscite by which Kashmiris would choose between Indian and Pakistani rule, because she thinks they would choose Pakistan. India now refuses the plebiscite she once agreed to because she holds that Kashmir has become undetachable Indian territory.

Probers To Lift KKK Sheet

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congressional investigators hope to use a chain reaction of confession next week to lift the sheet of secrecy from the Ku Klux Klan in South Carolina and Georgia.

A list of witnesses was waiting Saturday to testify before the House Committee on Un-American Activities on the workings of the United Klans of America Inc., and how it operates in the two states.

Committee rules prevented disclosure of the identity of the witnesses before they go on the stand. But the list includes both Klan members and "outsiders."

The Klan faced another possible blow — this one outside Congress. It was reported the Federal Communications Commission may cancel the KKK's licenses to operate citizens' band short wave radios. A Klan front known as the Alabama Rescue Service told the commission it was operating an "emergency rescue" service.

But the committee said the Klan used the short wave equipment to monitor police broadcasts, then used the information gleaned from the broadcasts to direct Klansmen in efforts to intimidate Negroes and civil rights workers.

The FCC regulations can revoke licenses if they were obtained on false premises or are used for illegal purposes. The case of the Klan is now under investigation.

Before throwing its spotlight on South Carolina and Georgia, probably on Wednesday, the committee will finish up with North Carolina.

North Carolina occupied most of the committee's interest this week as the panel started public hearings on the secret organization. It got no cooperation from Klansmen. All of them took refuge in the 5th Amendment.

It did, however, hear a great deal about Klan activities — and alleged threats — from a colorful lay preacher who quit the organization about a month ago. It was also supplied with documents from a local "Klavern" by a used car dealer who electrified the hearing by resigning from the Klan while seated in the witness chair.

Introduced into the record was a sizable amount of evidence gathered by committee investigators and with which the committee hopes to prove that high ranking Klan officials are using money collected from Klan members and sympathizers for their own personal comforts.

The committee chairman, Edwin E. Willis, D-La., said Saturday he was "entirely satisfied" with the progress of the hearings so far.

Willis and other members have indicated they feel sure that the 5th Amendment does not permit a witness to refuse to produce subpoenaed documents that are not personal but connected with the official position he might hold.

"Their goose is cooked, they're going to jail," one committee source predicted.

Parish Medical Society Slates 3-Day Seminar

A three-day seminar on medicine and religion, planned by the Ouachita Parish Medical Society and the Twin Cities Ministerial Alliances, will begin Monday in Enaut Hall in St. Francis Hospital.

According to Don Wineinger, chaplain of Glenwood Hospital, the seminar is designed to offer a medium for the physicians and clergymen of all faiths to consider together some areas of concern to both professions.

"It is expected that the three daily lectures by these two visiting authorities will stimulate deep discussion between these two separate, helping professions," Wineinger said.

Guest speakers at the seminar will be Dr. T. A. Watters, clinical professor of psychiatry at LSU, and Robert E. Estheridge, staff member of the Department of Medicine and Religion of the American Medical Association, Chicago.

Included in the topics for discussion are "Religion and Medicine United," "Counseling with Disturbed People," "Facing the Problems of Grief," and "Problems in Prolonging life."

SINGING MUSIC of Richard Rodgers here Monday night will be Joanne Wheatley and Hal Kanner, husband and wife team, who both were at one time members of the Fred Waring Show on radio and television. Miss Wheatley is a Phi Beta Kappa and holds the master's degree in sociology, as well as being possessor of a beautiful voice. Kanner, one-time member of the "Modernaires," has served as arranger and conductor for many TV shows. They are among the featured vocalists for "Music of Richard Rodgers," the Northeast State Concerts Association presentation to be held at Neville High School Auditorium. Concert time is 8:15 p.m. Admission is by season membership only.

Concerts Season Opens On Monday

The Northeast State Concerts Association opens its sell - out season of musical entertainment Monday night with what promises to be a delightful program of "The Music of Richard Rodgers."

Performing the works of one of the nation's most versatile composers will be Richard Hayman and his Orchestra, and vocalists Elaine Malbin, William Metcalf, Joanne Wheatley and Hall Kanner.

The concert is set for 8:15 p.m. at Neville High School auditorium. Admission is by season membership only.

The program will feature some of the best music from the pen of Rodgers. It underscores such rewarding musical experiences as "Victory at Sea," written for television, and "Slaughter on Tenth Avenue," written for ballet.

Of course, the perennial Broadway show favorites of Rodgers and those written with his collaborators, Hart and Hammerstein, will be heard in plentiful number through this gala evening of entertainment.

Orchestra and singers bring to the Monroe stage talent that is well known. Hayman did arranging for such Hollywood musical hits as "Meet Me in St. Louis" and "State Fair." He later joined the Vaughn Monroe Show as featured soloist and arranger. After four years with Monroe, he began scoring music for Mercury Records. His arrangement of "Ruby" soared to the top of every hit parade across the country.

The latter success resulted in his appointment as Mercury's artist and repertoire chief in New York. In this capacity he directed the recording activities of such stars as Patti Page, Ralph Marterie and Vic Damone.

Since 1954 he has been guest conductor and arranger for the Boston Pops Orchestra.

Of the singers scheduled to appear here Monday night, one of the best known is operatic star Elaine Malbin, who made a Town Hall debut at 14 and became a staff singer of NBC radio at 16. She starred on such programs as "Serenade to to America" and "Music America Loves Best."

She has scored consistently in all media, most notably during a series of performances in television operas. She also has performed on stage with some of the nation's best known opera companies, and has been equally at home on Broadway, including starring roles in such shows as "My Darlin' Adia" and "Kismet."

Miss Malbin enjoys musical versatility, ranging from supper club engagements to concert appearances with major symphony orchestras.

Joanne Wheatley and Hal Kanner are a husband-and-wife team, each with varied show biz backgrounds.

A Phi Beta Kappa at Occidental College in California, Joanne was popular as a collegiate singer and entertainer there. But she chose to continue her studies in sociology and went on to earn the master's degree at Columbia University. Singing won out, however, as she turned to music and won a spot with Fred Waring as soloist on his radio and television shows.

Kanner, a New Yorker by birth, was a performer as a child, orchestra leader in his teens, member of the well known "Modernaires," and organized his own group known as "Two Bees and a Honey," which was a leading feature on the Fred Waring Show for several years. He has also been creator of numerous radio and television commericals, and arranger and conductor for many of the nation's biggest stars.

KKK Leader Calls Probe 'Persecution'

WASHINGTON, Ga. (AP)—A Ku Klux Klan leader charged Saturday night the congressional investigation of his group was political persecution and called for a probe of the Communist party in the United States.

"It's nothing but political persecution because we voted for Barry Goldwater," shouted Calvin F. Craig of Atlanta, the Georgia grand dragon of the United Klans.

"And praise God we would do it again if he was running tomorrow," he said.

Craig, who returned Saturday from a trip to Los Angeles, said plans would be made to hold a Klan rally next Saturday night at nearby Lincolnton where Negroes have been trying to organize demonstrations against segregation.

"If they don't have me in jail, I'll be back down to Lincolnton next Saturday," said Craig who has been subpoenaed to appear next week before the House Committee on Un-American Activities in Washington.

Craig told an estimated 500 persons who stood in a chilly breeze in front of the courthouse that Klan leaders have refused to answer questions before the House committee because thy feel that an attempt is being made to persecute the organization.

Referring to the acquittal of an Alabama Klansman in a civil believe a Negro can get a fair trial in Wilkes County, but are we American people, members of the Ku Klux Klan, getting a fair trial today in Washington, D.C.? I say, no, we are not."

Streets Project Underway In City Of Homer

HOMER (Special)—Resurfacing of 2.6 miles of streets in Homer got underway here over the weekend by district forces of the Louisiana Department of Highways, applying asphalt to several streets.

The state will provide the equipment and labor to resurface 2.658 miles of streets with bitumous penetration. All materials asphalt and gravel will be furnished by the town. The project has been assigned a number 714-12-29.

Portions of 11 Homer streets are included in the program: Lyons Hill, Hill Street, West Fourth, South Fourth, McCasland, East Third, East Fourth, South Fourth, North Fifth and North Third.

These streets are to be surfaced with a emulsified type of asphalt, which can be used in cool weather, and which does not bleed as much as some other types of asphalt.

Rent Subsidy To Be Submitted Again In 1966

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Denouncing "the old voices of doubt and misunderstanding" that killed his $30 million rent subsidy program, President Johnson told Congress he will resubmit the controversial proposal next January.

"I am confident that the Congress will cut through the propaganda of fear and mistrust to provide shelter for the families who need it now — today," Johnson said. "We who have raised up hopes have the duty to bring them to tangible reality."

Johnson's statement, made public by the White House Saturday, was sent to the House and Senate Friday night shortly before adjournment. It accompanied an annual report on the Housing and Home Finance Agency, which Johnson transmitted to Congress as required by law.

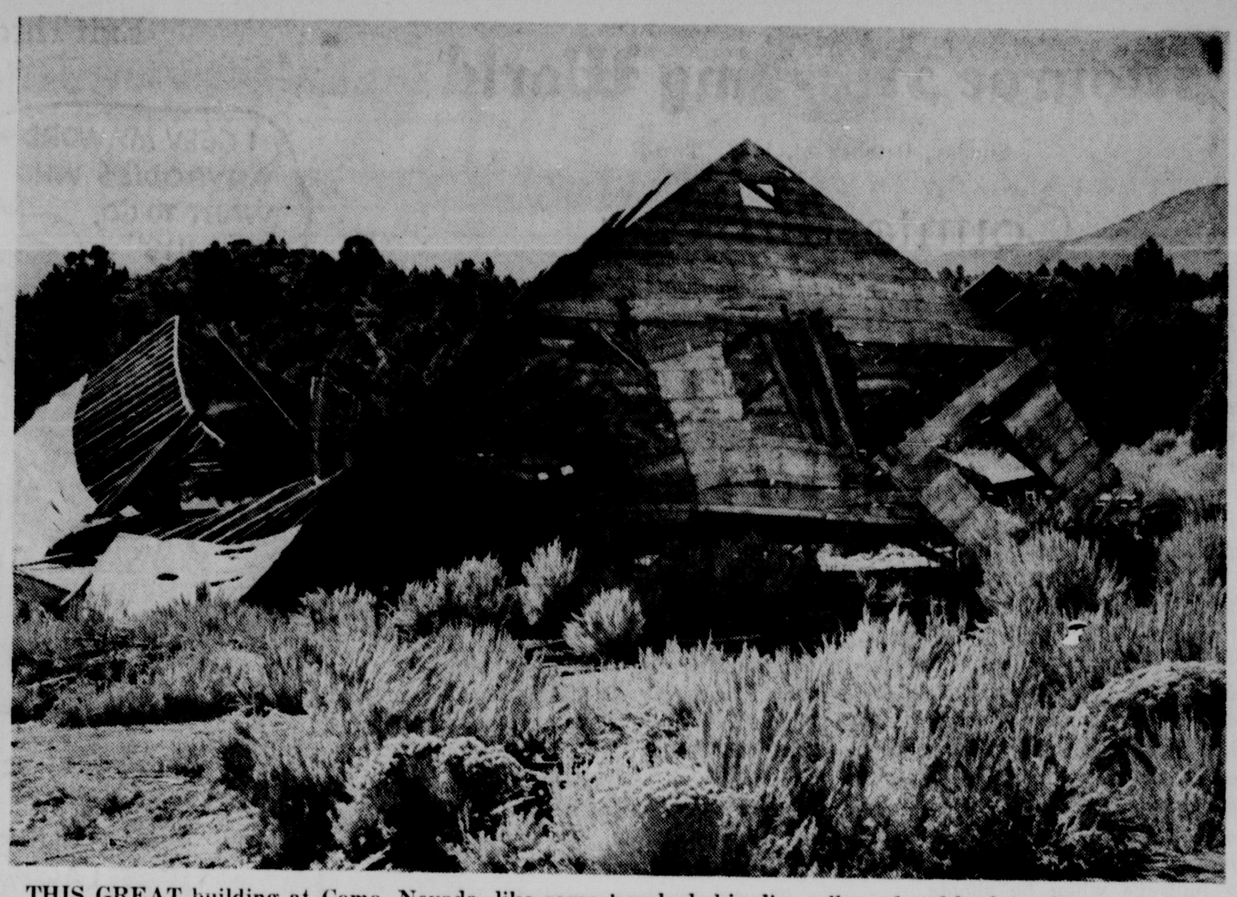
THE PEOPLE of Bodie, Calif., met socially and held their dances in the Union Miner's Hall, the second building from the right, and it was here that Lottie Johl, a butcher's wife from the "wrong side of town," was ushered out into the street when the people of the town discovered who she was at a masquerade ball. Now Lottie's paintings hang in the building and her tormentors are dead, as she is, buried in the cemetery a few blocks away.



THIS GREAT building at Como, Nevada, like some beached ship, lies collapsed and broken after studs were stolen from its framework for other buildings. It was at one time a hotel, union hall or changing building for miners, no one remembers for sure any more. Today it stands alone in a wilderness that was once a prosperous mountain top mining town of some 1,300 people. (AP Newsfeatures Photos)

Many mining towns which thrived in the west years ago now are silent, with buildings and houses in decay, and their streets deserted. In this account an Associated Press writer tells of a tour of vacated towns and recalls something of the drama in their pasts.

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Even death doesn't come to these silent towns any more.

Walk down the main street of a ghost town and feel that an unseen someone walks with you, that invisible children scamper and laugh on the boardwalk of the general store.

Step into a creaking old shack at Como, Nev., and try to read the yellowed and torn copies of Harper's Weekly that paper the walls. Sense that some white-bearded miner, long dead, resents the intrusion.

Look out on the dusty main street of Bodie, Calif., where murder came almost daily, and on the flimsiest of invitations.

To be in a ghost town alone is to visit another time, its hates and angers, its loves and frustrations, its greed and humanity, somehow still alive in the dusty skeletons of these worn buildings — a mad drama played on an empty stage by spirits — wisps and whispers you never see and barely hear.

They called Bodie the meanest town in the West — and the "bad man from Bodie" was feared wherever and whoever he was.

JAIL CELLS DARK

The cells of the jail are dark, dirty, airless and empty. A block up on Green Street is the nearly empty lot where the blacksmith shop stood — and where an A frame hoisted wagon wheels by the rim, and men by the neck.

To the east is the narrow white road that leads to Boot Hill and the cemeteries — where a fence separated the good dead from the bad dead.

Eighty miles to the north, in Como, another town where nobody lives, even the grave markers are gone.

Inside an old miner's shack the window competes with missing planks in the wall to offer a panorama of the weathered canyon, and the few broken efforts of men, pitching roofs and stone walls. They are all that remain of a town of 1,300, a county seat and a mining center that once produced millions in gold and silver.

FEW REMAIN

More than a thousand miles to the northeast, in Central Mich., empty gray buildings parade up a hillside to nowhere. It was a company town where $10 million in copper had been mined by 1898. Now the only painted building is the church. Where 1,300 people once lived, only a few families hang on.

At Dayton, Nev., where a few folks still live, the Odeon Hall and Saloon that once hosted traveling entertainment is closed; the Golden Eagle Hotel which served its first guests more than 100 years ago is shuttered and boarded up. One old timer says he likes people, but not too close, and he doesn't understand the activity of today.

Hamilton, Nev., was a town of 30,000 people in 1869, produced a flood of silver, kept 23 lawyers and 101 saloons busy. Today it is a shell of a town, and its stone buildings hollow shells also.

Why do towns die? Blame it on a capricious nature which leads man along a rich vein of gold, and then suddenly ends it deep in a mountain. Blame it on the cost of getting ore from the earth. Blame it on a law that tamed gold competition by setting an inflexible price on the yellow metal.

NEED PASSES

The real reason is even simpler. The gold towns of the West, the copper mines and timber camps of the North, and even the coal mining villages of the East were built to serve a need. When the need died, the towns did too.

Hundreds of fragments of towns, ghosts of towns linger on across the United States. Hundreds more have vanished completely into sagebrush and grass.

Bodie is as dead as the rest — but somehow more alive. The California rangers are fighting an uphill battle against the nail rusting, board pulling tactics of time.

In the 1870's Bodie housed some 10,000 lives. There were reputedly six murders a week on main street, countless gun battles. And they still talk about the little girl in Truckee, Calif., with this postscript:

"Goodbye God. Tomorrow we go to Bodie."

More than $100 million in gold and silver was taken from Bodie mines and built great fortunes.

The Great Standard Mill on the hill roared through the town 24 hours a day, and when it would stop, one man remembers, it would wake you from a sound sleep.

TWO PARTS

It was a town in two parts — a respectable part and a sinful part. Two great fires have swept most of the sinful part away. But on Park Street there is a sort of millionaire's row, and the homes are in some state of repair. The good citizens jealously guarded their enclave from Chinatown, a stone's throw away.

This was the section built by the imported Chinese laborers, complete to its own temple or Joss house and an idol of Confucious. There were opium dens, stores and the puny shacks that housed the Chinese. There was also the red light district.

Pneumonia was the scourage of Bidie where winter snows, driven by 70 mile per hour winds, piled up 200 inches high.

But for the children, when the snows would fill the 8,300 foot high valley, death was more often diphtheria. And a casual look at the small markers in the cemetery will tell when the epidemic struck. "Nathan Cook, son of Catherine C. and Nathan H. Gregory. Born Jan. 12, 1887. Died Sept. 22, 1890. Suffer little children to come unto me."

SAGEBRUSH

Chinatown now is little more than a vacant, wind blown sagebrush knoll. But it was once the noisy, bustling marketplace. A 16 year old Indian girl named "Pretty Maggie" came there with a $15 gold bonanza she had panned from the mine waste. She dreamed of buying a silk kerchief for her hair.

Before long, she found jewelry as well as silk, in the store of Tong Sing Wo, and before long she was part of this strange picture, wandering in an opium daze among the faro and fan tan players and opium smokers on the second and third floors.

She was abandoned when the town dried up, and searched the hills for opium. She died, they say, from eating a poisonous weed she thought was the opium she craved.

She is one of Bodie's ghosts now. So is Lottie Johl.

Eli Johl was a butcher, a rough man who met Lottie in Chinatown. He married her, but the social elite of the town would never accept her, especially Annie Donnelly, wife of Johl's partner.

Eli prevailed on Lottie to take up painting — to be as good as Annie, but no one would look at her paintings.

At a masked ball, Lottie wore a white satin dress that Eli had bought in San Francisco, and she almost won the costume prize until she unmasked. Shocked at her presence, they asked her to leave.

When she died, they were going to make Eli bury her outside the cemetery fence. He was finally allowed a plot inside — at the far end of the cemetery. Often he would dress the grave with flowers and bunting and a large portrait of Lottie, and stand there all day to spite the town.

RULES OF BODIE

Even though she had been respectably married on the right side of town for more than 13 years, Lottie lived and died an outcast. Such were the rules of Bodie.

The stories still seem to linger in the angular features of the town. The 601 vigilante committee is gone, but you can hear them giving troublemakers 24 hours to get out of town. You can still hear the muffled rattle of the stagecoach covering the few miles to Aurora, Nev., where Mark Twain lived, prospected and wrote. Aurora, too, is only rubble.

Bodie died slowly. In fact, there is still a fortune of gold in the ground — but it costs too much to take out. Its worst blow was when the Fortuna Ledge — a rich gold vein — faulted out, shorn off by some forgotten earthquake. Bodie gave its last whispers in the 1930s.

Most towns die slowly. Dayton, which some residents insist is the oldest settlement in Nevada, seems to fit the pattern. In fact some old timers want only to be left alone.

"That's why I bought every lot I could around here," says Deputy Sheriff Clarence Barton. "To keep people out."

"What I want here is to have peace and quiet," says Zenas Walmsley, whose mother was born up the mountain Como. "The trouble with towns today is there's so much activity."

"I like people and all," he says. "I like them to come over and visit but I don't like hundreds of them crowding all around. I like the good old days — the way it was before they had automobiles and airplanes. I just can't get used to this way of life. I just can't get used to it."

STREETS GONE

In Como, the streets are gone. In Bodie you walk the streets but the people are gone. In Dayton, you walk the streets and meet the people, but youth is gone.

Perhaps that is the progression. Bodie in its prime had two newspapers, 27 saloons, 7 breweries, a soda pop plant, at least 7 hotels, and strings of wagon trains bringing it timber and whiskey.

Today, the bank vault is all that remains of the bank. A stone foundation is all that is left of the Occidental Hotel. An outhouse marks the spot where a small boy played with matches and set half the town on fire. The Chinese temple is there, but the image of Confucious was sold to a junk dealer for 50 cents. In the Methodist church, an oil cloth painted with "Thou shalt not steal," has been stolen.

RAY WYLES, police captain, musician, singer, composer . . .

His Hopes Are Spinning

By VERNON GUIDRY
Staff Writer

A West Monroe police captain with an extensive background in musical activities has recorded a song which was composed, arranged, and sung by him. His hopes for future recordings are spinning with the current platter which has met with favorable local response.

Moving between prowl car and recording studio, West Monroe police captain Ray Wyles has set his sights on making at least a local splash in the music world that has a spindle for its axis and turns at 45 rpms.

Wyles has written, arranged, sung and is now distributing his own record on the "Kustom" label. The title of the mainliner is "Please Tell Me," and it celebrates a love affair that has somehow gone awry. Its companion piece is a last message from a father to a son and is called "Mother's Little Lad."

"Please Tell Me" is of the country and western genre that has its Mecca in Nashville, Tenn., but Wyles' broader background knocks the rough edges off the "C and W sound."

SIDEMEN

Wyles' sidemen on the record, he played electric and steel guitar, are all Twin Cities' talent called together for cutting the record. David Craighead played piano and organ; Paul Jackson, steel guitar, Hugh Pate, electric bass and Howard Hughes, rhythm guitar. Wyles doesn't read music so he worked out the arrangement then went over it for the group before the recording tapes started to roll. The whole thing took only three hours, he said.

How does one go about writing songs? "The music comes first and then the words sort of come naturally," he said. The part-time composer said that music will remain in the hobby category but that doesn't mean the records will stop. He has four songs he would like to record, depending on how the first one goes. And how is that? "Well, I ordered 1,000 and I'm having to reorder another batch. The response locally has been real good. The record's in record shops and is getting good play on the radio," Wyles said.

The song writing policeman, a 43-year-old father of five, remembers that his interest in music was first kindled when he was about 12 and his participation was in church musical activities. From there, his interest and ability grew. He found the guitar in his teens and was playing professional dates at age 17.

HAD OWN BAND

The war interrupted his musical career but he came back strong in the period that followed. He traveled the country with his own band, the Louisiana Ramblers, from 1945 until 1950. The Ramblers concentrated on country and western but also played then popular "swing," which may account for the absence of the overdone nasal wailing and twanging that mars many country and western records.

During this time, Wyles had his own radio show on a local station and made other radio appearances. In 1950, the band broke up and Wyles left music as a vocation. He joined the West Monroe force in 1953 and the guitar was shelved in favor of the service revolver. But the dormant desire to write and sing his own songs was still there, and 13 years later, "Please Tell Me" is the result.

Counter Protests

When former President Eisenhower voiced distress over campus demonstrators and draft dodgers, he set off a chorus of like-minded critics in the press, pulpit, legislative halls, private homes — and military service.

The reverberations are still audible and will no doubt remain so for some time.

The ex-President and General of the Armies of World War II celebrated his 75th birthday last week. It was during activities in his honor that he got a few things off his chest about "moral deterioration" in this country. And although one could detect a certain self-consciousness in Ike's remarks — he evidently doesn't wish to sound like an old mossback — he scores a bullseye when he shoots.

What he had to say about liberty and its preservation was laudable. "You just wonder what we're coming to when they take something as sacred as free speech and mock it by calling it Filthy Speech Movement, as those students did at Berkeley. It makes you think we have some kind of deterioration going on that ought to be fought tooth and nail.

"Those young people should begin to see that we can have maximum liberty only if we have an orderly society to guarantee liberty for all. And hopefully they should begin to appreciate that a nation is only as great as the character of its citizens.

"I believe that in things like this we are going too far from the old virtues and rules of life, rules that have been thousands of years in the making and now they are being flouted."

The old soldier was characteristically optimistic, however. "Utilmately," he says, "they'll begin to shake off these show-off habits and this nonsense of thinking that patriotism is somehow a little bit square."

Advice and suggestions to anti-war demonstrators came from another military source, perhaps more to the point than Ike's. Gen. Wallace Greene, Commandant of the Marine Corps, asked protesters to prove "their sincerity" by volunteering for civilian humanitarian programs in Southeast Asia. "Let them prove themselves as good Samaritans by crossing the road to lift up their brothers, to tend the sick, to feed the hungry, to clothe the naked, to shelter the homeless."

Throwing the gauntlet down even harder, the Commandant advised, "Let them do this first, rather than pass by on the other side of the street, with a placard on their shoulder, a song on their lips, and hypocrisy in their hearts."

Strong words, but not unexpected from a man who has seen much carnage and bloodshed in wars against tyranny.

The Marine chief recognizes that much of the protest is merely youthful action, to be endured whether we like it or not. We heartily support his crowning prediction that "this lunatic and dangerous fringe to create a real fire among the majority of our young people is bound to fail."

The demonstrations already appear to be a blessing in disguise. More thinking is being done about what the stakes are in Southeast Asia.

Is There No End?

The 1964 and 1965 so-called civil rights acts virtually gave members of the Negro race "the world with a fence around it," but apparently the end is not yet. These acts, in giving Negroes their "rights", nullified the individual rights of the other 90 per cent of this nation's population, depriving them of the right to choose their own associates. Now a proposal has been made to deprive the states of their right of trial.

A proposal that Congress take away the authority of state courts to try criminal cases involving civil rights was labeled as "astounding" by Senator Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, Senate Republican leader.

Dirksen made it clear he would fight a legislative measure of this nature. It was suggested by Joseph L. Rauh, counsel for the National Leadership Council of Civil Rights.

Rauh said civil rights leaders are considering a request to Congress next year for enactment of what he called "personal security" legislation to cap the 1964 Public Accommodations act and the 1965 voting rights bill.

Dirksen, who, regrettably, helped whip both previous civil rights acts into shape and helped provide the votes for their passage, said Rauh's proposal not only would nullify states' rights but would wipe out their traditional jurisdiction in criminal cases.

"It is an astounding proposal," he said. "It would create an amazing state of affairs by further eroding the rights of the states. If this erosion continues, there will be no state governments left."

When interviewed separately about the proposal Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana threw up his arms and exclaimed: "I've got my hands full as it is. I can take only one thing at a time." He said he could not guess whether the White House would support such a proposal.

An Associated Press news item stated:

"The general feeling in Congress is that sufficient civil rights legislation already is on the books and that it needs to be tried out before additional measures are passed.

"It seems likely, however, that the Rauh proposal will get an airing at a White House conference on Negro rights here November 17-18. President Johnson said a larger conference will be called next spring to consider recommendations that may come out of next month's meeting."

Apparently still bent on squeezing the race issue for the last drop of political benefit he may be able to get out of it, Johnson said the issue of Negro rights is "the nation's most difficult domestic problem." He said the country is entering a difficult phase in efforts to bring Negroes into full participation of national benefits and responsibilities.

It is clear that so-called civil rights legislation has already passed far beyond the bounds of reason, that it has already intruded heavily on the personal and individual rights of everyone and that any attempt by Johnson to carry it farther can hardly be described as anything less than a "Holy Grail" adventure, resembling the race issue which carried the late Adolf Hitler to a supreme dictatorship in Germany. It is difficult to see how any further attempt on the part of the administration to erode states' rights could be construed other than an attempt to nullify the Constitution under which this nation was set up and to substitute for it a completely federally ruled state.

If such a situation occurs, Negroes will suffer along with white people in a complete loss of freedom.

The first commissioner of the Southeastern Conference was the late Martin S. Conner, a former governor of Mississippi, who served from 1940 until his health forced him to resign in 1947.

The American victory at New Orleans, coming after the War of 1812 was over, had far-reaching effects, historians say. They say it hastened ratification of the peace treaty, increased the prestige of a new nation, gave Americans confidence in their military prowess and encouraged the growth of national unity.

A pundit at the Bit O' Erin Bar 'N' Grill the other night said he was an expert on some foreign country or other if he could just remember its name.

Exit Through A Graveyard

CHARLES O. GRIDLEY

Our Nation Right Or Wrong

Those Famous Words In 1816 Still True

HAS PATRIOTISM become an evanescent quality in American existence, rather than the primary conviction summed up 150 years ago by Commodore Stephen Decatur in his toast at a dinner in Norfolk:

"Our country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be right; but our country right or wrong."?

That is seldom recalled by guides showing visitors Decatur's historic house on Lafayette square in Washington, one of the few dwellings fronting the square preserved in its original form. They recall him as a naval officer who lost his life in a duel.

Only in the last quarter century of the history - making period since Decatur raised his glass in 1816 has this nation seen the growing youth reaction against military service manifested as in recent anti-Viet Nam demonstrations from New York to San Francisco.

During World War II, when only 13,000 conscientious objections to military service, of which a majority were probably sincere, were processed and approved by the selective service the evasion of the draft did not reach serious proportions.

NOW THE headquarters here lists a total of 21,000 such objectors out of a total of 30,800,000 registrants, which still is only considered serious to the extent it points the way for dishonest schemers to use the sincere conviction of those who oppose military service for religious or sectarian beliefs for draft evasion purposes.

Draft evasions were common during the Civil War when the call to forced military service was instituted on both sides, but in World War I, when it was made effective to equalize the burden of military service, "draft dodger" became a term of oppobrium and the federal government cracked down promptly on the evaders.

The current coast to coast demonstrations were not ostensibly directed at the draft, but they followed the pattern of other demonstrations which has become common in this country in recent years. The draft, however, is at the heart of agitation against the South Viet Nam military operation fermented by several loosely connected opposition groups.

THE TASK OF ascertaining whether a central leadership directs these fanatic outbursts has fallen to the FBI, which has been busy under Department of Justice orders on racial matters in the South, where the type of so - called "student uprising" which swept many northern cities and campuses has occurred in only isolated instances.

One instance were a possible Communist connection appeared was at the University of Wisconsin where Eugene Dennis Jr., son of the former head of the Communist party in the U.S. was an officer of the W.E.B. Du Bois Club, cited by the FBI as the principal youth branch of the Communist party. Dennis was reportedly removed from his position by the party after failure of a Get-out-of-Viet Nam teach-in, which student counter pickets broke up. Young Dennis is still a regional director of the DuBois society.

What the FBI aims at is to track down the individuals or groups that are telling those of draft age how to avoid the draft, an offense punishable by five years in jail and $10,000 fine. The same penalty was recently extended to destruction of draft cards.

SENATOR John Stennis (Dem.-Miss.) ranking member of the Senate Armed Services committee, which has already conducted its own investigations, says the Students for a Democratic Society, a radical group, with many tentacles, which has fomented many of the demonstrations is chiefly responsible.

Its purpose, he says, is to "jam the draft boards with objections and cause the government to spend thousands of dollars in investigations and paper work" which would slow up the draft, and stimulate opposition to it.

The gestures against our Viet Nam operation are not confined to campuses, however, Arthur Miller, a well known playwright, more widely known as the former husband of the late unfortunate actress, Marilyn Monroe, sent a crude refusal to President Johnson of an invitation to attend the signing of the Arts and Humanities bill, citing his opposition to American forces in Viet Nam.

MANY OTHERS of some importance in various fields have joined the "Get Out of Viet Nam" movement, but thus far the FBI has not said that it has found the long arm of Communism reaching into the groups which foster it. That may come later.

In a country where audiences rise spontaneously at the playing of the National Anthem, and a considerable number remember to take off their hats when they pass or are passed by the American flag, the decline of patriotism evidenced by the scattered student outbursts against a foreign policy of the government is not necessarily cause for dismay.

Nevertheless, Stephen Decatur's admonition has the same meaning it had when he uttered it. The reaction of patriotic student groups which roughed up the Viet Nam exhibitionists doesn't draw much criticism from those who still believe in America.

American Youth Being Damaged

A SMALL but vocal group of so-called professors and educators has been egging on one of the ugliest and most dangerous movements ever to attempt the seduction of American youth. Intimidated by cries of "academic freedom" and "witch hunt," university authorities have sat back and allowed this perversion of the educational process to go unchallenged. By this, they have permitted the proliferation of obscenely anti-American groups.

This is the shame of the universities. They have capitulated to the unthinking and the unwashed — even as in the liberal mythology they were said to have bowed to "big business."

American education will suffer from this submission to the forces of ideological irrationality. But for the sake of the record, let us look at some of the witches which — to the horror of the academics — the Justice Department is now investigating.

Are the groups participating in the disruption of American education and the willful sabotage of a country at war just a spontaneous and exuberant outcropping of youthful irreverence? Or are the Students for a Democratic Society, the crypto - Communist W. E. B. DuBois Clubs, the pro-Peking Progressive Labor Movement, the Young Socialist Alliance, and the Student Non - Violent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) well-financed and cynically motivated organizations?

THE MOST notable aspect of the present teach-ins, riots, demonstrations, and other outbursts is that they are very well financed. While conservative groups must scratch for support, the anti-Americans can spend $15,000 for a single teach-in at Berkeley. Several months ago, when disorderly demonstrations in Washington led to arrests, $6,070.90 in payment of fines showed up immediately. The October 15 - 16 demonstrations against the fight for South Vietnamese freedom were prepared for months in advance at a cost of at least $3,000 a month.

Since most of the demonstrators are students — and since their faculty supporters have pleaded for years that they are poor as church mice — the question arises: Who has been supplying the money for activities on most American campuses, for sudden blitzes on the White House by young people from all over the country, for the masses of printed propaganda, for the public address systems and buses and organizing committees? To ask it is to answer it.

ARE THE leaders of the demonstrations and their feverish followers young idealists who hate war? Surveys show that they support war against "fascists" and "reactionaries," but are violently opposed to any military action against Communists. The pundits and the academics have contributed to this kind of double - think, but it has gone far beyond the queasy quibbles you hear on TV and read in liberal publications.

And what do these non-witches, being hunted and persecuted by our government and presumably by college authorities too, really think? Clark Kissinger, national secretary of SDS, says his starting point was "a contempt for American society" which he saw as "depraved." Paul Potter, former president of SDS, says of the Vietnamese war, "The only freedom we are defending there is the freedom of the Pentagon vultures." The audience applauded when Conrad Lynn, of the Castroite Fair Play for Cuba Committee, speaking at Yale, reported that several of his fellow Negroes had gone to North Viet Nam to join Communist troops now fighting American soldiers and Marines.

IN THE Washington demonstrations of last August, already mentioned, tables were set up to enlist "pacifists" in the Viet Cong, the Communist guerrillas in South Viet Nam now killing Americans. This repeated the efforts of a professor at the University of California who was wildly applauded by the idealists when he also urged his "non - violent" audience to join the Viet Cong — and compared its murder-and-run fighters to the heroes of the American Revolution.

Do they want free speech? When General Maxwell Taylor arrived in San Francisco to speak on Viet Nam at the staid Commonwealth Club, his car was attacked by the "free speech" contingent, he was unable to get to his room at the hotel, and he was constantly heckled as he spoke. Free speech, obviously, is guaranteed in the Beatnik Constitution only to enemies of the United States.

Perhaps a few prosecutions by the Federal government will cool off some of those who seem to feel that it's good, clean fun to give aid and comfort to the enemy. But the real and lasting solution can come only when an aroused public, forgetting the permissive tolerance we have been told is so noble, informs the universities that treason is not a matter of taste.

WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY

Much To Probe In Protest Groups

MR. J. EDGAR Hoover has warned that the Communists are doing everything they can to penetrate the Viet Nam protest groups, and no doubt they have greatly succeeded in doing so already. The Attorney General, Mr. Katzenbach, has announced his intention of exploring the ties between the Communist Party and the Students for a Democratic Society. In New York, the Haryou Act anti-poverty program is said to have been infiltrated by revolutionists allied to the Chinese Communist schismatics of the Progressive Labor Movement.

A great deal, here, to investigate, and we should welcome the Attorney General's active curiosity about the role the Communists are playing in the various peace movements. Certainly it is clear from the slogans of the Vietnamese peacemakers that they seem for the most part to be concerned about military action only when Communists are likely to be at the receiving end of it. I doubt, for instance, if one of the ten thousand souls who rallied in New York City to protest military action against South Viet Nam, would appear at a rally to protest military action against, say South Africa. There is no doubt that they are on a left - wing wave length, and it is correct that the government should attempt to ascertain just how servile the protesters are, just how they are being utilized, just how wild they are willing to go if the plot-masters turn on the dials at full volume.

BY ALL MEANS, let the investigations go forward. But let us not relapse into the hope that the Communist hydra having been isolated, the movement will entirely collapse. It won't, of course, for the reason that although undoubtedly it is the Communists who do most of the effective organizing, and here and there come forward with the crucial few dollars to rent the auditorium, or to pay Norman Mailer's commutation ticket to Berkeley, California, there are others who are involved in the protests who are not Communists, or Communist sympathizers. And I am not at the moment thinking of the pure pacifists, like the deluded young man who, having fallen under the otherworldly influence of Miss Dorothy Day, went out and burnt up his draft card as though he were in a hypnotic trance. There is emerging another type — a sort of a deracinated nihilist, who gravitates to any iconoclastic activity, as a moth to a flame.

ONE SUCH, for instance, is Conor Cruise O'Brien, the Irish intellectual who can't really stand anybody but himself, for whom he has the most loquacious regard. He is a man of letters, and an adventurer of sorts. He was with the UN for a while, dashing around the world for Hammarskjold, and trafficking in military secrets, diplomatic ultimatums, and exhilarating intrigue. In due course he was booted out, while serving in Katanga, and gave the reputation of withdrawing in Mophistophelian glee because he left Katanga in flames. From there he went into service to Nkrumah, as Chancellor of the University of Ghana, which is presumably dedicated to the notion that Nkrumah is God. Conor O'Brien is the kind of person who would sooner uphold the proposition that Nkrumah is divine, than that Christ was. His idea of cool.

He left, and accepted an appointment at New York University, into which he had barely checked before going off to Berkeley to mind America's business in South Viet Nam.

O'Brien is an idological swashbuckler, a nose - tweaker who doesn't know the bounds of taste, or care much for the hurt he inflicts. He is most likely not a Communist, although he does their work for them. And he is not unique, although he is brighter than most. Mario Savio would fall, I think, into that category, and I can think of others. It would be helpful for Mr. Katzenbach or Mr. Hoover, and for the House Committee on Un-American Activities, to give some evidence of their knowledge that such as these exist. And helpful , too, if those who seek to vitiate the influence of the demonstrators were to reflect on the different kinds of birds and beasts that show up in the protest groups.

BARRY GOLDWATER

Birch Group Not A GOP Problem

THE JOHN Birch Society is not a Republican problem.

There isn't a single Birch Society member in a policy-making position in the Republican Party.

The party has not been influenced by Birch policies, and it never will be.

There are Republicans, of course, who belong to the John Birch Society. I hope they will either change the leadership and direction of the society or leave it and devote full time to the Republican cause instead. I've been working toward that end for years, and anyone who suggests my recent repetition of that position is new just hasn't been paying attention.

I am convinced there are just as many Democrats as Republicans in the society, but have we heard the Democrats trying to do anything about it? Not on your life. If there's a vote involved, we won't hear a peep.

THE KU KLUX Klan is another interesting example. That organization is probably 99 per cent Democrat, but you don't hear them talking about extremism.

Democrats actually are promoting a form of political extremism on the left that does just what the leader of the Birchers, Robert Welch, has done. Democrats not only haven't taken a stand on their Bircher colleagues, but also they are pulling a Welch on their own.

Remember when Welch accused President Eisenhower of being a conscious "tool" of the Communists? Absurd, wasn't it? That's when I began publicly to oppose Welch. Now the Democrats have done the same thing in reverse. They are officially supporting an organization which publishes a blacklist lumping Dwight Eisenhower right along with members of the American Nazi Party. The Democrat National Committee has contributed $10,000 to the support of an organization called Group Research, Inc., and its national chairman has issued a letter soliciting support for this company.

What does the outfit do? It publishes a list of supposed extremists which is widely used, particularly by union leaders and Democrat officials, as a blacklist. Anyone whose name appears on it is supposed to be attacked.

Whom does it list? Along with Nazi, known anti-Semites and other actual extremist it lists former Presidents Hoover, and Eisenhower, Douglas MacArthur and even such Democrats as Tom Dodd, the anti-Communist senator from Connecticut. Its approach is just as crude and distorted as was Robert Welch's when he accused Mr. Eisenhower.

Sen. Thruston Morton, who agrees that the Democrats are the ones with a real house-cleaning problem, has done yeoman service in pointing to this extremism of the left and reminding us that it poses an even more substantial threat than the extremism of the right. The point is simple: the extremists of the right do not have any influence on any major political party. But the extremists of the left are both influential with and supported by the Democrats.

The most flagrant example is the ADA, whose former vice chairman is now Vice President Hubert Humphrey. Imagine what would happen if a Bircher were elected Vice President by Republicans! But ADA is just as radical on the left, and it obviously has great influence, whereas the Birchers have not.

Extremism? It's time Republicans stopped having such a guilt complex on that score. They don't deserve it. It's the Democrats who have the real problem. Let's hear from them for a change.

SUNDAY POEM

Lend a hand to one another
In the daily toil of life;
When we meet a weaker brother,
Let us help him in the strife.
There is none so rich but may,
In his turn, be forced to borrow.
And the poor man's lot today
May become our own tomorrow.

LETTER FROM VIET NAM

One of the most vivid descriptions of a battle that we've read in a long time was contained in a letter from Sgt. Leslie C. Clark, who is with the Army in South Viet Nam, to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie H. Clark of Monroe.

Here are some of the highlights of the letter about the battle which demonstrates very emphatically what our servicemen are going through over there, while radical student groups in this country are allowed to protest at will, burn their draft cards and some professors in colleges and universities are permitted to teach outright support for the Viet Cong and communism:

"We left base camp — days ago. We went in helicopters to some valley that at first sight was pretty. There were palm and coconut trees all in it and many rice paddies . . . This place had the most peaceful look I've ever seen. The first day we just started moving up the valley — very slowly and cautiously. We went through the coconut groves and burned every hut we came to. The only people we saw or captured the first day was an old woman who looked like she was about 90 years old and who was so scared of us she kept crying and getting down on her knees and clasping her hands and I guess begging for mercy. We didn't hurt her and never had any idea of hurting her. We just sent her back to where we got off the choppers. About 30 minutes later the lead elements in the company saw several people get in their holes (I think I told you how these people dig tunnels all over the place). Our company executive officer had the Vietnamese soldier with us to tell them to come out. A real young woman came out with three small children. We had seen 2 more people go into the hole, but they would not come out. Our officer dropped 2 grenades in the hole on top of them and we kept going. That is all that happened the first day. That night we returned to the rear area and set up our own defense perimeter in the rice paddies. About 1 a.m. it started raining. I stayed dry for about 30 minutes. It rained from then on, except for about 10 hours, for the entire five days. It finally got so that we didn't try to stay dry. By daylight the first night I was in about 3 inches of water. The insects had been going steady all night and my ankles and legs itched something terrible . . . After about 30 minutes of scratching I decided to find out what was causing it. It was leeches. I had 2 on my right ankle and 5 on my left ankle and leg. Somehow they had gotten in my trousers and had made a bloody mess. They gave us trouble the rest of the time and they caused several people to get wounded because they didn't want to get down in the rice paddies and mud and leeches. I took my boots off this afternoon (we are back in base camp now) for the first time in five days and my feet looked dead.

"The second day out we had one man in the company killed. He was shot in the neck by a sniper. He wasn't in my unit. We also had a man shot in the arm and one in the chest. The third day was the day we caught hell. We had set up another camp in the paddies and were running patrols across the stream and trying to reach the mountains on the other side of the paddies. The company tried to cross the paddies but the VC were dug in at the base of the mountains and on the mounds of dirt called islands in the middle of the paddies and kept us from even getting out of the stream's bed. We withdrew and called in the artillery and they hit the area for about 30 minutes. Then about 15 gun ships (helicopters armed with rockets) shot up the area for 30 minutes and then they called an air strike for about 60 minutes. Then artillery hit again. After all of this we moved upon the stream banks and prepared to assault the islands and mountains. My unit was to provide rear security for the two assault companies. We were to move to the left up the stream and keep any VC's from attacking the rear. We started moving up the left side of the stream as the two companies started the assault and were about half-way to the objective when we got hit, as we were easing up the bottom of the stream. About that time our sergeant — he was one man in front of me — screamed "I'm hit" and I heard for the first time the unmistakable and terrifying sound a bullet makes when fired at you — not a bang or boom like when you fire a rifle, but a sharp crack or pop. It sounds like popcorn popping, only much louder and you never hear the sound of the rifle — only the crack of the bullet. The sergeant had been hit in the leg by a .50 calibre machine gun. I've never been so afraid in my life. I can't express all the feelings I had and thoughts I thought when they opened up on us. I know there was so much noise from our weapons and theirs that is was — well indescribable. Everybody was screaming and trying to find where the fire was coming from, but it was so heavy we couldn't get up long enough to pinpoint anything. I got behind a stump and would get on my knees and lean out to fire a round and get back down. Once I got out and fired and when I got back behind the stump 3 rounds tore into the ground where I had just been. I shake when I think about it now, but at the time it didn't faze me. It was like I wasn't me, but a machine. The reasoning part of me was saying why am I here and how can I get out of here and the rest of me just kept fighting. Why I don't know. Later the dirty . . . came up on the stream banks and started shooting and throwing grenades on us. One man had the magazine shot out of his weapon. A bullet hit some grenades near me and only God kept them from exploding in my side. A grenade did go off between me and another man and dazed both of us for a second."

Sergeant Clark went on to explain how several were wounded and some killed. He wrote that a bullet hit "my steel pot" and said if the round had been an inch lower "it would have hit me right behind my right eye."

"The pot has about a ½ inch dent in it and the first chance I get I am going to send it home. It saved my life. At least I know I killed one Viet Cong," Clark wrote. "He was about 6 or 7 feet in front of me and about 2 feet above me. I don't guess he saw me. I just fired 5 or 6 rounds into the bush with my .45. I heard a scream and he stopped shooting. By this time the assault companies realized they were going the wrong way and came back to help us. After they went in and cleared out the area as much as they could — which wasn't much."

After that, Clark said the companies pulled back. He wrote three were killed and 30 wounded and "we thought they would bring us back to base camp."

Instead, the next morning they were ordered back in "and our morale went even lower," he wrote.

"I don't know what happened but the VCs had left the area," Clark said. "Everything was so quiet it was unreal. There were dead VCs all over the place — I think about 60 or 70.

"We got out this morning and back to base camp. They told us they had found evidence of 2 battalions of Hard Core VC regular Army troops had been in the area."

The letter was dated October 14.

FROM BASTROP

James G. Holt of Bastrop sent in a note the past week, along with a poem on football and higher education.

Wrote Mr. Holt: "I thought this might be of some interest for your Sunday column. I am an ardent football fan, so I feel somewhat guilty in sending it to you. However, we must accept the American conception of the football star if we are to generate any humor in the situation."

Called Higher Education, this is the way it goes:

"His grades are C minus in the college of his choice.
But oh upon the football field he makes his school rejoice.
His math is pretty spotty —his English is dim.
But listen to the thousands, cheering just for him.
He knows little of Will Shakespeare and less of Johnnie Keats.
But watch the potent churning of flashing football cleats.
He thinks Einstein is a bookie and Rutherford a town,
But when he's got the football he's mighty hard to down.
To him the word "humanities" is just another word,
But see him slash into the line like Excalibur the sword.
His mind is pretty soggy but on the field he is a poet,
And stirs up deep emotions in the bosom of each co-ed.
The football coach adores him and the president is proud,
And oh, he is the darling of the vagrant football crowd.
With mind so dim and skill so high, his future we intrigue,
Oh, he'll make a million dollion dollars in a professional football league
If he puts in four good years without any erudition,
We wonder what in heck's the aim of higher education."

AIN'T IT SO — God grants liberty only to those who love it, and are always ready to guard and defend it — Webster.

Twin Cities Week In Review

Japanese Comet, Jurors Watched

By RICHARD TYLER
World Staff Writer

The Twin Cities joined the world last week in eyeball-straining, mostly in vain, for even the barest peep at that elusive Ikeya-Seki comet. But the area had a fiery display of its own — a visible one — as the Ouachita Parish Police Jury met.

First seen by the two Japanese astronomers whose names it bore, Ikeya-Seki dashed into the solar system, looped the sun and rushed away, devious as any Oriental, unseen by millions, including yours truly.

TYLER

As it turned out, to see the comet, one required virtually a seat in the crow's-nest of the "Pequod," 1,500 leagues at sea on the Indian Ocean. The jury was closer at hand and easier understood.

In brief, jurors reversed themselves from a decision of the week before on the distribution among the 10 wards of blacktop tax funds. A more liberal split which would have placed some $25,000 additional into Ward Three was withdrawn, and the former system, favoring Ward Five, reinstituted.

Architect of the 12-6 vote that knocked the props from Ward Three was John Wilhite, Ward One. It was his motion that "all action on blacktopping be rescinded and 1966 revenues be allocated in the same manner as 1965." Wilhite previously voted for a 12-way division with double parts to Wards Three and Five.

Ward Three's Curtis Joiner, who initiated the former action for a "more favorable split," was left pledging, "You haven't heard the last of this," and noting privately that he should've brought a bucket and asked for the money in cash after the first vote.

One of the 12 backers two weeks ago of Ward Three's claim, Robert Downing, Ward 10, said the new vote "smacks of undercover operations."

At this writing, however, the original distribution plan again is in effect — an 11-way slicing of the proceeds, which in 1964 amounted to approximately $280,000, and two slices to Ward Five.

HOT ITEM

Jurors at the same meeting Monday night dealt with another hot — literally hot — item, in the matter of providing rural fire protection, while revenues from a tax passed in September are awaited.

They voted to continue at least until Nov. 9 the employment of seven off-duty city firemen for operation of the parish's lone truck, though other developments during the week modified the plan somewhat, west of the Ouachita River.

Maximum operating expenses for the period were ceilinged at $450 a week. It will be early 1967 before tax funds to maintain and equip the full four-station protection plan approved by voters become available.

The other developments spoken of, occurred Tuesday night in West Monroe when that city's aldermen agreed to allow their firemen to extinguish rural west Ouachita blazes, using municipal equipment — this until Dec. 31. The parish would share in labor costs, as well as compensate the city per running and standing mile on its trucks.

The arrangement, however, pends ratification by the police jury and a special meeting of jurors was set for the purpose next Tuesday. The agreement was fashioned by representatives of a jury - appointed Citizens Fire Study Committee.

After the first of the year, the plan calls for providing a parish truck to West Monroe, with the parish meeting labor costs only. All is contingent on no damage resulting to West Monroe's insurance rating.

For the time being, the off-duty firemen will continue answering alarms east of the river.

COLLEGE COLUMN

As has happened frequently in recent weeks, significant news flowed so freely from Northeast Louisiana State College as almost to justify a College Column.

Among the items were Homecoming, class elections, new instructional and other physical facilities, and accreditation.

In first position perhaps, from a monetary standpoint, was the $1,025,000 contract award in Baton Rouge for a new science and foreign language building. Let by the State Bond & Building Commission to Jesse F. Heard & Sons of West Monroe, the contract was the first under Gov. John McKeithen's $35 million bond program for state institutional construction.

More good news came later when a $216,713.68 bid was accepted for construction of a traffic bridge across Bayou DeSiard extending from Hippolite Street. It was one of a record 42 projects let Wednesday by the Louisiana Highway Department, with work worth nearly $1.5 million set for the Fifth District.

Probably first during the week in the hearts of students and graduates, however, was the occasion Saturday of the school's 33rd Homecoming. Queen Cheryl McDonald oversaw a full day of activities, starting with a 10 a.m. parade, and including election of alumni officers. Unfortunately, pecking these notes late Friday with a Ouija Board on strike for higher wages, the alumni winners can't be named, nor can the Northeast-Southeastern football winner be, though Northeast was reported the sentimental favorite.

Winner, however, of the freshman class runoff Tuesday was Jimmy Roden of Jena, now class president.

Other Northeast news developed with word that the school's teacher education program, through the master's level, has received accreditation from the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education.

Actually, activity was brisk in local education almost across the board.

The Monroe City School Board, for example, ordered to desegregate at midterm, filed its proposed plan of doing so. If approved by a federal judge, racial barriers will fall in grades 1,2, 11 and 12, with 3, 4, 9 and 10 to follow suit the following midterm, 7 and 8 the one after that, and finally 5 and 6 in Fall, 1968. The system, in effect, is seeking a year longer to phase out than so far has been granted in north Louisiana.

Across town, the Ouachita Parish School Board busied itself making plans for open house at its new Bry Street office building. Same was set for Sunday, Nov. 7, in conjunction with National Education Week. Indications were that Ouachita would have been named in a desegregation suit ere now. It has not, but some reports said the parish might be one of several named in a possible collective action.

Ouachita was one of 27 parishes invited to hearings in Washington during the week as the Office of Education sought statements of intent with regard to civil rights compliance. All elected not to appear and, by the federal understanding, served notice rejecting voluntary compliance. Expected result is a cutoff of certain assistance. Eligible to receive some $700,000, Ouachita last year took less than $20,000, apart from lunchroom assistance, which is not effected.

Elsewhere in education, the West Monroe Chamber of Commerce-raised issue of dual (city and parish) school operations began to bubble anew. Officials announced a coming public forum for the exchange of information on alleged inequities and overlapping services. The Chamber avowedly is seeking firm boundaries between the systems, with each system to be governed and financed by persons within it.

ANOTHER VISITOR

Ikeya-Seki, of course, was not the only visitor last week to the Twin Cities.

Just as interesting as the comet, but for other reasons, was Jack Ratliff, a 76-year-old happy wanderer who travels the country in a three-mule-drawn covered wagon, accompanied by goats, chickens and a small dog.

On his way to the Rio Grande Valley, he camped for a day just north of Monroe and philosophized with curiosity-seekers and customers alike. Jack, grey-bearded former Colorado rancher who went broke in 1940 and took to the road, lives on eggs and goats' milk, selling pictures of himself and his "family." Itinerant as he was, some said he displayed a stability the world might envy. "I got everything I need," Jack said.

With this column needing more space, however, here's a list of other happenings of the week, necessarily as brief as possible:

The third report meeting Friday of the current United Givers' Fund campaign showed the goal of $284,934 to be 30.3 per cent collected — a total of $86,520.49 in hand or pledged.

The Louisiana Department of Public Works issued the work order for drainage improvement along about seven miles of the Young's Bayou Cutoff in Ouachita Parish.

The parish Grand Jury met, with Fletcher W. Ashcraft of Monroe named as foreman.

The parish school system took under consideration a proposed cooperative program with Monroe's Masur Museum — art lectures for students in exchange for $1,500 annual compensation.

The Ouachita Parish Baptist Association — 24 churches east of the river — held its annual two-day meeting, with the Rev. Glenn Pippins named moderator.

Leaders of the parish's March of Dimes met to plan their coming fund-raising campaign.

The Louisiana Association of School Business Officials was organized in Alexandria, and Jack Young of West Monroe was elected secretary-treasurer.

The Monroe Kiwanis Club held its annual Pancake Day.

A group of 75 parish junior 4-H clubbers took off Saturday for the state fair, which opened that day in Shreveport.

The World's Week In Focus

Klansmen Balk, Many Rally

By Oland Silk

THEME OF THE WEEK: The Republic is safe.

Congress adjourned, war in Viet Nam looked better for the U. S., a "backlash" of patriotic fervor swept the country following "peace" demonstrations, President Johnson left Bethesda Hospital, and the House Un-American Activities Committee greeted Ku Klux Klan witnesses with embarrassing questions they weren't about to answer. A late entry that dented the theme was a rare legal move by the Justice Department. Attorney General Katzenbach asked the Supreme Court to declare (immediately) constitutionality of the 11-week old voting rights law. Such a ruling would stop what Katzenbach called efforts of Alabama, Louisiana, and Mississippi, to obstruct enforcement of the law. It would also short - circuit normal court procedures that would consume a full year. Katzenbach wants local registrars to enroll those voters, most of them illiterate, approved by federal examiners.

He also may seek jury reform in the South.

Louisiana Attorney General Gremillion labeled the move "Communistic" and "unbelievable in an alleged Democracy."

Klansmen Face Possible Contempt

A COMPOSED ROBERT Shelton, Imperial Wizard of the United Klans of America, went before the House Un-American Activities Committee sporting a diamond ring and a "never" button. Under quizzing by Chairman Edwin Willis of Louisiana, Shelton offered three bits of information: name, age, birthplace. In two days of grilling, Shelton balked at all questions relating to Klan membership, activities, and financial dealings. He took the Fifth and other amendments 156 times.

Shelton received a tongue-lashing by Rep. Willis, who threatened him with a contempt citation, not for being a "Fifth Amendment Klansman" but for refusing to produce financial records. The Committee produced bank records, canceled checks and invoices in an effort to show fiscal skulduggery in Shelton's UKA and similar groups.

Following Shelton to the stand were his wife, secretary, and fellow Klansmen Robert Jones of North Carolina and Marshall Kornegay of Virginia. They all refused to edify the committee on KK details.

SHLETON

WILLIS PROBERS were surprised that no witness cooperated. The script had it that Shelton would. He apparently changed his mind on advice of counsel. But if Willis was surprised by the KK clam-up, the witnesses appeared stunned themselves by data dug out by committee investigators. There were questions about checks signed by the Sheltons in disguised names, about sale of robes, "wizard taxes", donations, dues, and how-to booklet on harassment.

Willis hinted tax agents will look into the fiscal finagling.

The probe became even more personal late in the week when Willis charged Jones and Kornegay with a series of bombings, cross burnings and physical harassment against opponents. He said Kornegay, Virginia's Grand Dragon, incited colleagues in the hooded order to throw dead rats, decapitated chickens and dead bugs in mail boxes and other places.

Robert Shelton, although a silent witness, spoke freely to newsmen outside the hearing room. He charged the probe was an inquisition and defended his action by citing the Klan's oath of secrecy. He will return before the committee on Nov. 15.

Prior to his appearance, investigators presented the results of their 10-month inquiry. They uncovered 381 Klan Klaverns (chapters) in 17 states. Louisiana has 35 units affiliated with various orders. Probers reported the biggest membership in the 6th congressional district north of New Orleans. They also noted a gain in strength across North Louisiana between Shreveport and Monroe.

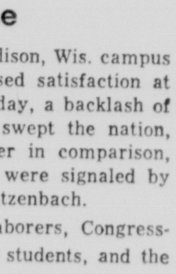
Demonstrators . . . Go Home

EARLY IN the week Frank Emspak, Madison, Wis. campus leader of anti-war demonstrations, expressed satisfaction at the 100,000 turnout in 60 cities. By Wednesday, a backlash of patriotic, pro - Administration sentiment swept the nation, reducing protesters to a negligible number in comparison, albeit dangers from Communist influence were signaled by J. Edgar Hoover and Attorney General Katzenbach.

Everyone got in the act — everyday laborers, Congressmen, housewives, a groundswell of college students, and the most touching of all, American GIs in Viet Nam. While most would acknowledge the students' rights of free speech, assembly, and petition, many felt they were unpatriotic, "hypocrites," and draft - dodgers whose actions were not in the interest of peace, but which would actually prolong the war. Signs late in the week supported this ironic twist. Reports from Hanoi said North Vietnamese leaders were misreading the significance of the protests — victims of their own propaganda — and felt that American public support for the war was weakening. Hanoi remembers that France pulled out of Indo - China when the far-off war fell out of favor with the French public.

EVEN THOUGH the campus peace marches were highly publicized, thousands of students did not participate. When the results were in, they reacted with various resolutions, "adoption" of GI units, and planned counter marches to make their support of American policy clear. Actually, what set off the biggest emotional tide in Congress and overseas was the burning of a draft card by one David Miller, a college graduate just classified 1-A.

Miller was arrested under a new law banning draft card destruction. Conviction could mean five years in prison and a $10,000 fine. Miller is one of five "Catholic Pacifists" in New Hampshire. When asked what he believed U. S. servicemen might think of his action, he said "they probably think bad thoughts and I'm sorry that they do. They're in a difficult position. I sympathize with them but I have to do what's right."



MILLER

An Iowa student, Steve Smith, burned his card at a campus "soap box sound off." The FBI was expected to arrest him too. Smith said he was ready to serve "five years for my country" in jail. Draft boards across the country reported no organized effort to dodge military service. Selective Service boss Gen. Hershy said card burners were misguided adolescents "who should be spanked or . . . maybe inducted."

Bitter — Successful Fighting

INDEED, it seemed the U.S. stand in South Viet Nam was paying off. More VC units surrender. Over 25,000 enemy soldiers have been killed — 8,000 more than in '64. Credit for this goes to the steady buildup of American forces, although the war is still very much a Vietnamese one: far more of them die than Americans in battle. Fighting centered around Plei Me this week where a Special Forces unit and 300 tough mountain tribesmen defended against a large VC force. The camp was under siege for several days. Some VC came so close they were burned to death on the barbed wire by flaming napalm dropped by U.S. planes. Many VC became human torches, falling after a few steps, screaming out their lives. In other fighting U.S. and Viet units scored successes in search-and-destroy operations.

American jets knocked out a Russian-supplied missile site in North Viet Nam. Pilots report sighting other non-operational units, soon to share the same fate, no doubt.

Compromise In Rhodesia

IT ISN'T KNOWN if Prime Minister Ian Smith of Rhodesia wears a "never" button, but his threat to declare the white-ruled British colony independent has weakened considerably. He consented to a visit by British Premier Harold Wilson after turning down a foreign mission conference. Smith wants Wilson to allow independence on the basis of the present constitution and trust the whites to do right by the Negro majority. Wilson refused. As grounds for doing so, Wilson noted in typical British fashion, "You will forgive me if I say that the detention or restriction over a long period of nationalist leaders, the recent restriction of a former prime minister, the banning of a prominent newspaper have suggested to the outside world the pattern of what might happen in the future."

Wilson may spend a week in Rhodesia. He will talk presumably with jailed nationalists, ex-premier Todd under house arrest, and leaders in all levels of government. The assignment is the toughest of Wilson's first year in office.

AND STILL they come. Babies, old men . . . anyone but those of military age — 17 to 26. Castro doesn't want them "trained and sent back . . . for us to shoot at." So the Cuban dictator announced as the Camarioca-Florida shuttle service continued. In opening Cuba's door, Castro's said he was trying to create a society of true Communists. He expects to achieve his Utopia through the island's youth.

Several refugees kissed Florida docks when they arrived. One father risked taking a 16-day-old infant from a Havana hospital incubator to make the stormy trip. He made it. One new arrival was a 92-year-old fisherman, Anselmo Hernandez, a fishing companion of the late Ernest Hemingway. The oldster claimed he was the model for the hero of "The Old Man and The Sea." The story is about an old man's fight with a great fish in a small boat. Fishing pals they were, Mrs. Hemingway said, but the hero of the book was not any one person.

HERNANDEZ

The hodge-podge of boats continued. No orderly process has been agreed to. South Florida's welcome mat for more exiles was definitely tattered. Officials demand that new centers be relocated outside Florida.

IN INDONESIA, Sukarno pledged allegiance to Peking, but the Army ousted Communists in high places, especially those involved in the abortive coup. Just where all this leaves nominal chief Sukarno is anybody's guess. He keeps talking about restoring peace and normalizing the situation — but the Army marches on against his friends, the Reds. Indonesia has been described as a place where logic, reason, and facts often vanish like wisps of smoke. Who can doubt it?

President Leaves Hospital

A PERFECT CARDIOGRAM, blood pressure better than that of the youngest doctor on his medic team, and healing from gall bladder surgery gave President Johnson his ticket to freedom from Bethesda. Back at the White House, the President kept a reduced schedule. Further recuperation is planned in Texas.

Two of his Great Society bills were denied: appropriations for rent subsidy and teacher corps programs. The Sugar bill and Federal pay muddled through. LBJ signed an air pollution bill in the hospital.

The biggest Administration defeat came when Sen. Ted Kennedy emotionally withdrew the name of Boston Judge Francis Morrissey from consideration for a federal post. Kennedy did so even though he had enough votes for confirmation. In deciding to send the Affair Morrissey back to the Senate Judiciary Committee, Kennedy avoided a knockdown fight with Senate Master Everett Dirksen. Critics insisted Morrissey was unqualified, his nominaton a payoff to the Kennedy family.

Louisiana Boycotts Federal Hearing

THE U.S. OFFICE of Education followed due process in action aimed at cutting off federal school aid to 27 Louisiana parishes. The agency conducted hearings on allegations that the parishes had failed to comply with the 1965 Civil Rights Act. Neither the parishes nor representatives of the State Board of Education attended the hearings to contest the proceedings. Termination of funds will follow several other steps — brief filing, written notice, reviews, etc. In chopping off $30 million from Chicago schools, Commissioner Keppel ignored the legal niceties and brought the wrath of Democrats down on his head. Funds were restored.

A 10-man group scheduled a highway safety program in the state. Gov. McKeithen threw his support behind the move. Committeemen heard National Safety Councilman, George Simmons discuss ways to combat road accidents. Carlos Spaht, the governor's secretary, said "we've got a real problem in Louisiana, because of auto insurance rates and our high accident rate. It's so serious several companies are leaving the state." Public Safety Director plans to request 100 extra troopers to help cut down accidents.

Bogalusa racial strife erupted again. Negro students boycotted schools charging inadequate facilities. Over 90 youngsters and adults were arrested. Marches and arrests kept tensions high all week.

Gov. McKeithen reported more industry moved into Louisiana in the first six months of 1965 than any other southern state.

The U.S. Senate approved a House-passed bill authorizing loans and "forgiveness" provisions for relief of Hurricane Betsy victims. The special bill, co-sponsored by Sen. Russell Long and Rep. Hale Boggs, provides outright grants of $1800 for home owners, farmers, and small businessmen who had uninsured floor or high water damage over $500.

Rep. Joe Waggonner introduced a bill to authorize investigation of the Students for Democratic Society, an anti-war activist group.

Jury Aquits Klansman

Alabama Attorney General Richmond Flowers failed to get a delay in the second murder trial of Collie Leroy Wilkins, baby - faced Klansman charged with killing Detroit civil rights worker, Mrs. Viola Liuzzo. Flowers, traveling on new legal ground, asked the Alabama Spreme Court to disqualify jurors who considered civil rights workers inferior. The court refused, and chastised the legal officer, arch foe of the Klan and Gov. George Wallace.

FLOWERS

The trial of Wilkins in Haynesville was a virtual replay of the first. Witnesses recounted the highway pursuit and fatal shooting. Others placed Wilkins 100 miles from the scene.

The jury deliberated 2 hours before acquittal. The courtroom gave a resounding cheer.

QUOTE OF THE WEEK: Concert pianist Julius Katchen interrupted his rendition of a Mozart concerto before a Bristol, England audience. "This paino is in a disgraceful state," he said. "The tuner failed to show. I want to apologize for this ridiculous state of affairs. We carry on under an intolerable burden."

The Amazon: How To Get Wealth Of Jungle

By JAMES D. BOWMAN

Aboard the Amazon Steamer Lauro Sodre (AP) — It all began, says Indian folklore, when a big tree toppled over.

It would have been a tree some 3,690 miles tall, standing on the shores of the Atlantic near the port city of Helem, Brazil.

And it fell with a bang, its trunk and branches smashing out the depressions which became the Amazon and its tributaries.

The tip grazed the Peruvian Andres scarcely 100 miles from the Pacific.

The rains came, the leaves turned to fish, and the world's mightiest river basin was born.

So goes the legend of one Indian tribe which has roamed the jungles of the upper Amazon since long before the white man knew of the river and its 200 lesser streams.

And except for a few sprinklings of civilization, the upper Amazon and its thousands of square miles of unmapped jungle remains the wild, primitive area of Stone Age man.

"The most fascinating thing is that we actually know so very little about the jungle and its riches," says Peruvian air force Maj. Orlando Castillo Gomez.

Castillo heads a work crew assigned to carve out 17 landing strips in the jungle under a plan.

He and his men work with their hands. Modern machinery is a rare luxury in this part of the world.

Few differ with Castillo's belief that the Amazon jungle holds great stores of wealth. There is argument only as to how to get to it and get it out.

Man can penetrate the jungle only a few miles in from the river's edge. He must hack his way with a machete and travel on his own two feet.

He can take out only what he can carry on his back.

CAPTAIN Humberto Vale Spessirits stands on the bridge of his river ship the Lauro Soldre. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

It is the very conditions that created the Amazon's riches that bar the way to their exploitation.

Rainfall in some parts of the Amazon basin measures up to 200 inches a year. Temperatures, while balmy and pleasant on the river at night, hit humid 90s by day.

There are no rural roads, no railroads and few airstrips.

There is only 5h3 Amazon, a great cocoa-colored highway slashing through the endless tropical rain forests, always in a rush to dump its estimated four billion cubic feet of water into the Atlantic every second of every minute.

It is a world of green, brown and blue — the jungle, the river and the sky.

Tiny specks of brilliant colors occasionally vary the panorama. A flock of parakeets flutters over, said to be migrating to Africa. Flowering plants dot the lush foliage with brilliant chinese reds, oranges, purples and yellows.

Travelers call it both a monotonous merry-go-round on which the scenery never changes and a magnificent open sewer.

But it is above all a way of life for the people of this steamy, sticky part of the world.

The Amazon varies in width from one to six miles from Peru to the Atlantic, forever twisting and churning out new channels.

Only a few yards back from the steep clay banks the dense belt of green, towering several hundred feet high, marches off into oblivion.

Within it lurk only the Indians unknown to the white man and the beats of the bush — the jaguars, ocelots, wild pigs, boa constrictors, anacondas.

There are harmless spiders the size of a man's hand and deadly ones no bigger than his fingernail.

A traveler today, if he should stick to his boat, could journey the length of the river without spotting anything wilder than the playful freshwater porpoise which delights in showing off its aquatic skills.

The alligator and his smaller cousin, the cayman, is a nocturnal creature. He hides out by day and prowls only at night.

The inland natives of Amazonian Brazil, Colombia and Peru, cluster in thatched-hut villages along the river's edge. Only the river offers transportation, a market for their animal hides and tropical fruits, and supplies from the mysterious outside world.

Arrival of the Lauro Sodre, its shrill whistle piercing from around the bend, sounds the signal for a village holiday. The Lauro Sodre is a 500-ton passenger-cargo vessel which plies the 2,300-mile stretch of the Amazon from Belem to Iquitos, Peru.

School — if there is one — is let out for the day. Youngsters and oldsters in freshly washed cottons flock to the river bank. There is always a fight to see who gets the honor of grabbing the lines thrown from the Lauro Sodre as she ties up.

It has been more than a month since the vessel's last call. She brings a few letters for those who can read, and fine treats from the three distant cities of the Amazon — Belem, Manaus and Iquitos.

Traders dart up in canoes offering bananas, small animals, fish and perhaps a snapping turtle measuring some three feet across its black shell.

A few who can raise the fare book passage to another village downstream, bring their own hammocks and sleep on the open deck.

For the village, the ship brings rice, sugar, coffee and other supplies.

There is some trading, the whistle sounds, and the villagers scurry ashore to wait the next visit of the Lauro Sodre.

Capt. Humberto Vale Spessirits starts his downstream run from the sleepy Peruvian jungle town of Iquitos at noon the day after loading.

Cruising at a 15-knot clip with the current, the voyage to Belem on the far side of the South American continent takes about nine days plus stops.

Spessirits has spent more than half of his 41 years on the Amazon and its tributaries, along with a brief stint as a coastal pilot.

His eyes seldom cease to scan the muddy water for signs of sandbars which could spell big trouble.

Apprentice pilots get their first taste of the river at 15 or 16, fathers usually passing down the trade. It is a trade, vows Spessirits, which gives no margin for error.

"We are always seeking the rippled water, not the placid water," he says.

"If the water is rippled, that means it is deep. If it is smooth, that means there is a sandbar not too far below the surface."

Sonar and other scientific sounding devices are aboard, but Spessirits puts little stock in them.

"They can tell you only how deep it is directly below you, which we already know anyway," he contends. "They cannot tell you if there is a sandbar directly in front of you."

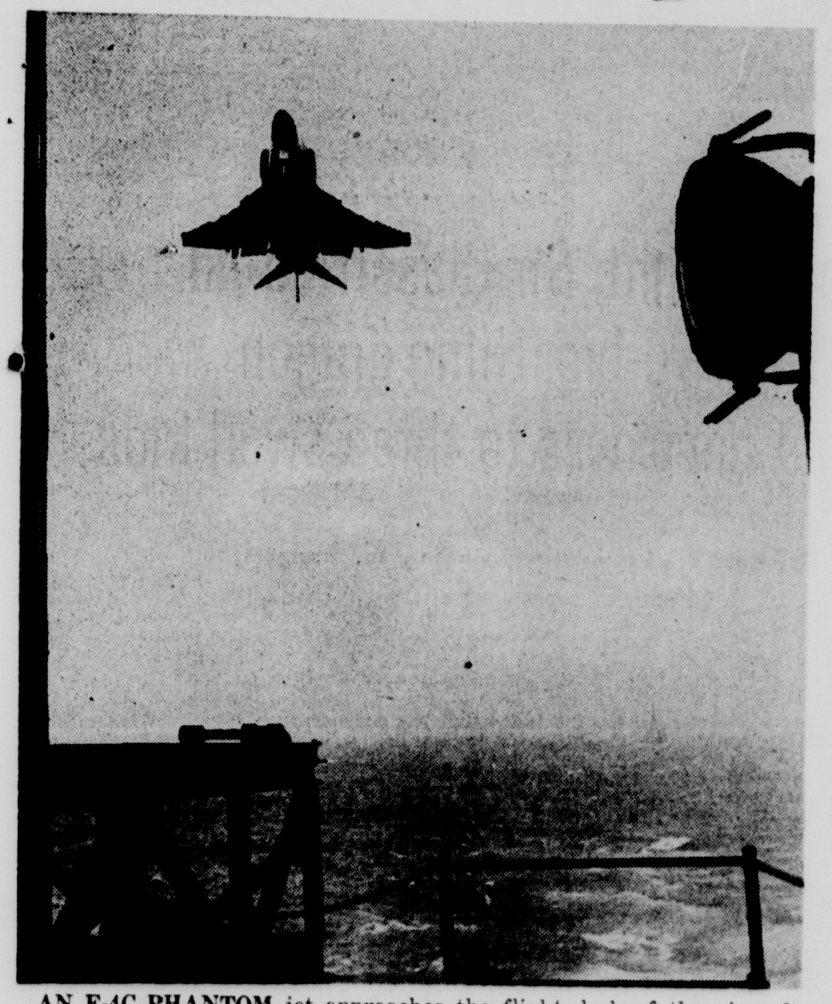
Nothing to date, he says, can match the skilled eyes of the veteran river pilot.

Few foreign tourists venture up the Amazon. Those that do and the ship's officers and crew and the ship's officers and crew speak little else.

Spessirits, a widower, calls Belem home. But he prefers the Amazon and the native villages which line the jungle's edge.

"I know the customs of the people along there," he says. "They are good people and happy people."

U.S.S. Independence Supports Viet Troops



AN F-4C PHANTOM jet approaches the flight deck of the aircraft carrier USS Independence somewhere in the South China Sea off the coast of Viet Nam after completing a mission over North Viet Nam. By HUGH MULLIGAN

ABOARD USS INDEPENDENCE (AP) — One hundred miles off the coast of South Viet Nam, under an enormous tropical moon, the carrier Independence steamed into the wind at 22 knots, her 300 yards of flight deck gently rising and falling in the light, rolling seas.

"A commander's moon," observed the air boss, waiting for his birds to come home to roost. "They'll have no trouble finding the deck tonight. We've got a good horizon line."

Cmdr. John Barlow of Muskegon, Mich., stood at the green-glass window of primary flight control, known simply as "the bubble," looking down at the parallel rows of little red and green lights marking off the Independence's runway.

In the soft amber glow of the instrument panels, his deeply lined face reflected an anxiety not betrayed in his cheerfulness. The bold inscription "air boss," stenciled on his yellow sweatshirt, somehow seemed a trifle absurd. The sweatshirt seemed to belong more to College Week in Fort Lauderdale than to a war zone in Viet Nam.

"Eight miles, eight miles," the loudspeaker barked.

Five decks below the radar consoles in C.C.A. — controlled carrier approach — had picked up the rest of the returning bombers. The plane talkers at their microphones were nudging the green blip on the screen into a glide path leading to the dipping deck.

"Good," said the air boss. "He'll be here in less than five minutes."

A quarter-mile away the swift streaking sliver of silver was beyond the control of the radar. The pilot was on his own now. He was trying to line up his bird with the "meatball," the row of green lights sandwiched between the yellow lights on the big panel board just to the left of the flight deck.

Only two men could wave him off now: the LSO, landing signal officer, in the little catwalk just off the deck, and the air boss in the green bubble below the bridge.

Never taking his eye off the fast-approaching aircraft, never altering the pleasant tone of his voice, the boss wrangler of the skies issues a series of calm, decisive orders to the deck crews and plane handlers.

Suddenly 25 tons of Vigilante reconnaissance bomber hit the deck in a shower of sparks, revved up its engines to top power, then jolted to a stop and was whipped backwards when its tail hook caught the second of the four arresting wires stretched across the deck

"Have you ever seen a horse bolting for the barn?" asked Barlow. "That's why they always have to go top power when they hit the deck. In case they miss the wire, they're ready to roar off again. If they lost power, they'd wind up in the sea."

In less than half an hour, 26 planes from six different squadrons landed on the Independence.

The sequence began 50 miles out to sea, when a marshaling controller began stacking up the returning bombers, putting them in flight formations to get back on deck. Now the birds were in a six-minute holding pattern. Already the Independence turned into the wind and adjusted her speed to the landing conditions.

Television cameras at strategic points on and above the flight deck cover each landing, day or night. When the recovery is over, the LSO reruns the tapes on the closed circuit television sets in the squadron ready rooms and gives a critique on what each pilot did wrong or right in landing.

With nearly 100 planes calling the floating airport home base, each day's launches and recoveries brings its share of drama.

Once on this particular night Barlow's voice lost its customary cheer but not its customary calm: "Heads up, clear the deck. We got an Intruder with a nose gear stuck. Wave him off, we'll take him last."

Four other Intruders landed. One bolted twice and finally sat down while the Intruder in trouble circled slowly beneath the pale stars off the port beam.

"No. 502 still reports gear stuck, we'll take him in next," Barlow said, with just a trace of anxiety in his voice.

Suddenly, hundreds of figures swarmed over the deck like groundskeepers at a baseball stadium. And in less than three minutes they erected an enormous net, 21 feet high, across the breath of the flight deck.

"The danger light has gone out on his instrument panel," C.C.A. reported. "He may have gotten that gear down."

Barlow reacted swiftly. Snap judgments require snap orders.

"All right, take the net down," he ordered. "We'll take him on the deck.

The plane was in sight now. The air boss stared hard through the green window. The worry lines of his face framed the question that must have been on everyone's mind: Should the net have been left up?

The loudspeaker kept up its litany.

"One-half mile.

"One-quarter mile."

Barlow's voice was almost a whisper, as if he were urging and praying the plane down at the same time: "All right now, level off, level off. That's it, that's it. Nose up, nose up."

The Intruder splashed a wave of sparks across the moonlighted deck, hung on the fourth wire and jolted to a stop.

"That is what we call a controlled crash," the air boss said.

Cmdr. Barlow will soon take up a new stateside berth as administration officer at the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md. His year as air boss on the recovering the bombers from the air strikes over North Viet Nam, has come to a close.

NAPALM TANKS, in foreground at left, and bombs are readied for loading onto an A4D, in background, and A6A, at left, on the hangar deck of the aircraft carrier Independence somewhere in the South China Sea off the coast of Viet Nam recently. Nearly 100 aircraft call the Independence their home base. Maintenance crews, center photo, clamber over an RA5C Vigilante photo reconnaissance plane parked on the flight deck of the aircraft carrier USS Independence somewhere in the South China Sea off the coast of Viet Nam. These aircraft make frequent photo reconnaissance missions over both North and South Viet Nam, including night missions to shoot infra-red photographs of enemy positions. At right, an A4D snags the third of four arresting wires strung across the deck of the aircraft carrier USS Independence somewhere in the South China Sea, after returning from a mission over Viet Nam. The arresting wires, called cross deck pendants, must be adjusted to handle the gross weight and landing speed of each of the different types of aircraft that land on the carrier. Johnson Gives Congress Pat On Back As 'Greatest In American History'

WASHINGTON (AP)—The 89th Congress ended its first session with a pat on the back from President Johnson and a verbal kick from its Republican minority.

"The greatest in American history" was the way the President sized it up.

"A rubber-stamp Congress that has been a puppet dangling on political wires manipulated by the White House," was the GOP viewpoint voiced by House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford of Michigan. Whatever its virtues or vices, the 89th was one of the most active and spendingest in history.

The President had cause for his commendation of the work done during the 10R-month session. Perhaps no other president in history, unless it was Franklin D. Roosevelt during his first term as president, got so much so fast from a cooperative legislative branch.

Health care for the elderly, voting rights, aid for education, new health programs and historic changes in the immigration laws were among the big ones that became law.

The willingness of the top-heavy Democratic majority to comply with and at times exceed the President's wishes brought repeated taunts of "rubber stamp" from the minority. Republicans made it clear they will hit hard at the this theme during the 1966 congressional elections.

The GOP started the session with only 140 seats in the House and 32 in the Senate, compared with 295 Democrats in the House 68 in the Senate. The previous GOP low was 89 in the House and 17 in the Senate in 1938.

For the time being at least, the once-powerful coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats virtually ceased to exist. In its last remaining stronghold, the House Rules Committee, the coalition's teeth were yanked by a new rule limiting to 21 days the time legislation desired by the administration can be held up.

The Republicans started the session by ousting their former House leader, Rep. Charles A. Halleck of Indiana. Ford replaced Halleck.

The new Republican leader's rubber-stamp charge was answered by Democratic leaders.

House Speaker John W. McCormack of Massachusetts said "this was an amazing Congress" and "its record of service to the American people has been outstanding."

"If there was any rubber-stamping at all," commented House Majority Leader Carl Albert of Oklahoma, "then you could say it was the administration that was rubber-stamping the Congress."

The reference was to the fact that Congress went further than the President wanted it to in some cases, particularly on pay raises for military personnel and on health care for the elderly. Its sporadic displays of independence encountered vetoes of a military construction bill and a bill to help flood - ravaged northwestern states.

The President resented what he called congressional encroachment in the executive field dealing with such matters as closing down military bases. Congress yielded and passed both bills in modified form.

But it refused to give Johnson his way on two big labor bills, one raising minimum wages and the other seeking to eliminate states' authority to pass laws prohibiting union shop clauses in labor contracts. Both were sidetracked for further consideration when Congress meets again next January.

The House-passed union shop bill got caught in a Senate filibuster. The minimum-wage measure cleared the House Education and Labor Committee but got stuck in the Rules Committee.

Another Johnson "pet," providing a system of home rule for the District of Columbia, also was laid aside until next year after clearing both the Senate and the House but in sharply different form.

The President's first Congress since his election broke with tradition by enacting the first programs of federal aid for elementary education and health care for the elderly within the social Security framework. Several previous presidents are unable to get them through.

Those two historic laws were only a few of Johnson's "Great Society" measures to which Congress took kindly. The total cost of all of them may not be known for years, since many facets project into the future and no one knows how or whether Congress may finance them later.

Estimates of the over-all price tag range as high as $60 billion.

"It will exceed $50 billion," said Rep. Frank T. Bow of Ohio, who as top Republican on the House Appropriations Committee kept a set of cost records.

"It's going to be a lot," commented Rep. George M. Mahon, D-Tex., chairman of the committee. "It depends on what you include as part of the Great Society program. Some of it is new, some of it is old with a new name."

Whatever the cost, the fact is that Congress appropriated more money this year than in any previous nonwar year. It poured out around $119 billion of the approximately $121 billion the President requested. That burst of generosity was exceeded only by the $147 billion appropriated during the first full year of World War II.

While it kept busy during its long session, Congress had its lighter moments. On the eve of the President's gall bladder operation, the House stayed in session beyond midnight to pass a highway beautification bill dear to the heart of the President's wife. It missed a "Salute to Congress" party arranged by the President, who had left the party for the hospital when weary representatives and their disgruntled wives arrived.

Before leaving the party, the President wrote his "greatest in American history" statement which McCormack proudly inserted in the Congressional Record.

The House put on another postmidnight session to break a Rules Committee block holding up a bill to raise the pay of federal employes. It took 22 roll calls, a record, to force the measure to the House floor.

It took more than 34,000 pages of the Congressional Record to officially list all the things Congress did and the speeches of its members.

Here are some of its major enactments, some of them new and others extension of previous programs:

HEALTH:

— A program of limited free hospital care and low-cost health insurance for the elderly through increased Social Security taxes and premiums paid in part by the government and in part by the individual.

— A five-year community health services program including grants to states for mass immunization against common ailments.

— An $800-million program to provide community health centers, aid for handicapped children, medical research and construction of research facilities.

— A three-year $755-million program to build facilities to teach doctors, dentists and other medical students and to provide loans for their education.

— A $650-million program spread over four years to provide regional medical centers to carry on the war against heart disease, cancer and stroke.

EDUCATION:

— A program of federal aid for elementary and secondary schools, with the emphasis on poor children.

— Aid for higher education through construction grants and scholarships.

Estimated first-year cost in excess of $2 billion.

ECONOMIC:

— A $1.1-billion program to boost the economy of states in the Appalachia area.

— Continuation and expansion of the antipoverty program at a cost of $1.65 billion.

— A program of development aid to depressed areas at a cost of $3.2 billion.

VOTING:

— Implementation of the civil rights law by a new law ending literacy tests and providing for federal registration of voters in areas where minorities have been discriminated against at the polls.

IMMIGRATION:

— Ended the old national origins quota system that favored northern European nations.

The new plan, effective in 1968, will favor relatives of U.S. citizens and foreigners with special skills and will put a ceiling on immigration from Western Hemisphere nations. It is expected to slightly reduce total immigration and distribute new citizenship rights among more nations.

TAXES:

— Excise taxes were cut $4.7 billion spread over a five-year period.

— The national debt ceiling was hiked from its "permanent" $285-billion limit to $328 billion.

MONEY:

— Congress approved the coinage of dimes and quarters without any silver content and ordered a reduction of the content of silver in half dollars from 90 per cent to 40 per cent.

MILITARY:

— Voted a billion dollars annually in pay raises, more than twice the amount the President requested.

U.S. EMPLOYES:

— Voted annual pay raises of $641 million for nonmilitary personnel.

MILITARY:

Blocked the Pentagon's plan to merge National Guard and Army Reserve units.

GOVERNMENT:

Created a new Cabinet department to look after housing programs and affairs of urban areas.

FOREIGN AID:

— Voted $3.2 billion in new funds to carry on the program of military and economic help for non-Communist nations.

AGRICULTURE:

— Enacted a four-year program of production controls, price supports and direct cash payments affecting producers of cotton, rice, wheat, wool, feed grains and dairy products and providing for retirement of surplus cropland; estimated first year cost $4 billion.

TRANSPORTATION:

— Approved a $72-million study of high-speed surface transportation.

HIGHWAYS:

— Enacted a law designed to beautify highways by removal of unsightly billboards and junkyards at an estimated cost of $320 million for the first two years.

SUCCESSION:

— Submitted to the states a proposed constitutional amendment providing for filling the office of president in the event of death, illness or other inability of the incumbent.

HOUSING:

— Enacted a four-year $7-billion public housing program including a provision for rent subsidies for low-income families, but put off financing of the subsidy plan until next year.

MISCELLANEOUS:

— Made it a federal crime to burn or mutilate draft cards.

— Gave federal law officers jurisdiction in cases involving assassination, kidnaping or assault on the President or the vice president.

— Approved a $63-million program to promote the arts and humanities.

— Voted to end tariffs on trade in new automobiles and parts between the United States and Canada.

Village Named Louisiana Is Built In Chile

Chile has a village named Louisiana, brand new and christened today.

Built under an Alliance for Progress loan of Chilean currency from the U.S. Agency for International Development, Chile's Louisiana is a settlement of 200 three-bedroom brick homes in a growing industrial area just south of Santiago, the country's capital.

The inaugural ceremony featured the raising of the flags of the United States, Chile and Louisiana and speeches by U.S. Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall, who is visiting in Chile, and U.S. Ambassador Ralph A. Dungan.

Gov. John J. McKeithen of Louisiana sent his greetings to the new village, saying: "I find it an immense pleasure for me to extend the congratulations and the heartiest best wishes of the people of the State of Louisiana to the people of the new village of Louisiana, Chile. We are all honored that the people of Chile have seen fit to name one of their new and promising municipalities for our own State. We certainly hope that this evidence of good will will develop into a lasting bond of friendship between our peoples."

The name Louisiana was given to the settlement by Chile's Foundation for Housing and Social Assistance, which built it with American help.

The first families moved into the settlement, then known as "Poblacion Maipu", last February.

The settlement is on a low hill overlooking the Maipu plain, where Chilean patriots under Generals Bernardo O'Higgins and Jose de San Martin on April 5, 1818, defeated Spanish Royalist forces under General Mariano Osorio, assuring Chilean independence.

It is one of 37 settlements built by the Foundation and either named or being named for U.S. states. The 37 villages provide low cost homes for nearly 2,000 families.

Louisiana's 199 families — one small structure is used as a social center — generally work in industrial plants in Santiago's suburbs. The fathers earn around 250 escudos (about $60) a month.

The assignments to the new homes were made on a basis of need, with only families of four or more children being eligible. The rent ranges from 10 to 30 escudos a month, depending on income and individual requirements. After a year's residence, the foundation expects to sell the homes to the occupants, with the rent paid constituting a down payment. The payments then will go into a revolving fund to build more homes.

Victor Lucero, the president of the "Louisiana" Civic Association (Junta de Vecinos), says that all the families are pleased with their new homes.

The association already has done considerable work in civic improvement. Trees have been planted to relieve the barren aspect of the development; a children's band has been formed; preliminary work has been done for a playground and a library and social center are just being organized.

Sr. Lucero and his Board of Directors are at work on other details. They hope to have a public telephone installed in the development and to arrange for more readily available medical assistance. Future plans are to enlarge the nearby primary school and to expand the neighboring industrial school.

It is hoped the new village will bridge the transition period for people who have left the large plantations and the patronal system, prevailing in much of rural Chile, for the new pattern of industrial living into which they have been thrown. Social workers from the foundation regularly visit the settlement to provide advice and counsel.

Doctors Tell Of New Test For Kissing Disease

PRINCETON, N.J. (UPI)—A team of Princeton University doctors has good news for romantic college students — A new way to combat the "kissing disease."

Doctors here have come up with a quick, inexpensive test to screen students for the hard to detect disease, more properly known as infectious mononucleosis.

The ailment, often called "mono" for short, has been nicknamed the "kissing disease" because doctors think that's the way the virus gets around.

Dr. Stanley Bauer, director of laboratories at Princeton Hospital, says 786 freshmen were screened this year and the acute blood infection was found in 12 unsuspecting men.

Dr. Bauer claims the new test will allow a doctor to diagnose the disease "quickly and easily."

He noted, however, there is still no cure for the ailment, which usually runs its course without complications. The problem with "mono" is the disease's sneaky ability to mimic more serious ailments.

Rice Festival Held Saturday At Crowley

CROWLEY, La. (AP) — A barefoot man ate four-and-a-half pounds of rice while pretty Cajun girls prodded speckled bullfrogs in a jumping contest.

"Saut crapaud," shouted the crowd here Saturday at the International Rice Festival. The French expression means "jump, frog."

The rice eating contest went to a little man with a lot of starch—Alex Broussard, a 33-year - old fiddle player from Rayne, La., who downed six helpings. He said shoes would have cramped his style.

Broussard weighed but 95 pounds. And some of his fellow trencherman were three times his size.

Carol Guidry won the frog derby when her steed, "Te-Man," jumped 9 feet, 11½ inches, in three hops.

Runnerup was Sue Ellen Simpson and her frog, "Gros Tete," who jumped 9 feet, 11¼ inches. Second runnerup was Debra Breaux and "Gaspard," who jumped 9 feet, 11 inches.

Eleven other girls, all from Rayne and dressed in white shorts and satin jockey blouses, prodded their frogs into their best efforts.

And the penalty for losing was a quick trip to the saucepan.

Pay Raise Discussion Slated

By JAMES MCLEAN
Associated Press Writer

BATON ROUGE (AP)—Gov. John McKeithen has sent word to state department heads to make suggestions at a Civil Service Commission hearing Tuesday when a $16 million pay raise for classified state workers will be discussed.

Civil service director W. W. McDougall has recommended the pay hike beginning July 1, bringing an average $35 monthly raise for 36,900 civil service workers.

Half the $16 million annual cost would support establishment of a state minimum of $1.25 an hour and increases related pay scales, particularly of supervisory workers.

The other $8 million, McDougall said, would bring state pay scales more in line with industry and other employers offering more pay—such as the federal government.

The Civil Service Commission is expected to approve the new pay plan, and forward it to Gov. McKeithen with a request he put it into effect for nest fiscal year.

As a matter of reality, the entire issue would have to be placed in the hands of the State Division of Administration and the Legislative Budget Committee, which begin work in January on the state budget for the 1966 legislature. The legislature would have to find the extra money.

Carlos Spaht, the governor's executive counsel, sent letters to all state agency heads urging them to attend the Tuesday commission hearing in the State Library Auditorium.

"The governor," he said, "would like for each department head to give serious study to this proposal and to appear and make recommendations to the commission at the hearing. The governor also would like for you to furnish him with any suggestion which you have, in order that he may also make recommendations. . . ."

Let's tackle the college problem in time

It gets worse as the months pass.

Some colleges predict that they soon may have to turn away qualified high school graduates.

There aren't the buildings and equipment, the facilities and teachers to educate these potential leaders.

That's what keeps high our level of jobs, opportunities and living standards.

LeBlanc Warns Committee On Redistricting

BATON ROUGE (AP)— Sen. Dudley LeBlanc said Saturday he has warned his Joint Legislative Committee on Senate Redistricting to "come up with something or let's go to court."

The Abbeville senator said he called a meeting of the committee here at 11 a.m. Wednesday.

LeBlanc is one of the senators who have pushed for redistricting to bring the seating of the Senate more in line on equal population basis.

Sen. Jules Molere, Metairie attorney, filed a taxpayers suit in federal court aimed at forcing Louisiana Senate redistricting. Molere also is a member of LeBlanc's committee.

The Molere suit long has been under consideration in U.S. District Court. He has warned his colleague several times that unless the legislature acts on its own, he will seek a summary judgment.

Several plans to redistrict the Senate were offered in the last legislature, but all were shoved aside. LeBlanc was stricken with a heart attack and a floor leader of Gov. John J. McKeithen won a move to put the matter aside because LeBlanc was not present to speak.

IT STARTED OUT that San Jose State College sophomore philosophy major Roger Lette, 19, was going to burn his draft card — in front of everyone. Then up jumped a red-haired senior drama major Ann Morris. Lette did not burn his card. Said Miss Morris: "I just felt this was terribly wrong . . . why doesn't somebody do something . . . so I did." Bad Weather Halts Boats Leaving Cuba

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — Bad weather halted sailing of Cuban exile boats for Florida Saturday. And the Coast Guard assessed stiff penalties on several owners and operators of vessels used to bring out refugees.

More than 150 boats were reported moored at the docks in Camarioca and Varadero, two embarkation points in Cuba, awaiting improved weather conditions. Seas on the 90-mile run across the Florida Straits were reported six to eight feet during squalls.

The Coast Guard cracked down on safety violations in boats used to bring in the refugees. It announced that three Americans faced fines of $6,000 each for "gross violation of safe navigation rules." They are Jack Ott, owner of the Shark V; Donald R. Green, of the Mistral, and Jack Peter Zack, who allegedly chartered Ott's boat for treasure hunting. They have two weeks in which to file an answer. Court appeals also are open to them.

Federal officials said the trio also could face additional fines of $1,000 for each of the 60 refugees they brought in. Their boats were among nearly 60 impounded by U.S. authorities after arrival here.

Owner Matt Powers Jr. of St. Augistine was assessed two fines of $100 each for having no fire extinguisher and an engine improperly ventilated aboard the 41-foot Rusty Boy II.

Three vessels that encountered trouble in high seas while en route to Cuba were towed in by the Coast Guard, including Rusty Boy II. A helicopter hoisted two Cuba women from a 24-foot cabin cruiser, La Familia.

William, Hopkins, Coast Guard boarding officer, cited Manuel Radamez Fiallo of Miami, operator of La Familia, for four alleged safety violations carrying a total of $350 in fines.

A Coast Guard helicopter spotted the Miss Marcene, which had no radio, with two Cubans aboard. Carlos del Risco of Miami, the skipper, was assessed $100 for failure to have a bell on board.

Two Cuban children, Miguel Perez and his sister, Bibian, were the 999th and 1,000th refugees to arrive since Fidel Castro opened the doors two weeks ago.

Three boarding officers from the St. Petersburg Coast Guard base arrived to augment the Key West staff during the Cuban rush.

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Police here have issued a warning that the rakers of autumn leaves should lock their houses when they go into their yards to work.

Rights March Stalls In Georgia

LINCOLNTON, Ga. (AP) — A planned civil rights march stalled Saturday in this small town, scene of racial violence, after a state police captain had pleaded for a postponement, and few local Negroes showed up.

A few minutes later a car loaded with young Negroes overturned five miles away, injuring five persons. One of the occupants said the driver had panicked when two white youths began to chase the vehicle in their car.

There was no indication what effect, if any, the automobile incident would have on the racial situation here and in nearby Washington, Ga.

Reinforced state police — about 60 of them — were on hand as civil rights workers started to gather at a Negro church in this town of 1,300 in northeast Georgia.

When 70 Negroes began to march to the Lincoln County Courthouse, state police Capt. Theron Aldridge pleaded with them to suspend marches for two days "so that we can provide better protection."

He said later that he had been told reliably that a march would result in violence. A crowd of white men and youths attacked Negro demonstrators with their fists Friday.

Aldridge called for reinforcements overnight.

When the Negro group began to form Saturday, few Lincolnton Negroes were present.

When the group began to march, state troopers lined across a dirt road and blocked the way after less than a block's walk.

Stokley Again Difference As Tigers Win, 21-7

Lions Spoil Northeast's Homecoming In First Half 14-6

Two Second Half TD's Are Margin

By JACK GATES
Executive Editor
News-Star—World

BATON ROUGE — Nelson Stokley, a sensational sophomore quarterback, cranked up LSU's sputtering offensive machine Saturday night long enough for three touchdowns to give the Tigers a 21 to 7 victory over a big, bruising South Carolina team.

Stokley, who can get the yardage when it is needed most, was the difference in the game as the Tigers blew hot and cold, both on defense and offense.

He engineered LSU's first touchdown in the first period, then put the Tigers ahead to stay after South Carolina had tied it at 7-7 early in the third period on a blocked punt. In all he passed for one touchdown and ran for another — the third one.

Offensively, the slender Crowley youth, actually a transplanted Texan, galloped for 97 yards on 18 carries.

He completed seven of 11 passes for another 116 and a total output of 213 yards which equalled the entire South Carolina yardage in the game, played in crisp weather before a near sellout.

Overall, LSU picked up a total of 18 first downs to 13 for South Carolina and a total yardage of 344.

It was one of those nights for the Tigers and was to be expected after their brilliant victory over Kentucky a week ago. But a big South Carolina team that outweighed LSU by several pounds contributed heavily to the blunted Tiger offense.

South Carolina also unwrapped a sophomore quarterback in Mike Fair who played brilliantly and often kept the LSU defense off balance with his passing and running.

In all, he completed 12 of 23 passes against LSU's leaky defense for 124 yards and picked up 36 more on the ground to lead Gamecock rushers.

Tailback Ben Garnto, South Carolina's leading rusher who had an 8.6 average before tonight was bottled up most of the night and gained only 32 yards in 10 carries for a 3.2. average.

The Gamecocks were in the game throughout and with a couple of breaks that went against them could have made it closer than the score indicated.

The Tigers scored the second time they got the ball, after Carolina punter Scott Townsend toed a short one to the LSU 46.

On the second play, Stokley hit Moreau, then Gawain DiBetta with another, good for 15 yards, to move to the Carolina 24.

Two plays later and after a penalty had moved the ball to the Carolina 16, Stokley faded back and pegged a perfect pass to lighting Joe Labruzzo on the goal line who fell in the end zone for the score. Doug Moreau booted the first of his three extra points for the night.

Early in the second period, South Carolina drove to the LSU 22, but successive penalties and a loss by LSU defenders, moved the ball back to the 33 from where Jimmy Poole tried a field goal that was wide and short.

In an effort at another score, the Tigers then drove to near the midfield from where Stokley almost connected for another as he lofted a beautiful pass to Moreau, racing down the sideline. It fell just beyond Moreau's oustretched fingers at the 10.

Carolina, which had a 3-2 record before tonight's game got its only score early in the third period. After the Tigers couldn't move, Buster Brown back to punt, on his 20 yard line was slow in getting off his boot. Safety man Roy Don Reeves, one of a 10-man rush unit, went in and blocked the punt while end Doug Senter picked it up at the 10 and crashed into the end zone for the score. Poole converted.

LSU, with Stokley at the helm, fired back from its own 30 on the ensuing kickoff. Stokley hit Moreau with a beautiful 45 yard pass that moved the ball to the Carolina 25. On two plays, Stokley carried it to the 12, then big Jim Dousay flashed to the 1 and many of the fans thought he went in the end zone. But it didn't matter as bruising Danny LeBlanc crashed in for the score on the next play.

Carolina fired back and quickly moved to the LSU 30 and looked as if they might go all the way when a series of costly penalties hit them — two 15 yarders. On fourth down and from the LSU 47, Townsend tried another field goal that was slightly short and wide.

Before that, however, the combination of Fair and end J. R. Wilburn almost clicked for a touchdown.

Fair arched a long one to him and he had his hands on the ball when it was jarred out in the end zone for an incomplete.

A short time later, the Tigers iced the game, driving to the Carolina two yard line from their own 20.

Highlights of the drive were a 21-yard Stokley to LeBlanc pass and a 29 yard burst by Labruzzo. The speedster flashed into the end zone, but an official ruled he stepped on the line at the 2 amid a loud series of boos. On the next play, Stokley scored, sweeping out wide and across.

That was the way the game ended, although LSU drove to the Carolina 40 later in the period and the Gamecocks were on LSU 7 as the game ended. On the final play and after a five yard penalty had moved the ball back from the 2 to the 7, Fair was cracked down on the 12 in a pass attempt.

Actually on the play before, Fair had pumped into the end zone for a touchdown, but the penalty nullified it.

Overall it was not one of LSU's better performances, but Coach Charlie McClendon said before the game it was a contest he would be glad to get behind him.

Next Saturday, the Tigers meet Mississippi at Jackson.

Indians Dominate Second Half Play

By KEITH PRINCE
World Sports Editor

For the second straight week Northeast State's young football team dominated play in the second half against a more experienced Gulf States Conference foe but again the effort fell short and Southeastern defeated the Indians 14-6 before a full house at Ouachita Stadium.

After trailing 14 - 0 at halftime of the Homecoming contest, Northeast came back to give SLC all it wanted, and then some.

Northeast cut the gap to eight points early in the fourth period and had a golden opportunity to tie the game with just 10 seconds to play but failed to score from the one yard line.

The Indians got their last ditch chance when quarterback Steve Mansur, playing halfback on defense, gobbled up a Southeastern fumble at the visitors' 18 yard line with 1:35 to play in the game.

Mansur was hit for a five yard loss on first down but then came back to connect with end Charles Rhoner down to the eight for a first and goal.

From here Mansur kept to the four on first down and with 40 seconds left threw incomplete for Rohner in the end zone. On third the freshman quarterback kept for two more, to the two, but on fourth down he was slammed down at the one by a host of Lions as he tried to sweep right end.

The Lions had gone in front 7 - 0 seconds before the end of the first quarter when halfback Tommy Arbour got behind the Tribe secondary and hauled in a Lester Smith pass for a 78 yard touchdown. Fred Gary converted.

Just before intermission Southeastern scored again when it got possession at the Tribe 49 with 1:15 to go. A Smith to Arbour toss made 21 yards and Smith swept to the 10 on third down with a 14 yard gain. From here fullback Harry Nunez hit off right tackle and rammed for the score.

Gary again kicked true for Southeastern's 14 points.

The two clubs traded interceptions and fumbles early in the third quarter before Northeast finally stopped a Southeastern drive at the Tribe 26.

With Mansur, who hit on 15 of 29 passes during the night for 181 yards, leading the way Northeast marched for its touchdown in 13 plays. The 74 yard drive featured four Mansur completions that ate up all but 17 yards on the drive.

First the little lefty threw to halfback Lynn Mitchell on a swing pass that picked up 12, then two plays later hit end Floyd Giblin with a five yarder to the NLSC 46.

He went to the swing pass again here and hit Johnny Garrison in the right flat. Garrison caught the ball all alone and raced 22 yards before being pushed out of bounds at the Southeastern 33.

After two plays netted a yard, Mansur found Giblin again for 18 yards to put Northeast on the SLC 14. From here halfback Cuick Whistler carried twice for eight yards to the six.

Mansur bobbled the snap on third and two at the six, but controlled it in time to sneak for five yards to the one. He scored two plays later on another sneak.

Northeast went for two points but failed when a Mansur pass fell away from Garrison at the goal. Northeast has not made an extra point this year.

Southeastern managed another threatening drive later in the fourth period but had to settle for an unsuccessful field goal attempt from the 14 when Northeast held.

The Indians actually had their best scoring opportunity of the night only minutes after the game started when they got possession at the SLC 15.

Southeastern received the opening kickoff but couldn't make a first down and was forced to punt from its 33. The snap went over kicker Wayne Sullivan's head and Northeast fell on the ball at the 15.

Mansur swept to the nine on first down and went for one more on second down. But he went back to pass on third and was hit at the 11 by the Lions' left defensive end Earl Dietrich. A fourth down pass attempt fell incomplete and Southeastern took over.

The contest was almost a "same song, second verse" affair for Northeast who last week bowed to McNeese by the same score. However, in the final analysis the Tribe, behind Mansur's passing, faired much better statistically against Southeastern.

Mansur's work erased several individual game records for a Northeast gridder. His 200 yards total offense, on 181 passing and 19 rushing, is 10 better than Ronnie Myrick's 190 yards gained against Lamar Tech in 1961.

The 29 pass attempts by Mansuri are 15 more than thrown by any other Tribe quarterback in a game and his 181 yards passing tops the 157 yards gained by another frosh quarterback on the 1965 club, Allen Bozeman, in the game against Louisiana College two weeks ago.

Giblin was Northeast's busiest end. The freshman from Baton Rouge made a couple of sensational catches and finished the night with five receptions for 62 yards.

Nunez was the main SLC cog, running 21 times for 82 yards. Smith completed only four passes but gained 133 yards with them.

Tech Bombs Northwestern

By STUART HILL
World Sports Writer

SHREVEPORT — Louisiana Tech returned to form here Saturday night, rolling into the winners' circle with a convincing 42-14 victory over Northwestern in the annual State Fair game before a crowd estimated at 27,000.

The Techsters hit the Demons for 21 points in each half and allowed NSC two make markers late in the contest.

The victory brings Tech's back with hopes after losing its first three outings. Northwestern, unbeaten coming into the game, fell to a 4-1 mark. The Bulldogs' are 1-2 in the Gulf States Conference and the Demons hold a 1 - 1 record.

After a shaky start, the Bulldogs were able to move almost at will against the struggling Devils.

Tech's Robert Brunet, who rushed 16 times for 93 yards, was named the outstanding back in the highscoring affair, and Bob McKinnon, standout of the Bulldog offensive unit, was named for the lineman award.

The Canines were never headed in the battle and constructed a 35 - 0 lead before giving up a marker to the Demons.

NSC's Donald Guidry tossed a 16-yard scoring pass to junior Dick Reding with 1:50 left in the game after Guidry had plunged over on a last down effort on the Tech one-yard line with 3:09 remaining. Wayne Walker kicked both PAT's.

The two quick scores gave the Demons some moral support but Tech came back late in the game and sent Rich Golman over on a 12 - yard run and Speedy Campbell kicked the last of seven extra points with 35 seconds left to give Tech its 28-point margin.

The point spread was the largest mustered by Tech over the Demons during the series in State Fair Stadium.

Golman's last period touchdown was his second of the night. He carried over from the five in the second period.

Talented quarterback Billy Laird also figured in two Tech touchdowns. In the third quarter he hit record - breaking receiver Wayne Davis with a 15-yard strike and early in the fourth, he connected with Vidalia junior Maurice Greer for a final six yards.

Brunet also scored from the six - yard line, but this one came in the first quarter on a run. Reserve quarterback Phil Robertson threw the first six-yard scoring strike in the second quarter. He flipped the distance to Jim Jones.

Tech's Campbell recovered a Donnie Carroll fumble at the NSC eight - yard line to set up Tech's fourth TD of the night, coming in the third period.

McKinnon came up with an interception of a Guidry pass at the NSC 46 yard line and the Bulldogs began a march that resulted in the fifth Tech tally. The drive required 10 plays and came with 9:37 remaining.

Joe Aillet's Bulldogs completely dominated statistics. They rolled for 24 first downs, with several coming on penalties, while Northwestern had to work like Demons for 13 first downs.

Laird moved the Bulldogs through the air for 143 yards on 12 completions in 16 attempts. Jim Jones snagged four for 71 yards and Davis got seven for 64.

Northwestern's Kenny Guillot recovered a Tech fumbled punt on the Bulldog 28 yard line to set up the first Demon score. Before Guidry scored, nine plays were called off and the Demons were held three times on sneaks from about the one foot line or less.

NSC presented its only threat of the first half early in the game. After Kenneth Brooks jumped on a fumble at the Canine 41 the Demons moved on the running of James Aymond, Neal Prather and Bobby Parker for a first down at the Tech 23. Here the Tech defense stiffened and held the Devils for no gain on three tires and Walker was sent in for a field goal. The boot had enough behind it but went off to the left.

After that first and only threat in the opening half, the Bulldog offense answered the challenge and rode for three touchdowns.

Following the field goal attempt, the Canines marched 80 yards in 11 plays to take the first score with 1:44 left in the opening quarter. Brunet aided the drive with a 23 yard spurt on the first play of the series and Tom Linder later bulled his way for 15 yards at the Demon 36 yard stripe.

A swap of penalties then left the ball at the Demon 27 before Brunet took it to the 23. Laird tossed to Jones to take the ball to the six and Brunet carried over on the next attempt.

Joe Peace jumped on a Barry Fresh fumble to give Tech the ball on the Demon 44 yard line and set up the second Bulldog tally. A penalty put the ball at the Tech 40 and the drive of 60 yards began.

After Brunet carried for eight yards, Laird again put the Bulldogs within striking distance with a 37 yard toss to Jones that carried to the Demon 15. Brunet then swept for nine down to the six and Phil Robertson then hit Jones in the end zone with 11:05 left in the half.

After NSC was unable to go on the next series, Tech's Jim Stringer returned a punt to the Demon 39 yard line, a 40 yard production effort. A rash of penalties called on both squads plus Laird being thrown back for a loss of 12 yards by Carroll Long saw Tech pushed as far back as its own 48 yard line. An 11 yard run by Eddie Taylor plus penalties against NSC moved the ball to the Demon five and Golman boomed up the middle for the score with 4:03 left in the period.

Marvin Bass Says Tigers Improved 11

BATON ROUGE (Special) — Coach Marvin Bass of South Carolina Saturday night termed this year's LSU team as much better than the one that "beat us 42-0 at Columbia in 1961."

Bass, a well-respected coach, admitted "we had a real fine effort and were in the ball game all the way. "I wish we could have pushed that one over at the end of the game," he said, pointing out that a pass interception set it up for the Gamecocks. He was referring to a pass thrown by quarterback Pat Screen which was intercepted on the Carolina 15 by Bobby Bryant and returned to the LSU 40. It was from that point that Carolina almost scored on the drive that carried to the final second.

"Playing down here presents some problems, but never-theless we like to play here and are looking forward to coming back next year," Bass said. "We played as well as we could against a fine football team and our young players grew up a lot by having played here.

"(Nelson) Stokley is a fine athlete; a great athlete; he keeps pressure on you all the time. LSU is well coached and an all-around good outfit. The fans saw two great receivers tonight in Moreau and our Wilburn. "On the blocked punt, we had a 10-man rush, which we used a great deal this season and so far we have blocked four."

Coach Charlie McClendon said he thought the game proved that South Carolina certainly merited the wins that they have scored so far this season. They seem to be getting stronger each week, he added.

"They surprised us somewhat with their defense in the first half," McClendon said, "It wasn't quite the type of defense we had expected. We made some adjustments at the halftime and made a good comeback. I'm naturally disappointed over the blocked kick. Our kicking game had been real good, but I just don't like to see them blocked and turned into touchdowns."

(Buster Brown, the LSU punter, ended up with a 37.3 average on six punts).

"Stockley had another fine game," McClendon said. "He got stuck a few blows tonight and really got tired late in the game. That's why I had to get him out of there. Needless to say, I'm always pleased with a win."

Vincent Sparks Delta State Rally To Beat Tampa

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Senior quarterback Mick Vincent passed 39 yards for his fourth touchdown with 1:40 remaining Saturday night to lead unbeaten Delta State College to a 33-32 come-from-behind victory over the University of Tampa.

The triumph was Delta's sixth of the year.

Vincent, icy-cool under fire, connected with scoring passes of 39, 53, 24 and 5 yards. Two of his bombs went to junior end Dwight Wiley.

It was Payne Spence's extra point kick—his third in five attempts—that gave the visitors from Cleveland, Miss., the margin of victory.

The Statesmen, behind 22-7 at the half, came roaring back with four touchdowns after intermission in a wild-scoring game before 8,000 fans.

The fatal blow to the Spartans came with 18 seconds left when reliable Kevin Hurt, Tampa's kicking specialist, topped the ball on a 37-yard field goal attempt and Delta recovered.

Bulldogs Spoil Howard Events With 7-0 Victory

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Southwestern Louisiana's Bulldogs took advantage of a late-pass interception to set up a fourth quarter touchdown to down Howard College 7-0 here Saturday.

Quarterack O'Neal Weber passed 22 yards to end Guy Harvey with 6:52 left in the game following Bulldog defensive back Tody Dupont's third interception of the day. Geral Landry kicked the extra point.

Other than that, the teams spent much of the day punting back and forth to each other. Neither mustered a serious scoring threat.

Fullback Larry Lackey gained 111 yards in 25 carries to pace Howard. Quarterback Jerry Coblin completed nine of 21 passes for 88 yards, but had five interceptions.

Weber hit six of 10 for 61 USL yards. Alternate quarterback Bill Bayard gained 54 yards in 10 tries.

UL is 3-2 now, and Howard is 2-4. The loss spoiled Howard's homecoming.

Alcorn's lone touchdown came on a 61-yard drive climaxed by fullback Craig Walker's eight yard run.

Cowboys Attempt Exhibition Repeat

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Dallas Cowboys, only team to beat Green Bay this year, will try to repeat today at Milwaukee when it really counts. The first time it was only another exhibition game.

Since that Aug. 28 defeat in Dallas, the Packers have rolled through the National Football League like a team that expects to clinch the championship by Thanksgiving Day. The Packers are 5-0 in the Western Conference, the Cowboys 2-3 in the East.

In other games, all of which will be played this afternoon, winless Washington (0-5) will be at St. Louis (4-1), Los Angeles (1-4) will be Baltimore (4-1), Cleveland (4-1) at New York (3-2), Minnesota (2-3) at San Francisco (3-2), Detroit, 3-2) at Chicago (2-3) and Pittsburgh (0-5) at Philadelphia (2-3).

Green Bay, Baltimore and St. Louis are big favorites. Philadelphia, Chicago and Cleveland are one-touchdown choices and San Francisco and Minnesota are about even.

The Packers have been winning on the pinpoint passing of Bart Starr and the kicking of Don Chandler despite a sluggish running game.

Dallas has been experimenting with quarterbacks but Don Meredith regained the job in the Cleveland game. Bob Hayes has a slight ankle sprain but is expected to play. The Packers get Ray Nitschke and Forrest Gregg back in action.

St. Louis hopes to get past Washington with Buddy Humphrey at quarterback, giving Charley Johnson's bruised left shoulder time to heal. Sonny Jurgensen has been reinstated as Washington's quarterback but the team has been shaken by dissension and the fans are yelling for the scalp of Coach Bill McPeak. Charley Taylor's foot, injured in the first exhibition game, still bothers him.

Baltimore plans to use Lenny Moore sparingly, if at all, against Los Angeles, a team that has not won at Baltimore since 1954. John Unitas is hitting his targets with precision and is closing in on Y.A. Tittle as the all time TD passer. The Rams are experimenting with rookie linebackers.

Cleveland's defending champions put a three-game winning streak on the line at Yankee Stadium. The Browns still are without their ace receiver, Paul Warfield, who was hurt in the All-Star game but are winning on Jim Brown's running and Frank Ryan's clutch passing to Gary Collins.

The Giants upset the Eagles last Sunday on Earl Morrall's four touchdown passes but a green defensive unit faces a severe test in the Browns.

The scrambling Vikings from Minnesota invade San Francisco where their leaky pass defense will get another test from John Brodie. With Tommy Mason and Bill Brown of the Vikings and Ken Willard and John David Crow of the 49ers there should be some running.

Gale Sayers, the finest rookie the Bears have come up with in years, gets a chance to show the Wrigley Field customers his stuff against the stiff Detroit defense. Rudy Bukich appears to have won the Bears' No. 1 quarterback job from Bill Wade with nine touchdowns and only one interception but the Lions have nabbed 13 enemy passes.

The Eagles go with King Hill again because Norm Snead still is out due to injuries and kicker Sam Baker is questionable. However, the winless Steelers have yet to score a touchdown on passes and have lost their ace receiver, Gary Ballman.

Raiders Ride By Mustangs In 26-24 Win

DALLAS (AP) — Kenneth Gill's toe and Tom Wilson's arm carried Texas Tech to a 26-24 victory over Southern Methodist Saturday night, leaving Arkansas the only undefeated team in the Southwest Conference.

In a wild and raucous game that had 40,000 spectators standing most of the time, Texas Tech hung grimly in the title race, moving into second place with a 3-1 record.

Arkansas leads the race with a 3-0 records.

Wilson passed for two touchdowns and set up a touchdown and field goal. Gill kicked field goals of 36 and 34 yards and two extra points furnishing the actual margin of victory.

The lead changed hands four times and Southern Methodist threatened until late in the fourth period when Tech recovered an SMU fumble on the 17-yard line. In five plays the Red Raiders had the touchdown on a pass by Wilson that put them out of SMU's reach.

SMU got another touchdown in the last two minutes but it left the Methodists still two points short.

Jimmy Howard Helps Harding Gain 14-0 Win

SEARCY, Ark. (Special) — Halfback Jimmy Howard rambled for 140 yards here Saturday afternoon, including one 43 yard touchdown jaunt, to lead Harding College past Millsaps 14-0 in Harding's Homecoming contest.

Howard, from Neville of Monroe, La., went into the contest as the second leading rusher for the Arkansas Intercollegiate Conference and picked up his whopping yardage total on 26 carries.

Harding picked up its first touchdown of the day with 3:40 left in the first quarter when fullback Gail Mote capped an 80 yard drive, going over from the eight. Donnie Cox converted.

Howard's long scoring scamper came in the third quarter after Harding gained possession at the 50.

One play gained seven yards to the 43 and then Howard hit over right guard, cut away from three men at the 35, was hit by the safety at the three and stumbled into the end zone. Cox again converted.

Harding is now 3-2-1 for the year and 1-2-1 in AIC action.

Lowly Rice Stuns 5th Ranked Texas

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Richard Parker kicked a 33-yard field goal with 43 seconds left in the game to give the lowly Rice Owls a stunning 20-17 victory Saturday night over Texas, the No. 5 team in the nation.

The Owls, winners of only one game this season, rallied for 17 points in the second half to overcome a 14-3 halftime lead by the Longhorns, who dropped their first game to Rice in Austin since 1953.

It pushed Rice's season record to 2-3 and Southwest Conference mark to 1-1. For the Longhorns, the nation's top-rated team until Arkansas beat them last week, it made their season record 4-2, 1-2 in conference. Texas has not lost two games in a regular season since 1960, when it had a 7-3 record.

It was an amazing victory for Rice, who had defeated only Louisiana Tech this year, and allowed Duke and Louisiana State to score more than 40 points each in losses to those two teams.

Punishing Texas quarterback Marvin Kristynik with vicious tackles, the Owls scored first on a 34-yard field goal by Parker in the first quarter but then fell behind when Texas pushed across two secondquarter touchdowns. Rice came back for a third quarter touchdown on quarterback David Ferguson's eight-yard run, tied the game on Chuck Latourette's seven-yard scamper in the final period and won it on Parker's soaring boot.

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Statistics of the Rice-Texas football game:

Texas was outplayed on the ground and in the air as Rice ran up a 273 to 236 total offensive margin. The Owls, who have shown little running the ball, cracked the rugged Longhorn defense for 145 yards, 73 of those by Ferguson who was injured in the fourth quarter and left the game.

Texas' first touchdown came on a one-yard run by Robert Leach, pulling away from Ronnie Cervenka to finish a 31-yard drive set up by Phil Harris' 64-yard kickoff return. Texas scored again when Kristynik passed six yards to Ragan Gennusa, who also tore loose from Cervenka's grasp at the goal line.

Latourette put the Owls back in the game, hustling 76 yards with the next kickoff to the Texas 20, where Bill Sullivan pulled him down. Ferguson swirled through five Longhorns four plays later for the score.

Latourette scored the Owls' next touchdown from the Texas seven climaxing a 62-yard drive. The big plays were two passes from Ferguson to Glen Hine, totaling 36 yards. It started after Texas gambled on fourth-and-two and failed.

Sumrall's 26-Yard Boot Upsets Auburn Tigers 3-0

AUBURN, Ala. (AP)—George Sumrall's 26-yard field goal gave Southern Mississippi a 3-0 upset football victory over Auburn Saturday, but it was Tommy Brennan's three pass interceptions that really made the difference.

Brennan, a 5-10 junior fullback from Savannah, Ga., stopped one Auburn drive within scoring distance early in the game and another near the close of the first half.

Before that he put the Southerners with touchdown range by plucking a ball from the hands of an intended Tiger receiver. But a stout Auburn defense stopped the drive and forced Sumrall to go for a 47-yard field goal attempt. It went wide.

The Southerners, long feared by major conference schools because of their winning habits, came to Auburn with a reputation for being stingy on pass defense.

They had intercepted 10 passes in their first five games this season. Saturday's performance ran the total to 14. Linebacker Tommy Youmans added one to the three pulled off by Brennan.

Southern might have won by a bigger score but quarterback Glen Bynum, went out with a leg injury in the third quarter after driving and passing the visitors to the Tiger nine.

Bynum's momentum might well have carried him on in to the end zone, because the Tiger defenders hadn't been able to stop him as long as he had two good legs.

It may have been a costly victory for Coach Pie Vann's upstart Southerners. Rabbit Brown, one of the Mississppi school's best breakaway runners, collided with teammate Troy Craft on a pass play and both players were knocked unconscious by the impact. Craft walked from the field after first aid, but Brown was taken to a hospital by ambulance with a possible concussion.

Southern's field goal came after Robert Fulghum, an Auburn safetyman, bobbled a punt and John Felton recovered for the visitors on the Tiger 30.

A 21-yard pass from Bynum to end Bill Gorney gave Southern a first down on the Auburn four, but two consecutive penalties shoved the ball back and the Southerners had to settle for three points instead of a possible touchdown.

Earlier the Tigers had been in position for a 28-yard field goal attempt. Don Lewis, kicking against the wind, had his effort deflected by Southern guard Doug Satcher. This could well have been the key play of the Southern Mississippi victory.

The Southerners, playing a conservative game in the last quarter, kicked on third down time after time rather than risk loss on a blocked punt. Auburn coach Ralph Jordan commented that, "We got beat. We got beat good."

"There is no doubt that we didn't play as well as we were capable of playing," Jordan added. "Southern Mississippi deserved to win. They have an experienced defense and played a stout game."

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP)—Memphis State had an easy time whipping McNeese State 28-0 Saturday night.

Memphis State quarterback Billy Fletcher put on an aerial show and fullback Herb Covington ran almost at will against the game but outmanned Cowboy defenses.

Fletcher connected on 13 of 24 passes for 144 yards and one touchdown while Covington rambled 145 yards in 21 carries.

The McNeese drive came from third string quarterback Baron Thomas who came off the bench to hit on 11 of 26 passes for 138 yards.

McNeese end Frank Miller caught ten passes for 133 yards.

Memphis State held the Cowboys ground game to 48 yards.

Memphis State scored the first time it got its hands on the ball. The Tigers went 68 yards in seven plays.

Nebraska Bombs Way To Homecoming Victory

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Third-ranked Nebraska bombed Colorado with long gains and scoring spectaculars Saturday, including a 95-yard pass-run touchdown, and whipped the previously undefeated Buffaloes 38-13.

The big thriller for a homecoming crowd of 54,110 came late in the first quarter of the Big Eight Conference game after a Colorado punt had put Nebraska in the shadow of its own goal. Quarterback Fred Duda hit end Freeman White with a pass, and White outhustled Colorado defenders to score.

It was the season's sixth straight victory for Nebraska. For Colorado, it was the first lost after three victories and two ties.

Colorado defenders, who had allowed opponents only 28 points in five games, contained Nebraska rushers moderately well but couldn't stop the Husker air attack. The nation's top scoring and top rushing team going into the contest, Nebraska gained 149 yards on the ground and 223 by air.

Colorado was held to two field goals on boots of 34 and 36 yards by Frank Rogers in the first half but pushed across a touchdown with 5½ minutes remaining of the game.

Dennis Drummond intercepted a Nebraska pass and ran it to Nebraska's 20. A Bernie McCall pass to Tad Polumbus and a short run advnced the ball to the seven. Sophomore halfback Larry Plantz skirted end to score.

A punt reception fumble by Plantz early in the game was recovered by Nebraska's Harry Wilson on the 50 to set up the first Nebraska score. A 16-yard Duda pass to Tony Jeter coupled with a 15-yard penalty put Larry Wachtholtz in position to kick a 35-yard field goal into a 22-mile per hour wind.

Wachholtz, the country's punt return leader, ran back the ensuing Colorado kick 60 yards before being downed on Colrado's 12. Wilson dived a yard for a touchdown four plays later.

A later first half touchdown run by Duda and a 14-yard scoring pass from Duda to White put Nebraska in front 31-6 at the intermission, and substitute quarterback Bob Churchich fattened the margin with a fourth quarter touchdown after a scoreless third period.

A fumble recovery by Barry Alvarez on Colorado's 20 made the final tally possible.

Irish Swarm Past Southern Cal, 28-7

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Battering Larry Conjar's four touchdowns swept Notre Dame to a crunching 28-7 football victory Saturday over unbeaten Southern California, whose heralded Mike Garrett was almost completely shackled.

Conjar's feat tied a modern Irish single game scoring record.

The Trojans and national rushing leader Garrett never had a chance against a devastating Irish attack in the nationally televised game.

Conjar spearheaded the relentless Notre Dame ground game, piling up 116 yards on 25 tries, including his four scoring smashes of two yards or less.

Garrett, who took a five-game total of 852 yards into the game for nationally fourth-ranked USC, wound up with only 43 yards in 16 carries, most coming after Notre Dame had swept to a 28-0 lead.

Southern California, unbeaten since an opening 20-20 tie with Minnesota, finally scored in the fourth period against the relaxed Irish on an eight-yard pass from Troy Winslow to John Thomas.

Notre Dame, No. 7 in The Associated Press poll, simply blasted the Trojans off their feet at the outset, scoring twice in the first period and once each in the second and third quarter for a 28-0 lead before the Trojans even faintly came to life.

The field was soggy from frequent showers, but it didn't slow up the Irish, who blasted to Conjar touchdowns on drives of 69, 67, 45 and 32 yards — all sustained marches.

Conjar's four touchdowns equalled the modern Irish single game mark previously shared by Bob Kelly in 1944 against Pittsburgh, Neil Worden in 1951 against Indiana and Johnny Lattner in 1953 against Southern California.

Garrett had a necklace of Irish tacklers around him all afternoon as he fell far below his five-game rushing average of 170.1.

The game really was locked up for Notre Dame in the first half, when the Irish built a 21-0 lead and had held Southern California to 13 rushing yards — seven by Garrett on nine carries.

Conjar set the game tempo in Notre Dame's first scoring strike, carrying six times for 31 of the 45 yards in the march and bowling across from the two.

Still in the first quarter, Conjar dove over from the two when the Irish benefitted by a Trojan pushing penalty and pass interference allowed on USC's three.

In the second quarter, the Irish paraded 69 yards on 10 plays with Nick Eddy's 34-yard scamper to the Trojan 13 eventually setting up Conjar's third touchdown plunge from the one.

Kentucky Follows Norton Past 'Dogs

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Kentucky, on the passing of Rick Norton, exploded for four touchdowns in the second period to overcome a Georgia lead and down the Bulldogs 28-10 Saturday night in a Southeastern Conference football game.

Georgia had jumped to a 10-0 first quarter lead, but threatened only once more when the Bulldogs marched 99 yards only to fumble on the Kentucky one.

After gaining only 12 yards in the first period, Kentucky picked up 181 in the second. Three of the touchdowns came on Norton passes.

The senior quarterback from Louisville hit 11 of 19 aerials for 187 yards. He tossed to six different receivers, but three — Rodger Bird, Larry Seiple and Rick Kestner — accounted for 162 of the yards.

Georgia rang up its field goal and touchdown in the first quarter when Kirby Moore's punts, helped by a 15 mile-per-hour wind, kept Kentucky in the hole.

The field goal was junior Bobby Etter's eighth of the year and set a Georgia school record for field goal scoring in six straight games.

Moore, a sophomore from Dothan, Ala., started at quarterback while Preston Ridlehuber shifted to halfback in place of the injured Bob Taylor. Moore suffered a broken nose in the third period after completing five of eight passes for 59 yards and gaining 38 yards rushing.

Kentucky got its offense rolling as the first period ended and scored with 10:51 left to go in the half after marching 80 yards in 10 plays.

The Wildcats drove 44 yards, 41 and 23 for their other three touchdowns.

Kentucky's final score came after Tony Manzonelli recovered a fumble. On the second play Norton passed 22 yards to Seiple in the end zone.

Georgia's 99-yard drive opened when sophomore Terry Sellers intercepted a Norton pass on the goal line.

Moore moved Georgia to its 41, but there suffered the broken nose on a keeper play.

Lynn Hughes took over at quarterback and passed the Bulldogs to the Kentucky one yard line, but sophomore Harold Lambert intercepted to stop the drive.

Tech Experimenting With Tallest Lineup

RUSTON (Special) — Coach Scotty Robertson of Louisiana Tech is experimenting with height in early basketball practices as the Bulldogs prepare for their season opener here Dec. 1 against Little Rock University.

The Canines, who surprisingly tied for second in the Gulf States Conference race last year with a 6-4 record and had an 11-11 overall mark, will field their tallest team since the heyday of Jackie Moreland.

Robertson has a club lacking in experience with six one-year lettermen returning and without a senior on the squad. His toughest problem will be finding scoring punch to offset the loss by graduation of four-year star Jerry Hood, who averaged 23.4 points per game last season.

Starters in the early going include 6-10 Bob Watson, junior from Logan, West Va.; 6-11 Richard Peek, junior transfer from Pensacola, Fla.; 5-10 Leon Barmore from Ruston; 5-10 Jon Pat Stephenson from Shreveport Woodlawn, and 6 - 4 Malcolm Smith, sophomore from Neville of Monroe. Barmore and Stephenson are also juniors.

Others bidding for varsity posts are Jim Pruett, 5-10 junior from Shreveport Fair Park who has been hampered by an injury; 6-5 Dan McCormick, a junior from Many; 6-5 soph Terry Ewing of Jonesboro; 6-3 George Stone, soph from Ruston.

Tom Gregory, 6-6 soph from St. Joseph; and Billy Ray Stokes, 6-3 junior from Yazoo City, Miss., a transfer student from Holmes Junior College.

Pruett and McCormick are lettermen while Stone and Ewing are up from Tech's frosh team of a year ago. Gregory was a squadman last year. Four of the starters, beside Peek who played at the University of Florida, are returning lettermen.

Tech's freshman squad, with about 15 candidates, are working out under direction of Don Landry, Tech assistant coach. Several of the frosh are expected to see service with the varsity during the campaign.

Tennessee Is 17-8 Winner Over Cougars

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee shook off its grief from the deaths last week of three assistant coaches and ground out a 17-8 football victory over Houston Saturday.

The triumph kept the Volunteers in the ranks of the nation's undefeated teams, with a record of three victories and two ties.

Houston now has a 1-5 mark.

After a scoreless first half, Tennessee broke into the scoring column in the third period on a 20-yard field goal by David Leake, capping a 77-yard drive. Doug Archibald grabbed an errant pass by Houston quarterback Bo Burris and dashed 20 yards for the Vols' first touchdown. Leake made good the first of two extra points.

Halfback Walter Chadwick sprinted six yards for Tennessee's second touchdown in the final quarter, after Cougar safetyman Mike Spratt fumbled on Houston's 23 and Stan Mitch recovered for Tennessee.

Tennessee's stubborn defense, led by linebacker Frank Emanuel, kept Houston outside Tennessee's 20 until the fading moments of the game, when Burris mounted a passing attack which produced the Cougar touchdown.

Burris hit end Tom Beer with a ix-yard tos for the touchdown, and then connected on the same play for a two-point conversion.

The scoring drive covered 67 yards and was Houston's longest march.

A brief memorial service was conducted before the game for Tennessee assistant coaches Bill Majors, Bob Jones and Charles Rash. Majors and Jones were killed outright last Monday when a train struck their car at a crossing. Rash died Friday of injuries suffered in the accident.

Tennessee's reserves were on the field when the Cougars scored with one minute, 15 seconds left. Neither team made a serious scoring threat in the first half, which settled into a kicking duel between Tennessee's Jackie Cotton and Houston's Ken Hebert.

The Volunteers reeled off three first downs and 48 yards on runs by quarterback Charlie Fulton, Chadwick and Mitchell the first time they got the ball. But the drive died when Houston linebacker Joe Rafter intercepted Fulton's pass on the Cougar 37.

Another short Tennessee drive early in the second quarter ended at the Houston 24, when Houston's defense stiffened and forced a kick.

Houston got across midfield only once before the intermission, and that came when Fulton fumbled and Mike Payte recovered on the Cougar 39.

But on the next play, Burris' pass was intercepted by Tennessee's Mack Gentry on the Vols' 41.

Hungry Rebels Defeat Vandy

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — Mississippi's hungry Rebels used devastating line play and an aggressive defense Saturday to batter Vanderbilt 24-7 in a Southeastern Conference football battle.

The victorious Rebels capitalized on a bad break for Vandy, a long pass and a pass interception for their touchdowns after a scoreless first period.

Vanderbilt, tough on defense —particularly in the early stages—showed almost no offense and lost its fighting edge in the late stages when superior Ole Miss depth began to tell.

The turning point came early in the second period when Vanderbilt punter Jerry Shuford, deep in his own territory, got a bad snap from center on a punt play. In stooping to pick up the ball, officials ruled his knee touched the ground before he boomed off a 54-yard kick. Ole Miss took over on the Commodore 15.

Halfback Doug Cunningham circled left end on the first play for the touchdown. The Rebs way.

They added a field goal before intermission and a touchdown in each of the final quarters to win easily.

Both of the other touchdowns were equally exciting. In the third quarter, quarterback Jimmy Heidel heaved a long pass to end Rocky Fleming. He caught the ball on the dead run and sprinted 30 yards on a 60-yard scoring play.

The final Ole Miss score came when defensive halfback Tommy James pulled in a straying Vandy pass on the Rebel 46 and ran to the Vandy 21.

On the sixth play, halfback Mike Dennis slashed through tackle for the touchdown.

Guard Jimmy Keyes, who booted the three conversion, got a second quarter field goal from 22 yards out when a Rebel drive stalled on the Vandy five.

Vanderbilt, which missed a golden scoring opportunity midway in the first quarter, got its touchdown in the fourth with the help of a long punt return and a pass interference ruling against Ole Miss.

Halfback Steven Bevil took a punt on his 24 and went all the way to the Ole Miss 46. From the 31, quarterback Bob Kerr tossed a pass to the goal line and James again intercepted the free ball after it had bounced off several hands. But officials ruled pass interference at the eight. And the Commodores scored on the third play, with fullback Jim Whiteside going the final three yards through the middle.

The victory was the third against three losses for Ole Miss and gave the Rebels a 2-3 SEC mark. Vandy took its fourth loss against a victory and a tie and its third straight SEC defeat against no victories.

Year's 1st Win

VILLANOVA, Pa. (AP) — Villanova sophomore Dennis Ditze returned a kickoff 80 yards for a touchdown and quarterback Dave Connell scored twice Saturday as the Wildcats gained their first victory of the year by beating West Chester 28-13.

'Bama's Explosive Rushing Blasts Florida State 21-0

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — The Alabama Crimson Tide ripped Florida State apart with an explosive ground game and sharp passing when needed and whipped the Seminoles 21-0 Saturday.

Fullback Leslie Kelley scored two touchdowns—one set up by a brilliant 43-yard run by fellow fullback Steve Bowman and the second after a 28-yard fake field goal play put the ball on the FSU one.

Quarterback Steve Sloan scored Alabama's other touchdown on a two-yard plunge. That drive featured a 46-yard pass play kom Sloan to end Tommy Tolleson.

The Alabama defense intercepted three of Florida State quarterback Ed Pritchett's passes. Halfback Bobby Johns intercepted two and end Frank Whaley came up with the third. Whaley's interception came with only seconds left and FSU deep in Alabama territory, trying desperately to get on the scoreboard.

Alabama also missed two field goal attempts.

Florida State's deepest penetration came early in the second quarter when the Seminoles drove to the Alabama 19. But the Alabama defense stiffened and stifled the attack.

In the second half, Alabama Coach Paul Bryant called largely upon his reserves, and substitute Ken Stabler handled the signal calling chores.

Stabler, nicknamed "the Snake", staged a razzle-dazzle running attack including a 21-yard jaunt on the fake field goal play which set up the final touchdown.

Stabler also ran for a two-point conversion from a similar fake kick position.

Florida State, now with three losses and two victories, showed promise of cracking the scoring column, but each time the Seminoles charged deep into Alabama territory, an incomplete pass or an interception cut them off.

Alabama scored the first touchdown late in the first quarter after a poor FSU punt gave the Tide the ball at midfield. On the next play, Sloan pitched the ball to Bowman who dodged two defenders and raced down the left sideline. A key block by Kelley opened the door.

Then Sloan called on Kelley four straight times and on the final shot Kelley banged over from about one yard out.

The second Alabama touchdown came in the second quarter when Sloan, using the aerial route most of the way, covered 81 yards in 10 plays for a touchdown with Sloan pushing through the last two yards.

Field Goal Beats TCU Frogs, 3-0

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — A 26-yard second quarter field goal by Frank Pearce stood up for a 3-0 Clemson victory over Texas Christian Saturday in a defensive football game studded with 23 punts, 12 by TCU.

The Texans managed only two first downs and ran and passed for only 72 yards. Clemson had 18 first downs and gained 302 yards.

Clemson mounted the only two sustained drives of the day, one of 64 yards climaxed by Pearce's three-pointer with eight seconds left in the first half. The other covered 70 yards but ended in the third period with a fumble on the goal line of the Southwest Conference visitors.

State Launches Turkey Docket

With Sam Hanna

Near Lake Providence

Louisiana for the past several years hasn't been in the same league with Alabama or Mississippi in the field of turkey management, but that may change in the future.

Turkeys, the greatest game bird going, are making a slow but sure comeback in the Pelican State, but not by accident.

The state for the past few years has been borrowing or begging or buying turkeys from other states for restocking purposes here. For example, a few years ago the state bought turkeys and released them in areas around Louisiana, including the Chicago Mill Game Management Area.

Last year Louisiana traded 50 deer from the marsh for 50 turkeys from Florida. Some of those turkeys were released on the Jackson-Bienville Game Management Area.

But Louisiana has only one area that has enough turkeys to afford trapping for restocking purposes — the Georgia-Pacific Game Management Area near Bastrop. About 65 or 70 turkeys have been trapped off Georgia-Pacific over a two or three year period for restocking.

Richard Yancey, assistant director of the Wild Life & Fisheries Commission, says the state has needed an area for trapping during the past 15 years.

So this is what the state did: Yancy made arrangements through several hunting clubs in Mississippi to trap turkeys off their property bordering the Mississippi River. Commission personnel will trap the birds.

Already some 65 turkeys have been trapped.

In conjunction with this undertaking in Mississippi, which incidentially is costing the state nothing except for manpower, the commission made a management, agreement with landowners along the Mississippi near Lake Providence.

Turkeys trapped in Mississippi will be released on their property and in return the commission will have authority to trap turkeys there for 10 years once the flock builds up.

Yancey says the turkeys are being trapped in the Greenville area, which he says has the greatest population of turkeys of any where in the entire Southeast.

This arrangement will sidestep the problem of opposition from residents who object when the state traps game from their area. That's one of the biggest problems involved in turkey management.

At any rate Yancey feels the state is making progress, but of course it takes the cooperation of the people too. It defeats the state's purpose when the hunter out for deer or squirrels lucks upon a turkey and adds him to his bag.

After all, there are between seven and eight million acres of land in Louisiana capable of supporting a turkey population. To fill the bill, we've got a long way to go.

About Ducks, Geese

Geese have been flying south for the past few weeks, but you can bet few people have heard the once-familiar honk of the big Canadian. The reason is plain enough. Few Canadian honkers come this way anymore.

Yancey, whose pet subject is waterfowl, told us on the phone Friday that Nelson Summerell, the Ferriday pilot, surveyed the waterfowl picture around Catahoula Lake a few days ago.

He estimated about 180,000 ducks on Catahoula, plus about 7,500 snowgeese.

At this time Yancey says there approximately 900,000 ducks in the state and about 100,000 geese.

But back to the Canadian geese.

Louisiana is trying to raise its own Canadian geese in Cameron Parish in an effort to get that variety back into the state. Illinois and Missouri, shortly after World War II, intensified their management programs, and as a result the Canadian goose began staying there. They quit coming to Arkansas and Louisiana.

Louisiana a year or so ago brought in 70 geese from Wisconsin. They produced about 150 geese and are sticking around Cameron Parish.

But another experiment didn't pan out too well. Louisiana brought in 1600 Canadians from Swan Lake Refuge in Missouri.

Yancey says they didn't reproduce because there were too many of them in a too small area.

The program continues.

Arkansas, however, appears to be doing a better job, or having better luck. Arkansas also began bringing in geese, hoping they would attract more of their fellow flock.

During the 1962-63 season a more intensified program was initiated. Mass transfers of geese were started. Over 3,000 geese were transplanted that year.

Beginning in 1963, a three-year extension of the program was approved by the Bureau of Sport Fisheries & Wildlife. The transplants were increased.

The best results have been at Holla Bend — a peak population last year of 3,500 migrant geese, an increase of about 1,700 over the previous year.

White River had a peak of 3,300, an increase of 400 over the previous year.

But, like Louisiana's problem, the success of the Arkansas program depends on whether the big concentrations in Missouri, Illinois and Wisconsin can be broken up.

Ouachita Wildlife Activities

The Ouachita Wildlife Unit has a busy schedule ahead.

At its regular meeting Tuesday night at 7:30 p.m. at the Virginia Hotel, the club will present a program for the public on deer — the outlook of the deer population in Louisiana.

Chief Joe L. Herring of Baton Rouge will be present if his schedule permits. Biologists Cliff Williams and Jerry Farrar of Monroe are definites on the program.

Also, the club will present a color television set to a contest winner.

After the Tuesday night meeting, the club will make plans for the presentation of Wally Taber at Neville Auditorium November 6th. Showtime will be 8 p.m. and tickets are on sale now.

Taber, from Dallas, is one of the nation's best camermen on wildlife. Proceeds from the show will go to the club's activities.

Little Man's Corner

It was fall at last and the little men made news afield.

But one particular sportsman didn't make his news afield. Paul Reitzammer, 317 Paragoud, of Monroe won third place in the category of recreation at the Texas Inventors Association.

Paul invented a trotline contained and dispenser, which walked off with third place honors at the inventors Congress sponsored by the Texas Chamber of Commerce and the Texas Industrial Commission.

Paul says the trotliner could take his rig, attach the line to a limb, then paddle off to another object as the dispenser dropped the hooks in place.

He hopes to see it go on the market.

Also locally, Cliff Williams says he knows of three deer that were killed in the area by archers — two at Georgia-Pacific and one at Russell Sage.

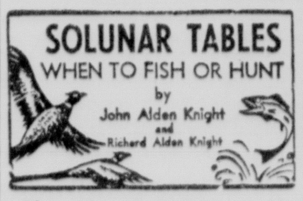
At Black Bayou, David Jackson landed a bass that weighed 6-lb., 3-oz., while Johnny Danna got the limit. His averaged three pounds each.

James Doss caught five bass that weighed about 18 pounds. J. L. Connerly landed seven while R. J. Caldwell and A. Olsen caught 16 large spec.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Walker of West Monroe bagged their limit of squirrels in Concordia Parish. Mike Walker of Lake St. John also got the limit.

Roland Dinger caught the limit of white perch in Cross Bayou.

In the Lake Providence area, Sam Foutz caught a 28 - pound gar — 4 feet, 9 inches long — on a rod and reel with an H&H.



The solunar periods, during which there is maximum fish and wildlife activity, are printed below. Major periods began at the times shown and last for an hour and a half or two hours. Minor periods are shorter.

Porkers Bulldoze To 55-20 Victory

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Swift, powerful Arkansas, playing for the first time ever as the nation's No. 1 team, made outmuscled North Texas State its 18th straight victim, 55-20, Saturday night.

Tailback Bob Burnett scored three times on runs of 1, 11 and 2 yards and wingback Jim Lindsey bulled 10 and 15 yards for touchdowns as Arkansas continued its winning streak, longest in the land by a major college team.

Wingback Harry Jones, a 195-pounder speedster, galloped 83 yards for another Arkansas Score, but later was injured and taken to a hospital for X rays. His injuries were not determined.

The Razorbacks rolled up 533 yards in total offense, and Eagle quarterback Vidal Carlin hit on 32 of 54 passes for 306 yards, four intercepted. North Texas flanked John Love, third in the nation in pass receiving, caught 14, setting a school record, for 167 yards.

After Jones' long scoring run, and a one-yard scoring dive by quarterback Jon Brittenum, the Eagles, trailing 14-0, made a comeback bid. Carlin hit James Bower on a seven-yard touchdown strike, and Love raced 67 yards for a touchdown on a punt return.

A missed extra point left the Razorbacks in front, 14-13, and they piled up a 55-13 advantage before the Eagles scored again.

2nd Ranked Michigan State Scrambles To Topple Purdue

LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Second-ranked Michigan State scrambled back from the brink of extinction on the running of Bob Apisa and Clint Jones and beat Purdue 14-10 Saturday on two fourth-quarter touchdowns.

The victory moved the Spartans along toward the Big Ten football championship and a Rose Bowl trip as they ran their conference record to 4-0. Purdue dropped to 2-1.

The rugged Spartan defense kept Purdue in the hole throughout the second half after the Boilermakers had built up a 10-0 halftime lead on the deadly short passes of Bob Griese and the hard running of Randy Minniear.

Keeping Griese punting from near his goal line in the second half, Michigan State finally started clicking and scored on touchdown runs of 50 and 40 yards.

The first Spartan touchdown was all Jones and Apisa except for one carry by Dwight Lee. Apisa went the last few inches, and Jones got a two-point conversion on a pass from Steve Juday from a fake kick formation.

The winning touchdown drive was helped by 20 yards of Purdue penalties for offside and a personal foul. Jones went from the eight, getting a fine block from Apisa.

More ...

Purdue got its points in the first half on a 20-yard field goal by the versatile Griese, a seven-yard touchdown pass from Griese to Jim Finley and Griese's conversion kick.

Griese stayed with the short pass most of the time in the first half, hitting end Bob Hadrick and flanker Finley with bullets over the line — not calling on his line to hold the Michigan State line for long ones.

Hadrick caught two passes in the first quarter drive that put Purdue in a position for Griese to kick the field goal. Minniear broke away for a 23-yard run on a fourth-and-one situation. The Boilermakers used most of the second period in the touchdown drive that carried from their own four after they had held the Spartans for downs.

The seven-yard toss to Finley put the ball in the end zone, and Griese kicked the extra point.

Kim King Hurls Georgia Tech To Easy 37-16 Rout Of Navy

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—Sophomore sensation Kim King fired three touchdown passes to shatter Navy's defense Saturday, and Georgia Tech added two long punt returns to win its fourth straight football game, 37-16.

King's pinpoint passing and devastating speed boosted the Yellow Jackets to a 23-0 halftime lead. He pitched scoring strikes of 18, 17 and 10 yards and set up a 31-yard field goal by Tommy Carmichael.

Tech put the game out of the Midshipmen's reach in the first five minutes of the second half.

Halfback Bill Eastman gathered in a Navy punt on his own 14 and dashed through a host of Midshipmen on the 35. The fleet junior outran the pack to the end zone for an 86-yard scoring run to give Tech a 30-0 lead with 11:49 left in the third quarter.

A minute later, safety man Sammy Burke fielded another Navy punt and raced 77 yards for a touchdown to put Tech out front 37-0.

Navy finally broke into the scoring column near the end of the third quarter when quarterback Bruce Bickel passed 24 yards to halfback Calvin Huey and then fired a 13-yard scoring strike to halfback Steve Shrawder to cap a 78-yard scoring drive in 10 plays. Bickel ran for two points.

A SMALL AMERICAN flag, 6 by 10 inches in size, flies under the regulation size yellow and red flag of South Viet Nam at Plei Me outpost. It was raised a few days ago by Sgt. 1.C. Joseph D. Bailey of Lebanon, Tenn. He raised the miniature stars and stripes on a staff next to the tin-roofed, bambo-sided quarters of the U.S. advisors. Minutes later he was killed as he went on mission to search for crew of helicopter downed by Viet Cong. (AP Wirephoto via radio from Saigon)

Small American Flag Flies Over Plei Me

(EDITOR'S NOTE: AP Photographer Eddie Adams talked with defenders of Plei Me while shooting pictures of the besieged Special Forces camp. Here is his story.)

By EDIE ADAMS

PLEI Me, South Viet Nam (AP) — The Special Forces camp at Plei Me is a blasted wreck. It looked Saturday as if it had been tortured by an earthquake.

But blood of Viet Cong casualties from four days of fighting stained the ground outside and two flags still rippled defiantly above the camp.

One is the yellow and red flag of South Viet Nam. It is of regulation size. The other is the United States flag. It is small, 6 by 10 inches.

The American flag was raised the other day by Sgt.1.C. Joseph D. Bailey of Lebanon, Tenn.

Five hundred Viet Cong guerrillas surrounded Plei Me Tuesday night. Wednesday they hit the camp in force with mortar and machine gun fire. The garrison of about 300 U.S.-trained Montagnard tribesmen and a handful of American soldiers was ready.

Bailey raised the miniature Stars and Stripes on a staff next to the tin-roofed, bamboo-sided quarters of the U.S. advisers.

"If we've got to go down," he said, "we'll go down under our own colors."

Minutes later Bailey was dead.

He went out with Capt. Harold M. Moore of Pekin, Ill., and SP.4 Daniel Shea, a medic from Boston, Mass., to search for the crew of a helicopter the Viet Cong had blasted out of the sky. The four Americans in the helicopter had perished in the crash.

Small arms fire killed Bailey. The captain and the medic, himself wounded, carried the body back into the camp.

"Let's keep that flag up there," Moore said.

The captain, his face darkened by the sun and simmering heat, greeted the hard-core Viet Cong with enthusiasm. His carbine never seemed to be silent.

"Those Viet Cong are just like ants, swarming all over the place," he said, slapping another clip into his weapon. "The first time they came at us they had large bushes tied to their backs. We let 'em have it. They were out in the open and it was just like shooting ducks.

"But they can fight; some got through our barbed wire. They overran an outpost right at the start and took a Montagnard lieutenant prisoner, but he escaped later on.

"He told me a Chinese officer was with the Viet Cong and that this Chinese kept kicking his VC (Viet Cong) counterpart right in the seat of the pants."

Another U.S. adviser said some of the enemy machine gunners were chained to their guns to insure that they would stay put.

The Viet Cong have given Plei Me little rest. They have been pounded day and night by U.S. warplanes, but were still arround in force Saturday.

Other planes have dropped badly needed supplies into the camp by multicolored parachutes. Hazards showed up in this operation.

Falling freight killed some men of the garrison.

A consignment of mortar shells verred into Red lines. The Viet Cong seized the shells as soon as they hit the ground. They managed to fire a few into the camp. Most of the supply, however, was unfit for their mortars. The Viet Cong firing pins could not trigger them.

First Sgt. Everett M. Hamby of Fayetteville, N.C., was gulping a cup of coffee when the Viet Cong rallied for one of their assaults.

"I dropped my coffee and grabbed a weapon," Hamby said. "The mortars were coming in. One knocked me into a trench. We took about 20 casualties in the first 10 minutes.

"The Viet Cong came up to the barbed wire to get their dead and wounded. They blew out our front gate and for a while it looked as if they would get in.

"But we poured it to them. We let them have it, but good."

Hamby said the Montagnards and Americans at Plei Me were unable to use their recoilless rifles, a form of artillery.

"We were afraid we'd hit the Montagnard families who lived just outside the camp," he said.

The first reinforcements arrived by helicopters Thursday — two companies of Vietnamese rangers. With the rangers was their senior U.S. adviser, Maj. Charles Beckwith of Atlanta, Ga.

Helicopters brought in another detachment of rangers Friday.

Though morale remained high, Beckwith called that night for a battalion of American troops as further reinforcements.

"If you want to hold this camp," the major told his commanding officer by radio, "send me at least one U.S. battalion."

There was no immediate response.

Among the wounded was Charles Burnett, a British cameraman working for KTLA-TV at Los Angeles, Calif. A burst of machinegun fire hit Burnett as he talked with a U.S. adviser.

Heavy fighting kept up throughout Thursday and Friday. Through Friday six U.S. aircraft were lost: Two helicopters, a B57 Canberra bomber, two Skyraiders and a reconnaissance photo plane.

About 100 enemy bodies were counted. Viet Cong reinforcements came, but it was impossible to estimate the enemy's strength.

Ellender Given Tribute; Solons Cite His Worth

WASHINGTON (Special) — The U. S. Senate took over an hour's time from the rush toward Congressional adjournment to pay tribute to Sen. Allen J. Ellender, one of its senior members.

Twenty one senators, representing states from Hawaii and Alaska to Maine and Florida saluted Ellender for 29 years of service to Louiaiana and the nation in the United States Senate in fields of soil and water conservation, agriculture and forestry, and education.

Ellender is the Senate's fourth-ranking member and is chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. He is also chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee on Public Works.

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield and Minority Leader Everett Dirksen both agreed that their colleague was one of the senate's hardest working members, and one of the most effective. Mansfield referred to Ellender as an "expert in the field of foreign aid".

The speakers were led off by Sen. Robert Byrd of West Virginia, who said the tributes were "well deserved and overdue".

Before adjournment had been accomplished early Saturday morning, by final action on sugar legislation, senators from both sides of the aisle rose to join in paying tribute to Ellender.

A figure-flattering silhouette dress, this stars the touch of nude beauty with a shoulder-to-shoulder crescent cut-out in a softly cowled neckline — the fabric here is feathery - soft wool of "pink champagne."

Honeymoon Wardrobe Suggested

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

Q: What would my husband-to-be and I need for a mid-fall honeymoon trip to Grand Canyon and Yellowstone National Parks? We will drive across the country.

A: Fairly rugged sportswear separates would be best, with skirts, jackets, sweater tops, blouses and slacks co-ordinated to go with each other. This would be true for both of you. Be sure to include shoes good for climbing and country walking. If you plan to stop anywhere for dinner, take a simple A-line kind of dress, and a pair of low-heeled pumps. He will get by with a sports jacket and slacks if he includes a white shirt.

Q: My daughter will be married early in November. I am 62, a size 42. What colors and accessories should I wear? It will be a morning mass.

A: If the wedding is formal, you can wear lace, peau de soie, silk faille or taffeta. Color choices can include rose, any blue, darker greens, darker beige hues. Bridal departments can assist you with the choice of dress. A hat should be worn, to match or contrast with the dress, shoes can be dark or match the dress. Handbag can be dark silk, gloves are usually white.

Miss Charlotte Little Weds Clay Andrew Ray

Solemnized Saturday, October 23 at 10 a.m. in St. Paschal's Catholic Church was the ceremony which united in marriage Miss Charlotte Little, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Little, 2911 DeSiard, Monroe, and Clay Andrew Ray, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ray of Bunkie.

Bronze and gold chrysanthemums on either side of the altar were accented by tiers of candles. The Rev. Vitus Duschinsky performed the double ring ceremony with nuptial music provided by Sister Francella.

Escorted by her father who gave her in marriage the bride wore a floor length gown of ecru imported silk brocade, fashioned with a sleeveless fitted bodice and softly flared skirt. An attached back panel of self fabric fell from shoulder to hem. Her shoulder length veil of illusion was also in ecru and was held in place by a pillbox of the ecru brocade. She wore long white kid gloves and carried a bouquet of feathered chrysanthemums in shades of bronze and gold encircling a white orchid.

Miss Glenda Hart was maid of honor and only attendant for the bride. Her ecru floor length sheath featured elbow sleeves and a scoop neckline and was fashioned of the same imported silk brocade as the bride's gown. Her head dress was of ecru brocade made into a large bow and she also wore long white kid gloves, and carried a bouquet of feathered chrysanthemums in shades of bronze and gold.

Serving as best man for the bridegroom was Dayton Matthews. Ushers were Marshall Williams and Vernon Ray.

For the occasion the bride's mother wore a green wool crepe model with black accessories. The groom's mother chose a navy wool crepe with black accessories and both mothers wore corsages of bronze baby chrysanthemums.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Paragon club where bronze and gold chrysanthemums were placed at vantage points throughout the reception area.

Covered with a white linen cloth the bride's table was centered with an arrangement of bronze and gold chrysanthemums in a silver bowl flanked by tall tapers in silver candelabra. The bride's book table was ornamented with greenery and miniature arrangement similar to that on the main serving table. Mrs. Dayton Matthews presided at the bride's book.

Mrs. Joe Ford Jr. served the ecru wedding ring cake, which was adorned with white flowers and assisting with the courtesies were Mrs. Morgan Crawford Jr. and Miss Judy Landreaux. Tulle rice bags were presented guests by Misses Penny Williams, Denise Russell and Deborah Russell, all nieces of the bride.

For the couple's wedding trip to New Orleans the bride changed to an ecru wool crepe suit featuring a slim skirt and box jacket. She wore bone lizard shoes and bag and her corsage was the orchid from her bouquet.

They will be at home at New Iberia where Mr. Ray is with the U. S. Departmeent of Agriculture in Soil Conservation Service. The bride was graduate from Ouachita Parish high school and attended Northeast Louisiana State College. Mr. Ray finished Washington high school and was graduated from the University of Southwestern Louisiana where he was a member of Sigma Alpha Gamma and Alpha Zeta.

New Cotton Coats Have Leather Look

The most practical fashions that ever braved a storm are this fall's new cotton coats and suits that look like leather.

They have the same grainy texture of real leather, along with all the natural, easy-to-care-for qualities of 100 per cent cotton. They take to soap, water, and even an iron.

Cropping up in women's, children's, and men's wear, these leather-like cottons require no special handling. Garments can be either machine-washed or dry-cleaned — depending on their linings. Ironing takes away wrinkles but doesn't remove the leather-like grain of the all-cotton fabric.

Quick to note the fashion appeal and versatility of these revolutionary new cotton "leathers," designers are turning them into a wealth of styles for fall and winter.

In Fashion It's Little Things That Count

Many a fashion would "fall on its face," literally and figuratively, if it weren't for the Button.

Who's got the button? In these days of push-buttons and telephone buttons (not to mention clothing buttons), it could be just about anyone! Although it's true that we are living in a push button age, buttons were prominent long before now.

In the past they have even been used to designate social and economic positions and were responsible for important inventions and the founding of vast industries.

Today, many buttons play a leading role in accenting a costume, or giving it added fashion interest.

Today most buttons are fashioned of plastic or synthetics but at one time or another almost every material known to man has been transformed into buttons. Every art and craft has also been employed in creating these buttons: painting, sculpture, goldsmithing, metal working, pottery, ceramic, as well as glass blowing and molding, die cutting, stamping and needle skills.

The first real button was found in a Danish peat bog during an archaeological excavation in 1865. It was round, in a crude fashion, and had holes in it for attaching to a garment. It dates back to Denmark's early Iron Age, 250 B. C. to 45 A. D.

Although it is generally conceded that buttons have been used in Europe since the end of the Dark Ages, the question of when they were invented has caused much controversy. According to M. D. C. Crawford's "The Influence of Invention and Civilization," the Paleolithic Man was responsible for numerous inventions, including tailored clothing, buttons and toggles.

There is no evidence of buttons having been used commonly in Europe until the beginning of the 11th century. After that point, the history of buttons reflects the mode of everyday life in Europe as well as the entire structure of society itself.

At times the button was purely functional; at other times it was used for ornamentation and social status. King Louis IX of France made ornamented buttons the mark of the aristocracy. French clerks and classes below them were not allowed to wear buttons made of metal but were limited to cloth - and - thread-covered buttons.

NEW BED IDEA

Platform beds are a popular new decorating device for youthful bedrooms. The beds are simply a broad, sturdy platform made from a smooth door or thick piece of plywood and fitted with ready - to - use legs. A resilient latex foam rubber mattress supplies the comfort and bounce normally obtained from a boxspring.

The beds are slim and trim looking, and can be fitted with pull-out drawers underneath for extra storage in a small room. Fitted slipcovers turn them into sleek sofas for daytime lounging.

New Touches, Tones Define Season's Knits

The never ending fashion quest for new textures and colors in knitted fabrics has turned the world of knits into a designer's paradise, and the result is a mad whirl of blazing colors and "you have to touch" feels this fall.

As if that isn't enough, artistry in design ideas has created clever new looks in keeping with the wonderful spirit of soft, feminine styling.

Romping out of the designs this fall are marvelous new tone-on-tone and multi-tonal color effects that combine with unbelievable deep tufted textures. And they're all adorned with a snappy little bow here, a lacy ruffle there, and in general are dedicated to ever reminding him that your femininity is unbounded.

Three-piece suits are most heavily endowed with the smart textured looks. Color, however, plays no favorites. For a change of pace you can follow the ruffles and bows to a one-piece double knit dress that glows in a marvelous Matisse Plum.

BEAUTY IS NOT ALL

The most beautiful shoe imaginable is a failure if it does not perform two functions. It must protect the sensitive flesh of the foot from the unyielding, often uneven, surface of floor and street. It must assist the wearer to achieve poise of stature and fluidity of motion even when chronic or occasional physiological troubles inhibit natural grace. DICKERSON SHOES perform these functions superlatively.

Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ike Williams of Lake Village, Ark., is announced today. The wedding will be performed by Rev. Fall Look Is Furry On Campus

A fuzzy and furry look in campus casual outerwear will dominate this fall, bringing lining fabrics from inside — out.

The fur and fur-like trims will add a soft touch to most masculine casual coats and jackets. Warm, fleecy linings, such as polyester chearlings, will contrast with other materials.

Also, corduroys, suedes and other napped materials will be teamed with bright solid wools and wool plaids.

J. C. Harris, president of a clothing store, says it's all a result of the increased participation of young people in outdoor activities, even in the coldest months of the year.

"This has created the need for outerwear styles that utilize warmth-giving fabrics not only as the functional part of a garment, but as a fashion asset," Harris said.

Smart Women Select Styles To Suit Figure

You don't have to adopt a mad fad like topless swimsuits to be a fashion individualist. This fall's collection of cotton fashions is so varied that every woman can assemble a wardrobe that's distinctively her own.

To put yourself squarely in the fall fashion picture, plan your wardrobe around styles that are best suited to you in design, color, and texture.

Select clothes that give the illusion of good proportion. Your waistline, for example, should be in proportion to your height. If you're tall, look for fashions that give the effect of a lower waistline. If you're short, choose the opposite.

WHITE FOR WINTER

Anne Fogarty shows a "silhouette" dress in white flannel, beautifully detailed with crystals of water blue encrusted in artistic arrangement around low-falling neckline and banding, in a narrow line at the "no sleeves" effect.

BEEF BRUNCH

Some cooks forget about serving old - fashioned dried beef in cream sauce. You'll find this is a fine combination to offer for brunch.

Formality Returns To Entertaining

The return to formality this fall even for small dinner parties gives the hostess a chance to show off all her best and favorite table appointments. Formal elegance, with fine china and fancy folded napkins, will be used to set some of the most inviting tables ever.

An arrangement of dried flowers in brilliant warm colors can be used as a decorative accent for many dinner gatherings during the season. The initial time investment in constructing it carefully will be more than repaid, when it's used over and over. Pick color combinations that will coordinate with many of your fine linens, such as deep cranberry, paris pink and ecru. Build the floral arrangement in a favorite silver showpiece such as a footed double vegetable dish.

QUILTS

Before you buy washable quilts or other "stuffed" items make sure that the filling is a resilient type which will resist flattening, lumping, or matting after repeated laundering.

Frilly Fashion Is New Look For Bedtime

Pretty is as pretty does . . . and this season the new flannelette and challis nightwear will make everything prettier for you. Never before have there been so many lovely and flattering flannelette fashions designed for American women.

We've had warm and cuddly styles, as well as gay and whimsical novelties. There were sailor and pirate types, ballet and western adaptations, clown and sportswear editions. But this year flannelettes are frilly, frothy, feminine . . . luscious, lacy, lovely.

Ruffles are everywhere. Around the necklines, yokelines and hemlines. Yards of lacy beading, threaded with more yards of satin ribbon "accent the perpendicular" in panels streaming from neckline to hemline. In pajamas, this beading outlines the button-front opening and even cuffs the sleeves. Elegant velvet ribbons accent yokes and are especially effective on the host of new empire waistlines. Some nightwear boasts frilly jabots. Others have yokes that are all-lace.

Yes, one style is prettier than the last — and what is more important, they are practical too. Yesteryear we would have eyed these lovelies suspiciously. Such frou-frou demanded much care, and even then tended to become frowsy, too soon.

But life and textiles have changed. Velvet and satin ribbons now wash miraculously. Frilled lace and nettings need no "touch of the iron" for perennial crispness. Even the flannelette and challis fabrics that style these oh-so-pretty bedtime fashions have changed too — and for the better!

Teen Shoes In Pet Colors

This is the season teenagers can choose their shoes in their pet colors. The range is wide and wonderful—deep and dramatic hues like ink blue and carnation red, winter pastels, neutrals (cashmere, taupe) and the "natural leather" colors. Whatever the shade, it will be available in a host of textures and styles.

MRS. EDWIN LESTER ADRION JR.

Linda Anne Landers Weds Edwin Lester Adrion Jr.

Wedding vows were exchanged by Miss Linda Anne Landers and Edwin Lester Adrion Jr., both of Shreveport, in a ceremony Saturday, October 16 at 3 p.m. in Grace Episcopal Church of Monroe.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Landers, 2526 North Eighth, West Monroe. Mr. Adrion is the son of Mrs. Nell Adrion and Edwin Lester Adrion Sr., of Alexandria.

Tall votive candles and pedestal candelabra formed a background setting at the altar. Massed white roses, pompons, stock and carnations accented the cross of the main altar, and arrangements of white flowers were used in the chapel area.

An organ prelude was presented by Mrs. Bradley Trimble preceding the exchange of vows.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a gown of white satin designed with long tapering sleeves. Hand-clipped Chantilly lace etched with pearls outlined the Sabrina neckline and appliques of the lace adorned the taut bodice and controlled skirt. A full chapel train swept from a bow at the back waistline. Her tiered veil of silk illusion fell from a petal headdress of pearls and lace. She carried a crescent design bouquet of white phalaenopsis orchids, white roses with pearl-studded white velvet leaves and velvet streamers.

Mrs. Gerald Arrant served as matron of honor and bridesmaids were Mrs. A. C. Stanley of Shreveport and Mrs. Elliott C. Thompson Jr. Their floor length gowns of silk crepe featured bodices of light sage green and slender skirts in deeper green. Pearl embroidered velvet-ribbon encircled the Empire bodices from which fell back panels. Matching sage green velvet bows formed their headpieces and they carried crescent bouquets of chartreuse Fuji chrysanthemums with pearl-studded avocado velvet leaves and velvet streamers.

Jack K. White of New Iberia attended Mr. Adrion as best man and groomsmen were Billy L. Derrick and C. Gordon Adams, Shreveport.

Mrs. Landers chose for her daughter's wedding a three piece suit of rose silk with matching accessories and a pink cymbidium orchid corsage. The bridegroom's mother wore a costume suite of beige silk twill weave with olive green accessories and a chartreuse cymbidium orchid.

A reception followed in the church parlors with Mrs. John T. Williams acting as hostess. The bride's table, draped with a floor length white satin cloth, was centered with an arrangement of white chrysanthemums, roses and carnations in a silver compote, flanked by white tapers in silver candelabra. The crystal punch bowl and silver coffee service were at opposite ends of the table.

Also covered in white satin were the cake table and guest book table, with the latter adorned by a memory candle, white pompons and greenery. Mrs. John Martin served coffee and presiding at the punch bowl were Mrs. R. E. Harrell and Mrs. Judith Fontana. Mrs. J. F. Jones Jr. served the cake and Miss Mary Elizabeth Heard had charge of the guest book. Floating hostesses were Mrs. Sidney Swink and Miss Cheryl Brownstein of New Orleans. All the assistants at the reception were presented corsages of mint green carnations.

For travel the bride changed to a white wool suit with ermine collar and an ermine pillbox hat. Her corsage was of phalaenopsis orchids. After a wedding trip to the Gulf Coast the couple will be at home in Shreveport, where Mrs. Adrion is on the faculty of Broadmoor Junior high school as an art teacher and Mr. Adrion is associated with an insurance company.

The bride was graduated from West Monroe high school and from Northeast Louisiana State College and is a member of Alpha Omicron Pi sorority. Mr. Adrion graduated from Centenary College in Shreveport and is a member of Kappa Alpha.

Spanish Art Discussed At Review Club

Mrs. M. M. Hamner was a guest of the Review Club when it was entertained Monday afternoon, October 18 in the home of Mrs. Craig Morgan, 2220 Pargoud Blvd. Preceding the meeting refreshments were served from a table centrally adorned with an arrangement of Montezuma roses.

Mrs. C. P. Gray Jr., presided over the meeting and read a letter from the national president urging the club to send a representative to the Diamond Jubilee National Convention to be held in Chicago, Illinois during June, 1966.

Following the business discussion, Mrs. John Loftin introduced the program. In keeping with the club's theme of study for the year, "Our Legacy from Spain," Mrs. Thomas Dansby and Mrs. Lestar Martin presented a program of Spanish art. Mrs. Martin displayed examples of work by Velasquez, El Greco and Goya and described the significant features of each. She pointed out that the 17th century was the most important period of Spanish art. John Van Dyke's History of Art was the chief source of Mrs. Martin's reference.

Mrs. Dansby reviewed This Is The Hour, by Lion Feuchtwanger, a biography of Goya. She revealed that the 19th Century Spanish artist became the first painter to the king. Goya lived during the tumultuous time of Spanish history. His personal life was intertwined with the life of the Thirteenth Duchess of Alba intermittently, but he spent his later years in loneliness and deafness.

Those present for the meeting in addition to the guest were Mrs. Martin, Mrs. Dansby, Mrs. Gray, Mrs. Loftin, Mrs. James Altick, Mrs. Armand E. Breard, Mrs. E. P. Cudd, Mrs. W. T. Mrs. J. L. McGuire thanked the members for the gifts and cash donations collected totaling $25.75, for the Christmas box for the Kate Duncan Smith School. Boys' shirts will be purchased with the money. The chapter voted to send money to the remaining seven approved schools, but will continue to send used clothing to Tamassee and Kate Duncan Smith, which are fully supported by the DAR. Used clothing will also be sent to the Louisiana Indians at Elton, La.

Mrs. J. L. Norris was appointed by the regent as National Defense chairman for the chapter. Mrs. Kate Stewart announced 10 clubs had been organized for the Junior American Citizens, with a total membership of 243.

November marks the third anniversary for "Tusquahoma Summary," the chapter newsletter edited by Mrs. James L. McGuire. It was voted to keep the expense in the budget.

Ancient Fur Goes Modern

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

The fur known loosely in this country as Persian lamb is one of the oldest known to man, but in a new home and a new guise, it's now one of the newest.

It even has a new name, Swakara. The new home is the semi-desert veldt of South West Africa, where descendants of the karakul lamb which roamed the plains of Central Asia in ancient times can now be developed into registered, pure-bred flocks.

It's this deliberate breeding which is doing for lamb what ranch breeding did for the once-wild mink. The lamb fur called Swakara is richly textured but so light and supply that it can be worked like a fabric, including pleating, gathering and flaring.

Out of all the South West African karakul, only about 35 per cent of the skins are good enough to be classified as Swakara. Two types of pelts are produced, the smooth, flat surface with moire markings which is known as broadtail, and the curlier kind which resembles standard Persian lamb.

Swakara is now being produced mostly in black, but small quantities of natural gray and dyed brown skins are available. The fur fits well into the current trend toward suits, dresses and pullovers of fur, and is being used by such top furriers as Maximilian, Revillon and Georges Kaplan.

New Gloves Have Hand In Fashion

Your hands will never look lovelier than they do in the new glove fashions, predicts Leather Industries of America. In soft and supple kid, doeskin, suede and pigskin, this season's collection of casual and dress gloves is both pretty and practical. Styles vary from simple shorties to elegant elbow-length evening gauntlets.

Smart untrimmed gloves vie for attention with styles sporting pearl buttons, scalloping, raised stitching or two - tone themes. Jewel and fur trim glamorize gloves for formal occasions. In addition to classic smooth, suede and grained surfaces, there are gloves and trim in embossed cabretta, including paisley and other prints.

For fall fashion coordination, glove colors range from bone and winter pastels, through gold and deep red to black and a wide span of browns.

Six and eight-button lengths are on the rise. However, shorties — with their crisp appealing air — will be worn this season as always.

Your hands will never feel the bite of winter in lightweights lined in wool, fur or shearling. They're available in both tailored and dressy styles.

For safe comfortable driving, gloves of "split leather" or pigskin, detailed with hand-stitching, will prove themselves indispensable auto accessories.

Your Problems

Greatest Attraction Is In Being Opposites

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 17-year-old girl who agrees with what you said about that high school boy who put blonde streaks in his hair. This is not just my own opinion, but the opinion of every girl I have talked to today.

We all feel that boys are becoming too feminine. A boy who would streak his hair is repugnant, abhorrent, insufferable, repulsive, nauseating, loathesome, offensive, disgusting and icky.

How can males expect females to respect them if they get themselves up to look like women? Don't they realize their greatest attraction is that they are the opposite six? You have my permission to print my letter and I hope you do.—THUMBS DOWN ON BLEACHED BLONDE BOYS

Dear Thumbs: Thanks for your views. And now I'd like to remind you girls that your greatest attraction is that you are members of the opposite sex.

Girls who get themselves up to look like boys are repugnant, abhorrent, insufferable, replusvie, nauseating, loathesome, offensive, disgusting and icky.

Dear Ann Landers: For the past three days I've received a telephone call between 11:00 a.m. and 11:15 a.m. A cultured voice says, "I think you should know your husband is having an affair with his office manager." Then I hear a click and the party leaves the line.

I've never had cause to suspect my husband of stepping out on me. He comes straight home from work and rarely goes anywhere without me.

His office manager is a divorced woman who is raising three children. She is dignified and reserved and has worked for my husband for five years.

I know I should put these calls out of my mind but I can't. I haven't told my husband because it might upset him. The phone company says they can't trace a call unless the party stays on the line for 20 minutes. I need some guidance. —UNNERVED

Dear Unnerved: Tell you husband some nut has been calling you with a wild story about him and his office manager and you think he should be aware of it. Then get an unlisted phone number.

Take a walk along the seacoast when the mists are so heavy your view is blotted out practically inches away, and you'll experience what moisture can do for the look of your skin.

Leather Dress Is Popular

Lean, loose or lightly skimming the body, the leather dress cuts a colorful swath through the fall season. In deep rich shades and pale neutrals including winter white, pliant dresses stand smartly alone or team with their own jackets.

This season's diverting collection of separates — skirts, pants, ski jackets and blouses—is proof that leather is truly fashion's plaything. We can all play the game of mix or match; leather with a jersey or cashmere for at-home, with fur for skiing, with tweed or apres-ski, with leather for anytime.

A classic sensation! Genuine Iguana lizard provides luxury unlimited, rich and darkly exciting by day . . . or night. New mid heel, gently rounded toe.

by Marillyn Taylor

This has been a week of most glorious autumn weather, with crisp temperatures and bright sunshine. One is inspired to be up and doing, and opportunities for participating are varied at this time of year. Travel, visitors in town, school carnivals, club work all contribute to keep one active.

Here this week from Dade City, Florida, was MRS. D. D. COVINGTON, who was the guest of LAYTON LAMKIN in her home on Park Avenue. The visitor arrived on Wednesday for a ten-day stay. Several affairs were planned in her honor, beginning with an evening party Wednesday at the home of JACK ROGERS.

Thursday evening, DIT CUTLER and BESSIE BIEDENHARN entertained complimentary to Mrs. Covington. This party was held at the Biedenharn home on Loop Road. A large bouquet of pink roses decorated the piano in the living room. A silver epergne filled with white roses, butterfly lilies, and gardenias centered the dining room table. About thirty guests were invited to meet the visitor.

Guests in the home of CRARY SMITH on Pargoud boulevard this weekend are the ED JACOBS of Shreveport. They arrived on Thursday. At noon, Crary was hostess for luncheon at Bayou DeSiard country club honoring the Jacobs and Mrs. Covington. On Friday night, MAMIE DAVIS entertained at a family supper at home.

Monroyans honored out of town were the W. E. REGANS, who celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at a party in Port Gibson, Mississippi, last weekend. Their children, all of whom attended the celebration, are the CHARLES REGANS of Monroe, BILLY REAGANS of Lake Charles, and SARAH and CASS ROBINSON of Dallas, Texas.

Home again after a week in Chicago are VELMA and FELIX WILLEY. While he attended professional meetings, she visited the Art Institute and other big city treats. They saw "Barefoot in the Park."

En route to Philadelphia, where he attended a professional meeting, JUDY and GENE WORTHEN spent a few days in New York. They were guests at the Americana. They saw the new Henry Fonda show, "Generation", and Barbra Streisand in "Funny Girl"; caught the final day of the World's Fair. They returned home last Saturday.

The new home of JOYCE and DON PHILLIPS was "warmed" last night with a gala surprise party. All members of the Ouachita Parish medical society were invited to attend. The menu for dinner, brought by the guests, included assorted dips and hors d'oeuvres, sliced smoked turkey, dirty rice dressing, marinated beans, and assorted cakes with coffee.

Members of the host group brought the honorees andirons and a fire set as a housewarming present. These were the CALVIN FOLDS, STANLEY MINTZ's, ED LONGS, ED FOSTERS, JACK KEELING, MORRIS PHILLIPS, DOYLE HAMILTONS, MORT RAPHAELS, AL IRWINS, HENRY GUERRIEROS, DAN SARTOR, R. D. BLANCHARDS, BUDDY BODRONS, FELIX WILLEYS, and JOHN SPENCES.

Repeating a most successful summer program, youth groups of Monroe's Presbyterian churches tonight begin another series of joint meetings. Tonight's program is to begin at six p.m. with a snack supper in the playroom at the home of the Doyle Hamiltons, 2607 Pargoud boulevard. Northeast coach DIXIE WHITE will speak to the group on "Touchdowns and Penalties in the Game of Life." Using the theme of kick-off, decorations will suggest a football stadium, with school colors prominantly displayed.

The high school age groups of Covenant, First, and Westminister Presbyterian churches are invited to these meetings which are planned at intervals during the winter months. Sponsors for the joint groups are DAVE HILLEY and HELEN LEDBETTER of First Church; the BILL ALLEMANS and E. A. PORTERS, JR., of Covenant; and MARGARET HUNTER nd BETTY STEPHERSON of Westminister.

Tomorrow night is the opening of the series for Northeast State Concerts association. Season ticket holders will have the opportunity to hear an entire evening of the "Music of Richard Rodgers." Elaine Malbin, William Metcalf, Joanne Wheatley and Hal Kanner are starred, with Richard Hayman and his orchestra, in this program which includes some of Rodgers' music from Broadway shows, as well as that written for television or ballet. The concert begins at 8:15 p.m. in Neville High school auditorium.

Alumnae of KAPPA DELTA sorority are invited to a conversational hour Tuesday afternoon between three and five at the home of Marillyn Taylor, 2311 Marie Place.

A luncheon meeting is planned for members of PI BETA PHI alumnae club Wednesday, October 27, in the home of CLARA MONTGOMERY, 1623 Park avenue, beginning at 11:30 a.m. The program will be centered around the Settlement School supported by the group. A number of items made at the school will be on display.

□ □ □

This week we were privileged to visit the lovely new home of ANN and JIM PADGETT at 4002 Forsythe avenue. Situated on a wooded lot, the house presents a true "Old South" appearance, with its formally balanced facade centered with columned portico. Construction is of Virginia handmade brick, Roanoke blend. Steps at each side sweep up to the entrance, where white stucco walls frame the wide door, with its leaded fan and side lights. A brass monogram is worked into the wrought iron railing enclosing the portico.

In the high ceilinged entrance, floors are in blocks of black and white marbleized vinyl. Grey-on-white wallpaper is used above white wainscotting. The living room is to the left, the dining room to the right.

Misty jade carpet and walls of paler green are used in both rooms. Both have bay windows with fixed twenty-light panels in the center, double-hung ten lights at the sides. Draperies in the living room are figured in shades of blue and green against a white background. On the wall opposite is a black marble fireplace, flanked by a provincial sofa and an old Country Chippendale arm chair. A baby grand piano stands in one corner. Opposite, a pair of cane-back arm chairs flank an old glazed pottery plant stand.

Draperies in the dining room are a lighter shade of the misty green carpet. The long wall opposite the bay windows is covered, above the wainscotting, with a panel paper depicting Philadelphia in the 1770's. A Williamsburg chandelier hangs from the center medallion above the walnut table of Queen Anne style. Chairs are panel back walnut, with red cushions. An interesting piece in this room is a very tall old bookcase used for silver storage.

A marvelous butler's pantry separates dining room and kitchen. Here are wonderful storage cabinets and serving counters. Walls are painted a color called "absinthe," which is carried into the kitchen . . . Walls and ceiling in the latter are covered with paper printed with tiny flowers in all-over pattern. Cabinets are birch, with absinthe Formica counters. Brick vinyl squares cover the floor here and in the utility room beyond. Sewing machine, cutting counters, and storage cabinets are included with the other useful appliances in the utility. In the passage to the rear entry stands an early Victorian table with spool legs. Above hangs a collection of Currier and Ives prints.

Straight ahead from the entrance, one finds the hall which crosses the width of the house. To the right is the family room, with flooring of brick vinyl.

Prints of Indian braves, matted on red felt and framed alike, are grouped around the Welch dresser which centers the long wall. At one end of the room is a storage wall of bookshelves and cabinets of the cypress. An open fireplace with raised brick hearth centers the outside wall, with a door at one side which opens onto the back gallery. The far end of the room is the family dining area. Here is a small bay window with built-in seat. Draperies here and the sofa cover are of printed material matching the pattern of paper used in the kitchen.

A long cypress shelf is used as a mantel above the fireplace. Here hangs a prize-winning original done by Jim's father, MERL PADGETT. An antique clock and other interesting pieces stand on the shelf.

Bedrooms are to the left down the carpeted hall. First is the master bedroom, with walls papered in a pattern of old gold on white. A deep bay window, overlooking the rear gardens, is covered with white shantung draperies hung from a brass rod. Carpet is gold, and bedspread white. One entire wall is covered with folding doors over spacious closets. The master bath is also done entirely in gold and white, with gold towels and accessories.

Bedrooms for the boys are in a wing at the end of the house. On the way, one passes the hall window beneath which stands an old Saratoga trunk, antiqued in red.

On one wall of BOYD's room hangs an old picture of his grandfather, for whom he was named, GUY BOYD. Other pictures on the pale grey-green walls are prints of old sailing ships. Cafe curtains here, and in COLE's room, are of an oatmeal color, ornamented with green and blue fringe. Floors throughout are covered with tessara corlon.

While we are thinking about food and luscious party menus, let us remember the anonymous quote, "Violent exercise after forty is especially harmful when done with a knife and fork." And this poem, "Cake, Love, and Dreams," by Philene Hamner:

I don't care much for carrot sticks
Or celery to munch on;
I scorn the lettuce-grapefruit mix
That passes for a luncheon.
But anything with chocolate sauce on,
Whipped or sweet or sour cream on,
Sugar glaze or frosting gloss on,
Bearnaise or sauce supreme on.
Kirsch or brandy wine ablaze on Walnuts, almonds, or cashews on,
Olive oil or mayonnaise on,
Gravies that serenely ooze on,
A la mode or a la king on,
Jelly, jam, or marmalade on Anything with everything on — Such is stuff as dreams are made on.
But I am stuck with carrot sticks
And greens (insipid twosome!)
For no one goes for chubby chicks.
And that's my life; it's gruesome.

Davis-Bradley Nuptials Read In Oak Grove

The wedding of Miss Marilyn Bradley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clifton Bradley, and Roger Kent Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Davis, all of Oak Grove, was solemnized Friday, October 15, at 7:30 p.m. in the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Davis.

The Reverend N. W. Causey, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Oak Grove, performed the double ring ceremony in the presence of relatives and close friends.

Arrangements of white gladioli and white pompon mums were used for decor.

The bride chose for her wedding a white wool suit styled with an A-line skirt and boxy jacket, complemented by a shell blouse. He accessories were of black patent. The shoulder length veil of illusion was attached to a satin circlet. Atop a white Bible she carried a bridal bouquet of white carnations and tulle, centered with a purple - throated white orchid.

Mrs. Marvin Morse, of Ruston, was the bride's only attendant. She wore a pink sheath with black patent accessories and a white carnation corsage.

Marvin Morse, of Ruston, served the bridegroom as best man.

Mrs. Bradley, mother of the bride, was wearing a navy blue tailored wool dress with bone accessories. Mrs. Davis, mother of the groom, was dressed in aqua wool with black accessories. Each wore a corsage of white carnations.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the Davis home. The green and white color theme was carried out in the floral arrangements, and table decor, featured a three tiered white wedding cake served with frosted lime green punch.

Miss Betty Bradley, of Oak Grove, presided at the guest book. Serving at the bride's table were Misses Shelia Davis, sister of the groom, Linda Tubbs and Bonnie Adler.

After a short wedding trip to points in Mississippi, the couple are at home in Monroe where Mr. Davis will continue his studies at Northeast State College.

Fashion Flashes For Fall

. . .new chic fall crepes, sometimes wool, with pure A-line shaping, lots of bareness at the top, the touch of satin buttons or bows set at one side.

. . .the way knits are taking up the boldest styles, as with St. Laurent's Mondrian patterns, the op art black and white swirl patterns, the plaids.

. . .the new at-home fashion for one-piece jumpsuits, in huge pink, mauve and blue flowers on white silk surah, always ruffled or flounced.

. . .the way make-up has entered the fashion picture, with artistic effects of colors like modern art rather than as mere enhancement of the face.

Newlyweds Travel Garden Of Versus

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International

HOMEFRONT, U.S.A. (UPI) — The trouble with wedding books: they don't tell the newlyweds exactly how to tell when the honeymoon is over.

As a public service to the season's new crop of brides and bridegrooms, herewith is a list of ways the typical couple can tell that the effect of moonlight and roses is wearing off.

—He tells her to shut up when she tells him he's driving too fast.

—They complain to the management about necking in adjacent cars when they go to a drive-in movie.

—She one day screams "that ring on my finger is no license to leave a ring in the bathtub!"

—She reveals that she knows how to change a fuse, replace the worn ironing cord, fix a flat, do judo.

—He lets it slip out that he knows how to darn socks, sew on buttons, iron shirts, cook well enough to keep from dying of malnutrition.

—He expects her to put the top on the toothpaste, return the soap to the soap dish, and smoke her own cigarettes.

—She sees a bigger diamond ring and tells him it's too bad he didn't get her a "large one like that."

—While in that mood, she lets go with the second blast: "You don't have a high forehead at all. You're getting bald."

—He reads the paper at breakfast, during supper. She's just as glad. "It's such a chore to talk to him early or late," she thinks. "Ditto," he thinks.

—She refuses to get his pipe and slippers until they can train the dog to take over the task.

—He wonders why she doesn't join a woman's bowling club, bridge club and whatever other kind of hen club meets at night a time or two per week.

—She puzzles a bit when he comes home late, saying he was with the boys. She puzzles a lot when she discovers he didn't destroy his little black book, as promised, before their happy wedding day.

—He threatens to go home to mother. She says: "Yea—go ahead."

—She threatens to go home to mother. He says "Yea — go ahead."

P.S. — You know this marriage is off on the right foot and will last, even after all these signs show the honeymoon's over.

Why?

Neither carries out the threat to go home to mother!

FORTHCOMING marriage of Miss Betty Lee King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William M. King to Victor Ronnie Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willie E. Smith, all of Delhi, is announced by her parents. THE LIGHTWEIGHT TOTES and carry-alls come this season in stripes or carpet fabric. Left, the black and red striped set by Karaway includes this collapsible train case and double-section shoe tote. At right is one of the new carpetbag totes, handbag shaped.

Tote, Carpetbags Ideal For Year-Round Travel

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

That travel has become year-round instead of seasonal is known to every fashion editor who receives reader mail. Twelve months a year, most of it is from ladies seeking advice on travel wardrobes. And they're going everywhere from just a city away to Australia and Hong Kong.

Naturally, luggage has become a year-round thing, too, particularly those lightweight conveniences called tote bags which are found in all notions departments. The National Notion Association reports that each year their member firms show more tote items than the year before.

The tote began with a shoe bag, went on to an oversized handbag, now includes fitted suitcases and train cases. There is even a collapsible case, which can start the trip packed in another case, becomes an extra carry-all for all the things one buys on a trip to take back home.

Fashion has come to totes and carry-alls in their coverings. As most are in fabrics, they can easily follow the fabrics trends in outerwear. One favorite this fall is striped tweed, especially attractive in red and black. Karaway uses it for their entire set of six different carry-alls. Tapestry, too, makes colorful cases. As one piece of the set is always in large handbag style, an extra handbag need not be carried.

Another trend in carry-alls is carpet. Yes, the carpetbag of post-Civil War days is back, in Kleinert's matched carry-alls and totes. But the "carpetbaggers" now are fashion-minded traveling ladies who like the combined colorfulness and studiness of carpet for travel cases.

Area Couple Wed In Church At Crossett

The wedding of Miss Rebecca Sue Burchfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Burchfield of Crossett, Ark., to Woodie LaVon Prichett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Pritchett of Bastrop, was solemnized October 9 in the First Baptist church of Crossett.

Rev. B. G. Hickem performed the double ring ceremony at 7 p.m. Music was provided by Mrs. Felton Taylor, organist and Miss Pam Stone, soloist.

Escorted to the altar by her brother, Olen Burchfield, the bride was gowned in a floor length dress of white peau de soie fashioned with Empire bodice accented with a shell neckline, edged with Chantilly lace. Fitted sleeves tapered to points at her wrists. A watteau train swept cathedral length emphasizing the slim lines of the sheath skirt. She wore a double strand of pearls, gift of the groom and carried a cascade bouquet of white carnations. Her ballerina length veil was attached to a pearl tiara.

Mrs. Kenneth Ray of Simsboro, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Martha Southerland of Little Rock; Miss Diane Pritchett, Bastrop, sister of the groom and Miss Kitty Bolin. Flower girl was Miss Brenda Burchfield, niece of the bride.

Larry McLean of Bastrop, attended Mr. Pritchett as best man. Ushers were Darrell Neely, Arthur Defee, Ricky Reynolds and Larry Jordan, all of Bastrop.

A reception followed the ceremony in Fellowship Hall of the church. Mrs. Darrell Neely, sister of the groom, served the wedding cake and Miss Sheila Hopper of Little Rock, presided at the punch bowl at a table centered with white chrysanthemums and lighted tapers in a silver epergne. Mrs. Larry Black of Little Rock, was at the guest book.

Following a short wedding trip the couple is at home in Bastrop.

Foods, Drinks Affect Body, Mind Breakdown

CINCINNATI, Ohio — Can eating too many carbohydrate-rich foods or drinking to many drinks containing caffeine cause psychiatric, physical and neurologic breakdown in some people? Yes, says Cincinnati physician Harry M. Salzer, after studying 300 patients over a 10-year period.

Dr. Salzer says that high intake of either carbohydrates or caffeine, or both, can cause a drop in blood sugar level, a condition known as relative hypoglcemia. The condition causes such psychiatric symptoms as depression, insomnia, anxiety, phobias. Physical and neurologic complaints such as exhaustion, heavy sweating, rapid heartbeat, headache, dizziness and tremors are also quite commonly associated with the fall in blood sugar level.

Half of the 185 women and 115 men studied by the doctor had symptoms of over five years' duration, he reports, and some had been treated with sedatives, tranquilizers, even electroshock therapy without showing improvement.

When such patients were placed on a high-protein, low-carbohydrate, caffeine-free diet, strictly observed, the symptoms disappeared rapidly. Relapses occurred, however, when patients discontinued the diet.

Dr. Salzer reports that about 85 per cent of the 300 patients either recovered or were greatly improved. The doctor observes: "It is my belief that the condition of relative hypoglycemia is one of the most common causes of neuropsychiatric illness."

BOLD PATTERNS

Bold patterns and color combinations made a lively splash for sports, via giant houndstooth, argyle, checkerboard and striped motifs, in bulky wool sweaters that were generally teamed with matching wool stockings. The yard - long sports sweater made an effective debut in thick, tweedy oatmeal wool, with a giant cowl neckline, and saddle-stitching outlining the raglan sleeves.

Color Suggestions Given For Tobacco Brown Sofa

By BETTY PEPIS

Q: I have often thought my husband must be color blind, now I know it. For a surprise anniversary gift, he had made a beautiful French Provincial sofa and chair. It's really lovely — but the color, a tobacco brown! Our rug is rose and the walls, to date, are green. I must keep the rug but can change the walls. I will have new draperies and both a large and a wing chair recovered. What colors do you suggest? Somehow, I'm afraid of too much beige. I want a serene looking room.

A: I'd plan the wall and woodwork color around the rug, that is a rose but so pale, it is almost white. For the draperies and a slipcover for the wing chair, use a rather small scale print in a white - rose ground with rose, brown and fresh spring green in the design. Cover the second chair in a fresh spring green.

Q: Our master bathroom has off - white walls, white fixtures and seafoam green ceramic tile. We would like suggestions for accent color for carpet, towels and curtains.

A: Have seafoam color carpet too. If you like the idea, the curtains could be in a print with a white ground and seafoam, aquamarine and a touch of yellow. Towels could be aquamarine. Have a little yellow in room, soap, ash tray or glass bottles.

Q: We would appreciate suggestions to improve the master bedroom. It faces north, has Early American furniture painted aquamarine, white wallpaper, a rose and green hooked rug and a slipper chair is covered in a white and pink stripe. We need help with curtains, bedspread and dust ruffle.

Have white curtains at lower half of window with sill length draw curtains. Bedspread would be best in white with dust ruffle in small scale print in white ground with aquamarine, green and rose. If you can, recover chair in print, or use print for toss pillows.

Q: I have a large kitchen with dark blue floor and light blue counter tops. At present, the walls are light blue and woodwork is white. Please suggest new colors. I would like something warm and cheerful. Also what colors for curtains, tablecloth and covers for small appliances.

A: Presume floor and counter tops must remain as they are, therefore I'd paint walls, cupboard and cabinets in a fresh pink (color of pink roses) or a pale citrus yellow. Curtains, tablecloth and appliance covers could be in a lively print in pink (or yellow), white, light and dark blue.

The Fair — A Wonderful Memory

The sun was shining on a May afternoon in New York. The creaking old subway elevated train clanked to a stop at the Willet's Point station, and several workers walked down the steps. Through the windows of the train, one could see a vast sea of mud, construction, and pilings; and in the center of the whole spectacle, a piece of gleaming, glistening steel was being fitted into place on a blue foundation. One picked his way across a parking lot and across rough boards to the administration building. Inside, there was a time machine which clicked off the days, hours, minutes, and even seconds until opening. There was a room down a long carpeted hall which housed a huge three dimensional map of what was to be. The tiny cars of the Swiss Sky Ride even sped across the model.

The area of mud and confusion changed and grew, and on one blustery, rainy April day in 1964, it became the immaculate wonderland which was the New York World's Fair. For two happy, marvelous, and unforgetable years it lived — two years and enough thoughts and memories to fill fifty-one million lifetimes. For two years, the dinosaurs peered across Grand Central Parkway, and fountains glittered in the sunlight of the day and sparkled in the night. The big carousel at Belgian Village made life worth living, and the man and his dog at General Electric spanned seventy years into the past.

Who can ever forget the ride into the future of a hundred amazing years at Futurama and how good you felt walking down the ramp from Johnson's "To Be Alive." The small boy on a windswept Oregon beach at Kodak must have pulled deep thoughts from all who saw the "Searching Eye."

At night, the lights would glow, and a single tower of blazing glory reached towards the heavens while at Coca-Cola, the almost immortal Stone Mountain carillon played "America, the Beautiful." Who can forget the leaves of the green trees which in the soft breeze of early evenings seemed almost to whisper, and the little children who cried to stay longer, their tear streamed faces aglow with happiness at what they had seen.

Remember Suzie, the friendly giraffe at Africa? She'd beg ground nut bread from visitors at the restaurant in the trees, and over at Egypt, there were honey balls, felafel, and a bazaar. The Indians had rare and beautiful silk, and at Morroco, the leather goods were outstanding. At International Plaza, it was like being in another world.

On the Pool of Industry at night, you could stroll into Travelers under the big red umbrella roof and see a tremendous history of man, and the telephone people had a huge white wing which seemed to float in the air. Inside the wing was the story of men's efforts to communicate with each other down through the centuries. The Unisphere was an etherial violet-blue surrounded by jewel-like fountains. At five minutes to nine on those splendid summer nights, there was a loud warning rocket which soared into the sky and then the fireworks and water show which will live in the memories of anyone who came to the Fair.

On Sunday night, it was all over. The fountain show was bigger and better than ever, and the lights seemed somewhat brighter almost as if they were trying to outdo themselves. Those who loved the Fair seemed almost desperate to drink in another and even another last look; and out of the windows of the new subway cars on the way back to Manhattan, the Fair was all aglow and you just couldn't think it was the end.

In the morning, the cab moved through the traffic and by the Fair towards Kennedy airport. The dinosaurs were still peering interestedly, if rather sadly, over the highroad. Belgian Village, Ford, Hawaii, U.S. Royal Tire, and the big clock at General Motors, still telling the time. One looked down the deserted streets and remembered the excited people. Through the rear window the early morning sun shone on the tall towers of the New York State pavilion, and then, there was the Unisphere sparkling in the early light. The cab rounded a bend and the Fair was gone — a timeless remarkable dream that came true.

Big Car Trend Is Delight To 'Bug' Builders

DETROIT (AP) — Foreign car makers are delighted that the trend in American cars for 1966 is towards larger, more luxurious models.

The building up process by domestic manufacturers has left the low-priced compact field even more available to imports.

Volkswagen, Renault and Standard-Triumph Motor Co. were among the first to move swiftly to take advantage of the new market potential.

Preliminary estimates on 1965 import sales were that about 500,00 imports would be sold in the United States market this calendar year, compared with 485,000 a year ago.

One of the most optimistic predictions about future sales came from Stuart Perkins, president of Volkswagen of America, Inc., who estimated 600,000 imports would be sold next year.

Vincent J. Grob, president of Renault, Inc., summed up the feeling of most importers when he said in an interview:

"U.S. car manufacturers have stated that at present U.S. autos cannot compete with economy import cars. We return the compliment by saying that at present we don't think overseas firms can compete here in the larger Detroit price-size range, except for extremeley specialized vehicles."

Volkswagen, perennial leader in the import market, added two larger models to its U.S. lineup this year — a squareback sedan and a fastback sedan. Basically, they are slightly larger and more powerful than the "beetle line."

Perkins explained, "In no way will these new and slightly larger cars replace our familiar beetle which has won a lasting place in America. Rather, they will supplement the 'bug' and give new dependability and economy to those people who found the Volkswagen sedan a bit too small and the VW bus a bit too big."

VW reported its U.S. dealership had risen from 843 last Jan. 1 to a current 887 with expectations that the figure will hit 935 by year's end. VW expects to sell 350,000 cars in the U.S. market this year and 405,000 next year.

Ambassadors In Europe To Meet At Hague

THE HAGUE, (UPI) — U.S. Ambassadors stationed in western Europe will meet here Oct. 25 and 26 with Under-secretary of State George Ball and Assistant Secretary of State John Leddy.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said the meeting is "one of a series of regional meetings of U.S. ambassadors which are held in various areas of the world on a periodical basis."

The spokesman said the last such meeting of ambassadors in European posts was held in Bonn in 1963.

He said the presence of Undersecretary Ball and Assistant Secretary Leddy "is in line with the custom of having senior department officials attend regional meetings of ambassadors."

Brush and Palette

by Jan Bank

A reminder to all artists who intend to enter the 23rd Annual Louisiana State Art Exhibition held in Baton Rouge; the deadline is drawing near, Nov. 9, to be exact! There are entry blanks available at the Masur Museum of Art, 1400 South Grand in Monroe.

Let's hope the Monroe area will be well represenetd this year. We certainly have an abundance of t a l e n t from Northeast State College alone, which should bring us some honors.

It hardly seems possible but the third showing of the season is about to begin at the Masur Museum.

Steve Hodges director of the museum has released the following information on the show:

"There will be an exhibition of paintings by George Mathesen at the Masur Museum of Art beginning Sunday, October 24, and running through November 12.

A reception for Mathesen will be held at the Masur Museum this Sunday afternoon from 2 to 5 p.m. The public is invited. Of particular interest will be a gallery talk by Mathesen during the reception which will take place at 3:00 p.m. Mathesen will discuss his work and answer questions.

Mathesen's paintings reflect his interest in the human figure. His quiet, monumental figures, sit passively in interior settings. The human figure and its surroundings share an equal part in the calculated, well-structured compositions. Mathesen used rich reds and ochres, browns and warm blacks.

Of special interest will be a mural - size painting, twelve feet long, which Mathesen did as his thesis project while studying in Mexico. The mural is an abstract work in earth colors.

The Masur Museum of Art is open to the public every afternoon from 2:00 to 5:00 except Monday.

If you're a magazine reader you've no doubt noticed that even the most domestic type publications feature articles on art and artists on a regular basis.

You've probably also been attracted to a new gift item being touted for the holiday season that has been inspired by the fine arts. The round jigsaw puzzles, for adults I'm sure.

The inspirations for these brain exercises range from a 500 piece adaptation of a decoration on a Chinese Porcelain plate from the K'ang Hsi Period, to a double image, that at first shows three women in an archway and then with a blink reveals a hidden bust of Voltaire in 500 puzzling pieces, to an eyebuster, circular, vibrating "Op Art" illusion, or if thats not mystifying enough, there's the "red menace" a round puzzler in solid red with no pattern at all. The last two only have 200 pieces.

I prefer a trip to the museum, or placidly looking at a painting on my wall, to getting caught under the sofa, unloading my sons pockets or looking down the cat's throat in search of that 500th puzzle piece that is the end of Voltaires nose and simultaneously a loaf of bread in (as the ad reads) "A symbolic, colorful, double image, round jig saw puzzle."

Oregon Pilots Make News At Plei Me Camp

SAIGON (UPI)—A pair of pilots from Joseph, Ore., made news this week in the battle still raging around the Plei Me Special Forces camp in the central highlands of South Viet Nam.

Air Force Capt. Richard Shortridge, flying a tiny, single-engined O1E spotter plane, was the first forward air controller to arrive over the beleageured camp after two battalions of Viet Cong attacked about 1 A.M. Wednesday.

Shortridge called in air strikes to knock out enemy gun positions that he spotted from his low and slow flying plane. He was also in position to direct jet strikes against the human wave attacks by the Viet Cong in his spare time and provided a rough count of VC bodies after the jets had done their work.

On one of his missions, Shortridge called in fighter-bombers to lay napalm bombs on the barbed wire surrounding the camp to beat back the attackers.

And he kept coming back on more of the missions.

Saturday, Air Force Capt. Dale LM Potter, 31, also of Joseph, piloted a HH43 twin-rotor helicopter into a Viet Cong infested area about eight miles south of the Plei Me camp to rescue an Air Force pilot whose A1E Skyraider had been shot down 35 hours earlier.

Potter dropped down as close to the ground as he could, making allowances for the dense underbrush, and waited for Capt. Melvin C. Elliott, 36, of Glendale, Ariz., to come out of the jungle.

Viet Cong small arms fire was thick and Skyraiders and rocket armed helicopters were called in to beat back the attacks until the rescue could be completed.

"Elliott stumbled out of the woods looking a little ragged and torn," Potter reported. The entire mission took about one hour.

Potter is based at Bien Hoa, near Saigon. Shortridge flies his spotter missions from Pleiku, in the central highlands.

The Fifth District Louisiana Parent Teacher Association Fall Conference will be held Wednesday at the Julia Wossman Recreation Center here.

Registration will begin at 8:30 a.m. under the leadership of Mrs. Tommy Lee, president of Georgia Tucker Parent Teacher Association. Mrs. Miles Tolleson, Director, said the Conference theme will be "Health and Physical Fitness".

The Louisiana State Parent Teacher Association President, Mrs. Harry A. Cory, will speak to the delegates.

Also on the program to speak on the child's health will be a panel consisting of Dr. Wilbur G. Beuaregard, pediatrician; Mrs. Pat Merriweather, clinical social worker; Howard Barker, elementary school principal, and Jack Pankey, district scout executive, Boy Scouts of America.

Fifth District Louisiana Parent Teacher Association includes five parishes, Union, Ouachita, Jackson, Caldwell, and Winn.

Anniversary Set At El Dorado Baptist Church

EL DORADO, Ark. (Special) — The First Baptist Church here will celebrate its 120th anniversary with a week of special services today through Oct.

Appearing on the program during the eight-day celebration will be such Baptist personalities as Dr. Wayne Dehoney, president of the Southern Baptist Convention, and two of the church's former pastors, Dr. Sam C. Reeves, pastor of the Arkadelphia First Baptist Church, and Dr. W. W. Warmath, vice president of Union University in Jackson, Tenn. Two other former pastors, Dr. T. D. Brown, Anderson S. C., and Dr. John H. Buchanan Sr., Birmingham, Ala., will present taped messages to the congregation at the Sunday morning worship hours since they will be unable to attend the celebration.

The 2,250-member congregation was organized in the winter of 1845 with seven charter members, according to the pastor, Dr. Don B. Harbuck. The El Dorado church was organized in the same year as the Southern Baptist Convention.

In connection with the anniversary, the church has published a 50-page review of the church's history.

The church has also scheduled an open house Sunday from 3 to 4 p.m.

Guide To Good Reading

New Books Added Often To Library

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

New books of interest to a variety of readers are constantly being added to the collection of the Ouachita Parish Public Library. This week there are several titles of great interest. William J. Lederer and Eugene Burdick, who made such an impact on the American people with "The Ugly American" seven years ago have just released a new novel, which is certain to be read and discussed. The title is "Sarkhan". The setting is in Southeast Asia in the ancient kingdom of Sarkhan. The old King is abdicating from the throne and there is a communist conspiracy to take over the country. This is a book to make one stop and think and it will provide much exciting reading. "The Money" by Theodore Pratt is a slightly unbelievable story of what happened when a group of youngsters found a l a r g e amount of money in the home of a deceased recluse. It is a satirical comedy, which is fun to read. "Cork Street, Next To The Hatters" by Pamela Hansford Johnson is a story of a group of people who operate a most unusual bookshop. It is English in setting and will not appeal to every reader.

There are a number of interesting books of non-fiction. "The Great Salad Oil Swindle" by Norman C. Miller tells the story of one of the greatest stock manipulations of present time. Those who read the accounts in the papers will be interested in this more detailed account. "The Viruses" by Helena Curtis is a popular presentation of an important scientific subject. We usually think of viruses as causes of disease, but they have many other important functions and this book explains them in a most readable manner. "Stay Alive" by Jean Carper should be in every home, for it tells how to prevent many of the accidents which take more than 100,000 lives in the United States every day. She gives excellent advice, which can help every reader.

Genevieve Dariaux wrote a book several years ago called "Elegance" which contained excellent advice about women's clothes. She now has a new book called "Entertaining With Elegance". Every woman who wants to entertain beautifully will want to see, and many of them will want to own, a copy of this book. "The Great Shakespeare Forgery" by Bernard Grebanier is an account of one of the greatest literary forgeries of all time and is as exciting to read as a mystery story. A humorous book of everyday happenings is "Nobody Really Likes a Nervous Cow" written by Elinor Goulding Smith. Those who have read her earlier books will not want to miss this one. "Artists of the Old West" by John Canfield Ewers is one of the most beautiful books that we have added to the collection in recent months. There is an audience who will love it. "Heloise All Around the House" is a bigger and better book by Heloise, the housewife's favorite helper, with hints on how to do everything and this volume is alphabetically arranged. It will be in great demand.

The long awaited biography of the late President Kennedy written by Theodore Sorensen has just been released. Mr. Sorensen was special counsel to the late President and he knew Kennedy the man, the Senator, the Candidate, and the President as no other man did during those eleven years. Three months after the President's death he left the White House to write of those eleven years as only he could write. He has produced not only a preceptive biography of an extraordinary man, but one of the most important sources of history in this century.

Trial Program Launched Here

The Paramount Theatre will begin a trial program of a special movie bonus for Twin Cities housewives Monday through Friday, James Hosey, manager has announced.

The housewives will be admitted for 50 cents, half the fare, until 1:30 p.m., thus allowing them to shop downtown, and attend a movie matinee.

No special card or other identification will be needed for the reduction in admission.

Tallulah Girl Rewarded For Saving Youth

TALLULAH (Special) — A Tallulah student at Louisiana State University has been awarded the American National Red Cross certificate of merit for her assistance in saving the life of an eight-year-old girl.

Betty Coleman Kincaid, an LSU sophomore, received her "Life Saving Award of Merit" this week in brief ceremonies in Baton Rouge. She is a physicial education major at the university.

A citation presented Miss Kincaid recognizes her for aid "rendered on July 18, 1965, when she administered mouth-to-mouth resuscitiation to Jacqueline Reid, after she was pulled unconscious from a pool. Her quick thinking and immediate action saved the child's life."

The incident occurred at a swimming pool in Vicksburg, Miss.

Dr. James W. Reddoch, LSU Dean of Students, made the presentation.

"I'm just so grateful that my Red Cross training was remembered," Betty said when accepting the award.

Huenefeld Plans New York Trip

Fred Huenefeld Jr. of Monroe will journey to New York Monday, as part of Louisiana's delegation, to the 52nd annual meeting of the American Cancer Society.

Other members of the group are Dr. Lesley M. Warshaw of Lake Charles, Harry McEnery of New Orleans and Dr. Robert B. Clifton, also of Lake Charles.

Some 400 persons are expected to attend the five-day meet which will concern itself with smoking and cancer.

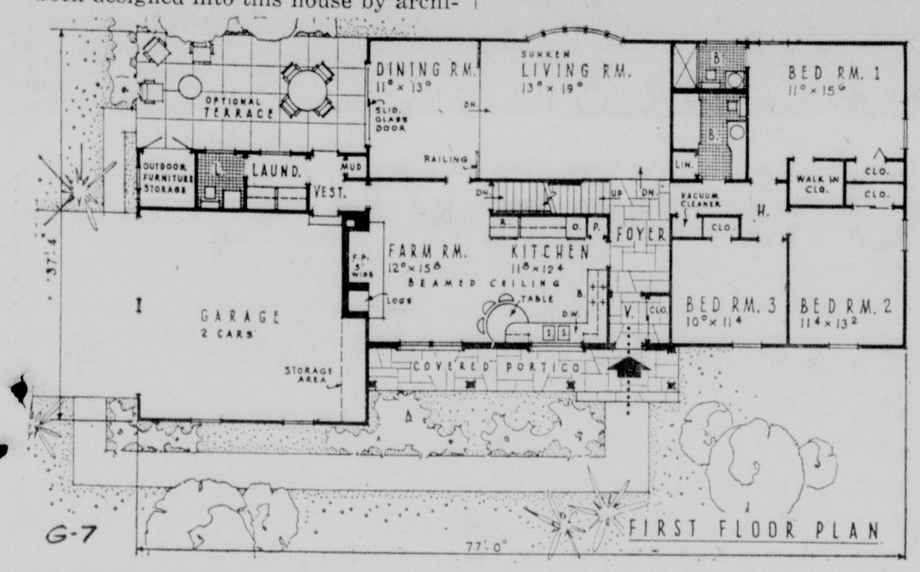
THE ATTRIBUTES of an old-fashioned farmhouse, including a completely-covered front portico entrance, have been designed into this house by architect Herman H. York in combination with modern materials and methods of construction.



FLOOR PLANS: Spacious front foyer permits entrance to bedroom wing, kitchen or formal entertaining area without crossing other areas of house; upstairs bedrooms and bath, to be used only if needed, are made possible by Dutch dormer across most of structure.

Large Farm Room-Kitchen Highlight In Colonial House

By ANDY LANG

In every home — small or large; ranch, split level or two-story; contemporary or traditional — there's a favorite room or area. It's the place where the family congregates most of the time, where activities always seem to be going on — where the house is truly alive.

While this section isn't always definable before a family has moved in, it most certainly is in the farmhouse-type residence created by architect Herman H. York for the House of the Week series.

Bascially a three-bedroom, two and a-half bath house, expansion is possible for an additional two bedrooms and bath. Fine as this expandable feature is, especially for a family which is still growing, it must take second place to what we regard as the outstanding element in the well-designed floor plan. It's a combined farm room-kitchen so large, so inviting and so practical that it can't miss being the focal point of the house for parents and children alike.

A full study of this architect - designed House of the Week may be obtained by writing THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK, c-o the Monroe Morning World, Monroe, La., and enclosing 50 cents to cover cost of handling and mailing. Please specify House Plan G-7.

LENGTH

This combined area is nearly 24' long, with a wood beamed ceiling stretching its entire length. At one end, in the farm room, is a five-foot-wide fireplace and log bin. Pegged wood flooring adds to the atmosphere of Colonial America. The authentic flavor of this period is carried out at the other end of the expanse, where the kitchen cabinets are of birch (or butternut, if desired) and where there is a three-quarter round table placed along the counter. This table is at the end of the counter where it doesn't interfere with mother's kitchen duties nor intrude upon the wall space of the farm room.

The farm room-kitchen combination is at the front of the house, with windows looking out on the covered portico. It is directly to the right of the spacious foyer, which also leads to the living room or the bedroom wing without crossing any part of the house. To the left of the farm room-kitchen are the laundry, mud closet, lavatory, garage entry and service door, nicely planned for convenience.

SPECIAL POINTS

While it is going to be difficult to keep guests as well as family out of the attractive farm room-kitchen area, the living room has its own assets for formal entertaining. Its dropped floor adds to the ceiling height and gives an elegance to the adjoining dining room, which has a railed balcony to set it off. The dining room uses sliding doors for access to the terrace, but architect York suggests that these can be eliminated in favor of either hinged, small-paned doors or a single Dutch door with windows on one or both sides — the choice depending on the type of decor.

The bedroom wing has three bedrooms and two baths, with the owners' bedroom having a walk-in closet and another six-foot closet for "his and her" storage. There is a linen closet in the large bathroom for easy access to the towels and other items more conveniently stored there.

FULL CEILINGS

A Dutch dormer across most of the main section of the house provides full ceilings for extra bedrooms upstairs. In communities where two-family homes are permitted, one of these upstairs rooms may serve as a living room for one or two persons. A small kitchenette can be added near the bathroom plumbing. But the second floor need not be finished when the house is built, or at all, for that matter. In that event, it would be cheaper to close the stairway just off the foyer, put a door at the low level and leave the walls unfinished.

The exterior beauty of Design G-7 is achieved by simplicity and attention to detail. Wood panels under the bedroom windows, flanked by full-length shutters, add restraint yet preserve the farmhouse appearance. The use of vertical battens over exterior-grade plywood also contributes to the architectural character of Colonial houses such as this. Note, too, how the use of ventilating wren houses at the gable ends provides ventilation while softening the appearance of such a triangular surface.

Flower Seeds Suggested

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

If you, Mrs. Gardener, are interested in planting something in your yard, then you may sow the following seeds in the open ground: Larkspur, Snapdragon, early Sweet Pea, and Sweet Alyssum, and sow the following in flats: Calendula, Ageratum, Sweet William, Pansy, Pinks and Candytuft. October is an excellent time to cut back perennials which have finished blooming, divide and reset them.

GIBBERELLIC ACID

There seems to be much interest in this area on the use of gibberellic acid on camellias, so just a few notes more from Neil Odenwald, our horticultural specialist of L. S. U. Agricultural Extension. According to the information from him, little research finding has been published on the use of this chemical. However, its application is simple, safe and has brought pleasant surprises to many camellia enthusiasts. Certain treated varieties have increased flower size by 20 to 30 per cent or more. The real merit in its use is the encouragement of late blooming varieties to come into flowering before freezing temperatures arrive.

Many buds can be treated on large vigorously growing plants while only a few should be selected on small plants. There is considerable variation in the response to the chemical by different varieties.

APPLICATION

To apply, gently remove the small, pointed vegetative bud nearest the selected flower bud which you want to experiment with. A small drop of the solution is placed in the cup-like depression where the bud was removed. Apply gibberellic acid in late September and early October to encourage late flowering camellias to flower early.

No adverse effects have been reported on plants which have had buds treated with gibberellic acid, though it cannot be considered a substitute for good cultural practices. On many healthy varieties it can enhance and improve blooms beyond comparison with non - treated ones.

As I wrote in my column a few Sundays ago, I treated a pink Debutante, Pink Perfection and two or three buds on one of my husband's seedlings that we liked very much. This was done on September 5th. The pink Debutante is blooming beautifully, I have picked two pink Perfection blooms, but will have many in just a few days. The seedling has one blossom, now.

This acid is sold by nurseries and feed and seed stores. This is about all the information we have on the use of gibberellic acid on camellias.

OUT OF TOWN

Your home demonstration agent and your associate agent, Donna M. Moore, will leave tomorrow for Kansas City, Missouri to attend the national meeting of Agricultural Extension Home Economics. Some 350 agents from the southern states have pre-registered. There are 26 from Louisiana who will attend. The two agents from Tensas, Effie Lofton, and Nancy Clark, will meet us here, and we four will drive to Kansas City. We will be back in the Extension office Monday, November 1st.

CONSUMERS

The American consumer is featured in the 1965 yearbook of Agriculture entitled "Consumers All." It covers buying and using food, clothing, household furnishings, and equipment, managing money, caring for yards, lawns, gardens, and house, improving communities and using leisure time. Copies may be obtained by writing your congressman or by writing Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. Congressman, Otto Passman, sent my copy several weeks ago and it's a great book, Mrs. Consumer.

GOOD BREAKFASTS

Did you know, Mrs. Homemaker, that research shows that there are fewer accidents in the late morning hours among those who have an adequate breakfast? Nutrients missed at breakfast are never made up at other meals. We should receive one third of our essential nutrients at breakfast, so be sure to select foods from each of the four food groups when you plan the family breakfast. These four food groups include milk, and milk products, meat, fish, poultry and eggs, bread and cereals, fruits and vegetables. Research also indicates it is better to have three meals which provide high quality protein than to have small amounts divided into one or two meals.

Dwarf Shrubs Fit Purpose

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

With the building of more and more long, low houses and with the construction of more long windows in all kinds of modern structures, we are constantly in search of slow-growing and so-called dwarf shrubs. A letter from a lady landscaper in Winnsboro, Louisiana points up this problem when she says, "Houses are springing up all over Louisiana which are small and built on concrete foundation."

During the past few years, nurserymen all over the South have been trying to fill this need by propagating some of the best slow-growing shrubs. It sometimes takes a bit of searching, but some of the following shrubs can be found:

CREEPING JUNIPERS

The various creeping junipers are coming into nurseries. They are, of course, the equivalent of periwinckle and ivy. Keep them sprayed hard with water in hot, dry spells to keep down red-spider damage. One of the freshest green kinds is the shore juniper, a light, bright cheerful green that contrasts well with the darker and the winter purple ones.

The dwarf yaupons are excellent for low foundation plantings, and so are the truly slow-growing forms of the Japanese holly (Ilex crenata). When Japanese hollies are small, one can hardly tell the faster-growing kinds from the slow-growing, so it is very important to be sure to get the form called "globosa" instead of the one called "rotundifolia" which looks almost exactly like "globosa." "Globosa" in its true form will grow into not a globe form at all, as the name would imply, but into a flattish rounded shrub. Some of the original stock of this wonderful and beautiful plant are 20 to 25 year old, six feet or more across and not more than four feet tall in spite of the fact they have never been pruned at all!

VERY SMALL

The dwarfest of all Ilex crenata forms is one called "Mariesii," and this one sometimes appears in nurseries of plants in containers. This is a truly dwarf plant that grows only about an inch a year!

Among flowering shrubs, there are some beautiful dwarfish ones. There is a dwarf flowering quince. In fact, several dwarf ones are on the market. A late spring to early summer shrub of the greatest value is Deutzia gracilis — only two to three feet when unpruned. There is a dwarf pomegranate which is charming with its fine textured foliage and tiny flowers, and there is, of course, spirea Anthony Waterer which can be had in white as well as in bright red.

For several years, now, there has been a dwarf non-evergreen barberry in some Northern catalogues. This one has red leaves in summer and red berries in winter. In the North, spireas are often cut to the ground right after blooming each spring. Treated this way, they never get big, and we can do the same with the feathery spirea van houttei.

Among the conifers, there is the handsome slow growing Hinoki cypress, used by the Japanese for their bon - sai. When unrestricted, it simply grows extremely slowly into beautifully shaped specimens. For accents, there is the slow-growing Swedish juniper. This is very handsome as it has a sort of golden color in winter. It seems to hardly grow at all!

Make House Snug Against Winter Cold

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Now is the time for Operation Winter.

Cold weather has its good points. But it is the least desirable season for most people. Battening down the hatches of the home for example is a gloomy task, whereas removing storm windows in spring is a cheerful chore.

Advance planning can make winter less hectic and erase some of those discomforts tolerated year after year because we just don't get around to doing something about the problem soon enough.

A cold bedroom need not be an igloo so that one climbs out of bed every morning in winter not knowing whether the joints can stand the strain. It may be kept healthfully cool, with some heat permitted to take the chill out of the air and at least warm up mattresses. Portable heating units, such as baseboard space heaters are highly touted as offering satisfaction. These work like hot water heat that is provided when the entire house is hot water installation. Portable heating contraptions may solve the problem for people in older houses where the cost of completing a built-in heating project would mean ripping up rooms.

FOR BIRDS

You can still have contact with birds in winter, even though you use storm windows. One homemaker who needed to replace storm windows found a combination type that slides up and down in its own tracks so that when she wants to feed the birds she merely slides the screen or storm panel up out of the way. These aluminum storm windows and screens are installed permanently, she says, glide easily and won't rust, rot or sag. But buy the outfit at a reliable dealer, she cautions, so that you can observe whether the sample window panels slide easily, whether the glass rattles and whether the windows are well made.

Getting set for winter is a man's job, but women should keep after menfolk to get the work underway. Postponement is fatal as all big house jobs that involve exteriors become major tasks when winter gets underway.

INSPECT ROOFS

Old roofs should have regular inspection as it is much simpler to patch up a few shingles than to put in a new ceiling when leaks begin. Sun exposure dries out the roof as it gets old and rain and wind can really kick up a roof storm, tearing the loosened and dried shingles. Good places to check for leaks are around the flashings of chimney and gutters.

Cleaning downspouts and gutters will save many headaches later. Clogging can cause the water to leak into the house, costly experiences when ceilings, draperies and furniture marring is involved.

One man who waited until winter to fix some shingles around a sealed dormer, lost his ladder and was stranded on the roof for more than an hour in the freezing cold. He kept calling his wife but she was listening to television.

It's a good plan to fix foundation cracks when they are discovered. One woman admired the lovely ivy that was climbing through the foundation into her basement utility room. She never mentioned it to her husband, wanting to surprise him when it got real lush. She had dreams of having an ivy wall there as a lovely touch to cheer her on laundering days. When the whole area began leaking last winter, she called in her husband who wasn't at all sympathetic.

Another thing to observe in fall are cold spots around the house. Good fuel savings may be made if drafts can be shut out. Often all it takes is some weatherstripping at the bottom of doors, window sealers at windows, insulation provided by draperies, floor screens and blinds in the window areas.

Mums Beauty Is Plentiful

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

"Mums the Word," especially now when the many beautiful varieties are beginning to paint an array of blending colors on mother earth. Now is the time that we all wish we had planted some of these earlier for color in our own gardens and home.

If you are among these you might take advantage of the many varieties in bloom to make a check list of those you would like for your garden next year. You have a special invitation to visit the garden at Louisiana Tech in Ruston.

The garden is located to the back and east of the horticulture building. This is a good time to go take a look at the many rows of blooms and varieties. See for yourself how these lovely flowers add beauty and color, either contrasting or harmonious tint and tone of one color.

MANY VARIETIES

Tech has field grown many varieties for four years now trying to get the best varieties for our section of the country. We are fortunate to have all this information available to us.

Dr. John Wright used mums for the designs on last Wednesday's program for the Fifth District Garden Center. Four outstanding designs, all made in similar containers, low bowls, contained different colors and varieties brought from the Tech gardens. Dr. Wright explained that the mums are so versatile to use for flower arranging since they come in so many different types, sizes, and forms. The "spoon type" which is a small, gold blend with bronze was combined with a larger yellow decorative type. The line material was castor bean with the foliage clipped. Celosia formed the line material for the deep red "Ruby Mound." Daisy type mums in white with yellow centers were massed into a large triangle line made of the red spikes of the "Fire Spike" blooms. The white mum is lovely combined with red. For a low scalene triangle design the clipped castor bean foliage and stem was used for line with the light and deep purple mums massed within the line. Mums are longlasting flowers and can be enjoyed in the home. Keep fresh water in the container into which a tablespoon of vinegar and one teaspoon of sugar are added. The vinegar keeps down bacteria growth and the sugar provides food.

SHOW FEATURE

Another way to become educated about the many varietes of mums and just how we can use them is to attend a flower show where this flower is the main feature. You will have this chance very soon because the annual mum show will be held in Ruston, Nov. 12 and 13. More will be printed about this show. But mark these dates and you won't be sorry if you make a special effort to attend.

This is always the most beautiful show of its type anywhere around this section of the country. I know — I've been to several of them. Garden club members should plan to attend this show in a body. Make this your club project — now.

Dr. Wright has given me a list of varieties of mums (including the Harvest Giants) that have done well for this area. He explained that varieties do not always bloom on schedule. The early varieties tend to bloom on time and late varieties bloom early. This is a response to day length with temperature as an interacting factor. High temperatures delay blooming even when the day length is correct for flowering. Adequate watering and feeding will hasten flowering during the normal flowering season.

Cushion Type: Ruby Mound (red), blooming period — September 25; Major Cushion (pink), September 25; Corsage Cushion (white), October 1; Golden Cushion (yellow), September 25; Mesabi (bronze), September 20; Dolli-ette (bronze spoon), October 1.

Use Vines For Some Landscaping

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

Vines may help solve some of your landscaping problems. They may be used to advantage in areas difficult to tend, corners or slopes.

In your selection, be careful to choose those best suited for a particular area. For instance, honeysuckle will spread widely unless it is planted where it will be confined by natural barriers, such as walks.

Vines have many uses. They often grow where grass will not flourish. Or they may be used as screening along fences or on lattices. They help prevent soil erosion on slopes. Or a few vines may be planted in attractive containers to decorate a bare corner of a patio or porch.

Suggestions for planting in the south are bougainvilleae, jasmine trumpet flower, mignonette - vine, sasanqua camelia, jewel-vine and bignonia.

WIDER USE

Suited for a wider climate range are wisteria, bittersweet, clematis wintercreeper and honeysuckle. English ivy will grow almost anywhere in the United States. Climbing hydrangea will do well in many parts of this country, as will climbing roses.

Some vines are selected for their flower; others for colorful berries, such as pyracanthias and hollies, or for foiliage.

While we still prefer to plant evergreens in spring, we must admit that modern packaging, with earthballs and burlap, make the argument of spring vs. summer less important these days.

Regardless of when you plant evergreens, they should be well-watered until they become established.

As with the ivies, the evergreens offer a wide choice to the gardener.

Singers Slate Auditions

By ROBERT SIMONTON
World Staff Writer

Tenor and bass auditions have been scheduled by the Monroe Civic Singers to draw more representation into their already highly successful group.

The auditions will be held on the basement floor of the First Baptist Church Thursday and Friday (Oct. 28 and 29) from 7 until 9 p.m.

Conducted informally, tryouts will be heard by Dennis L. Cook director of the Singers; Thomas Brakefield, president; and Walter Mangham, treasurer.

Monroe music lovers 20 years of age and over are invited to audition. Vocal experience is desired, such as training or choral work, but is not necessary.

The Singers now have a number of trained voices — some of the best in Monroe — but need supporting singers to round out the group.

Aim of the organization is to foster the cultural image of Monroe and spread good will for the city.

Director Cooke and his wife, Fran, have expressed appreciation to the local Chamber of Commerce for their support of the Civic Singers.

CONCERT OPENER

Great sounds from the scores of one of Broadway's all-time favorite composers — Richard Rodgers — will be featured in the opening concert of the Northeast State Concerts Association current season.

The production will be staged at Neville Auditorium beginning at 8:15 p.m. Monday.

Starring will be Richard Hayman and his orchestra, with vocalists Elaine Malbin, William Metcalf, Joanne Wheatley and Hal Kanner.

This gala evening of entertainment will be a very appropriate occasion to inaugurate a most impressive season for the Northeast Concerts and Chairman Davis Bingham and his fellow-workers are to be complimented for their versatile bookings.

The Louisiana Tech Concert series will open Wadnesday, Nov. 3 with the Jose Molina Bailes Espanoles at 8 p.m. in Howard Auditorium. The lavishly costumed and brilliantly staged production will feature talented young Spanish dancers, singers and instrumentalists. . . A short story, "That Summer Day," with its setting in southwest Louisiana near Jeanerette, will be published in the fall issue of "The Literary Review." It was written by Carl Wooten, assistant professor of English at the University of Southwestern Louisiana, Lafayette . . . About 500 buried treasures from the basement of the Delgado Museum of Art in New Orleans will be auctioned Oct. 25-27 at Gallier Hall, 545 St. Charles Ave.

CONSERVATION

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Groundwork for a long-range Kentucky water conservation program may be formed at a conference of public and private agencies on Oct. 26. The Department of Natural Resources is planning legislation next year to include creation of a Water Resources Authority.

Civil Rights Workers Hit Sensitive Spot

LINCOLNTON, Ga. (AP) — Civil rights workers have been probing counties in northeast Georgia for several weeks, searching for a sensitive spot.

Apparently they have found one. The hostility with which demonstrations have been met in Lincoln County indicates it may be the scene of a major outbreak of racial violence.

The road sign says it is 16 miles from Washington, Ga., to Lincolnton, the seat of Lincoln County. But there is no sign to describe the social distance between the two communities.

Two local landmarks seem to symbolize the attitude of Washington, a community of about 11,000 with tree-shaded streets and carefully kept antebellum homes. One is the site of Eli Whitney's first cottton gin. The other is a tree.

In 1795 Whitney set up his gin on a planation about five miles outside Washington, center of Wilkes County. It was an historic step in American industrial progress. It also contributed to an increase in slavery because it made cotton farming more profitable.

Washington citizens pride themselves on going to great lengths to make tradition and progress compatible. But it isn't always easy.

The tree, for instance, is a giant moss-covered oak against which the guns of Union troops once rested.

It stood where progress said a widened road must go. The road had to yield. The tree stayed. A sidewalk makes a 180-degree loop around the tree, which is in its path.

Officials at Washington have expressed concern and dismay over demonstrations which hit their town this week.

They say they've always been proud of good race relations.

The protest, organized by Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) workers from outside the county, don't seem to fit with the historical sense of residents.

"We've never had anything like this happen here before," said the Negro principal, Mrs. T.S. McClendon.

City Councilman R. T. Lindsey said, "We've always had good relations with the colored people in Washington, and we feel that we still have good relations.

"The mayor, the City Council, the Board of Commissioners and the school authorities have always been able to talk with responsible Negro leaders about our common problems. We don't need the influence of outsiders."

Wilkes County's school integration plan met with U.S. Education Department approval, but no transfer requests from Negroes have yet been received at the white school.

"I fully expected my children would be attending an integrated school this year," a white father said, "and most of us expect they'll be integrated next year."

In adjoining Lincoln County, prospects for formal interracial communications have faded in the face of demonstrations.

Mayor Harry Stewart, an automobile dealer, said a Negro adult group, the Twilight Improvement Association, had made plans last week to ask for a meeting with white county officials, but a formal request never came.

Formed from Wilkes County in 1796, Lincoln County is set in rolling northeast Georgia cattle, cotton and woodland country.

Contractors Pick Slate Of Officers

BATON ROUGE (Special) — John L. Morrison of New Roads was elected president of the Louisiana Council of Associated General Contractors (AGC) Chapters during the group's annual convention here.

Other new officers of the council, which includes eight Louisiana AGC chapters, are former state Sen. Guy W. Sockrider Jr. of Lake Charles, vice president, and Preston Eggers Jr. of Baton Rouge, secretary. Frank A. Barber of Baton Rouge was re-elected council treasurer.

Some 400 delegates and guests attended the three-day convention which ended Saturday (Oct. 23).

Guest speakers included Leon Gary, state director of public works; David L. Perkins of Lafayette, president of the Louisiana Architects Association; Ira Hardin of Atlanta, Ga., president of the Associated General Contractors of America; William E. Dunn of Washington, executive director of AGC of America, and James W. Moore of Monroe, Fifth District member of the State Highway Board.

During the convention, outgoing council officers and past presidents were singled out for special honors.

Silver plaques and cuff links commemorating service to the council were presented to 1965 officers and the past presidents by E. V. Patterson Jr. of Baton Rouge, a national director of AGC of America.

Outgoing officers include Harold Heres of Baton Rouge, president; Morrison, vice president, and Arren Broussard of Baton Rouge, secretary.

Men Given Life Sentences; Face More Charges

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The men sentenced to life imprisonment Friday for kidnaping California Finance Director Hale Champion were en route to Oregon Saturday to face murder, kidnap, and robbery charges.

Carl Cletus Bowles, 24, and Wilfred Marion Gray, 30, drew life sentences from U.S. Dist. Judge Thomas J. MacBride for the Champion kidnaping.

The Sacramento County sheriff's office reported U.S. marshals took Bowles and Gray and left for Portland, Ore.

There they gave federal bank robbery and kidnap charges. Asst. U.S. Atty. Rothwell B. Mason of Sacramento said Bowles and Gray also are wanted by Lane County, Oregon, authorities on charges they killed a deputy sheriff there.

Police say the kidnaping here of Champion, his wife and daughter climaxed a five-day, three-state crime spree that began shortly after Bowles and Gray were released from Oregon State Prison in July.

After robbing a bank and slaying the deputy, police say, Bowles and Gray kidnaped six people in Oregon's Cascade Mountains and forced them to drive to Sacramento.

They released their hostages unharmed, then kidnaped Champion, his wife and baby daughter and drove into Nevada. The kidnaping of Champion — California's top appointive official and Gov. Edmund G. Brown's chief political adviser — set off one of the West's biggest manhunts.

The Champions were released unharmed by their abductors 24 hours after the kidnaping.

Bowles and Gray surrendered meekly to police a short time later.

In pronouncing sentence, Judge MacBride told Bowles and Gray:

"This was a heinous crime executed in a vicious manner."

MacBride agreed, however, to drop additional kidnap counts against the two men involving Mrs. Champion and her infant daughter.

Glorious Gospel Is Glad Tidings

By REV. JAMES MILLER, Pastor
Georgia Street Church of God
Monroe

All the works of God are glorious. Wherever we look abroad, we see "The wonders of his hands, or impress of his feet." The earth displays his greatness, goodness, and power. The heavens display his glory, and the firmament showeth his handiwork. Who can lift his eyes upwards to the expanded skies, and behold the star-studded heavens, without exclaiming, "How manifold and glorious are all thy works, O Lord God Almighty."

There is a scene still more delightful, more glorious, and more sublime to man than any of these; a subject more closely connected with his well being; not of secondary, but of the most momentous consequence to him, both in time and eternity; and that is the subject of the text, "The Glorious Gospel of Christ."

NEWS OF SALVATION

The Gospel is the glad tidings of salvation. The angels said, "We bring you good tidings of great joy." The Apostle Paul said, "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners." Again the Apostle Paul declared, "The Gospel is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth." It was this God-given Gospel that overtook Saul of Tarsus and brought the God-given light upon him. From this time on we see the Conversion of Saul turning him into the greatest missionary of the New Testament. Paul stood before peasants and kings and declared Jesus Christ, the Son of God, is the Saviour of the world. The great apostle did not preach a gospel of his own concoction, but rather he preached "Jesus Christ and Him crucified." My friend, there has never been greater need in the world for the Gospel.

GOSPEL NEEDED

The Gospel was needed when I was a boy and it is needed now just as much, or more. With the world going after pleasure more than after God; with our boys facing death on foreign battlefields, it is time, yea, high time for America to turn to the real Gospel of Jesus Christ. It is time to return to Bible study and Bible living. It is time for families to join together in heart and soul in regular church attendance. In this dark, dismal age our only hope and refuge is in God and His precious Word. It has been said that we are fighting a war that cannot be won. Boys, 10 - years-old, who listen to radio reports and telecasts may find themselves one day on the far-flung battle fields for country and loved ones.

I say, it is time we should let this God - given Gospel have pre-eminence in our lives and souls. The Gospel presents the only remedy for the ills of this world. It is freedom for the slave. Raiment for the naked. Bread of life for the starving. Health to the sick. Pardon to the guilty. Adoption for the aliens. Life to the dead. Salvation to the lost. Heaven to brands justly doomed to everlasting burnings.

AMAZING POWER

This glorious Gospel possesses amazing influence and power. It changes the heart. It renews the mind, and elevates it to God, heaven, and eternal things. It is the staff on which we lean. It is our celestial telescope. The bread of the soul and gives us support in the time of trial, tribulations, anxieties, and death. To the pilgrim a glorious city of habitation. To the warrior a glorious crown. To the laborer a glorious rest. To the believer a glorious world of celestial vision, where he shall see God in perfect peace and eternal joy. The Gospel gives us hope for the resurrection and insures an eternity of bliss. It tells us, in Christ there is a joy unspeakable and full of glory.

REV. JAMES MILLER

The Gospel tells the sinner that he is indeed guilty before a just God, but that this just "God so loved the world that he gave his only Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should have everlasting life."

The greatest theme for evangelical preaching is not "current events," though important. It is not the economy of this country, though important. It is not even guessing the next move of the communists. The greatest theme of evangelical preaching is "The Gospel." This is man's greatest need!

Look around you and see the results of this Gospel. Men who were once drunkards, now sober and respected men. Girls who once threw themselves away, now transformed and living respectable lives. Church deacons who once were outcasts, now great religious leaders. Ministers who were once in the clutches of Satan, now released from the enemy of the soul and fire - brands for God and his Glorious Church. See the Christian minister and layman alike traversing this God-given earth, with the Gospel of Jesus Christ. See them telling forth the good news to the lost and dying world.

To some men, dynamite is force. To other men, atomic energy is force, but to the Christian, the Gospel of Jesus Christ is the greatest force in the world.

Series Here To Feature H. Starling

Harvey Starling, local traveling evangelist of the Church of Christ, will be the featured speaker for a series of gospel messages to be delivered starting today and continuing through Sunday, October 31 at the College Town Church of Christ, 3605 DeSiard, Monroe.

The evangelist was the speaker in a three-week Campaign for Christ conducted by local Churches of Christ last May 3-21, and was at the same time moderator for a series of 11 thirty - minute T.V. programs entitled "Bible Questions and Answers," on which Bill Smith, Harold Poland, and Jurd Brantley were panelists.

Sister Bernette, Ex-P.O.W., Recalls Starting Home Here

By DIANE TAYLOR
Staff Writer

An unusual ex-prisoner of war is the one who does not recall the bad treatment received in Japanese war camps during World War II with bitterness, but who says only that "they did the best they could with us."

Such a person visited for a short while in Monroe in early October and the fact that she is an unusual prisoner of war is doubly so because she is a Catholic sister. But many local persons will remember her, not because she was once among the prisoners who were repatriated in exchange for American-held Japanese prisoners of war, but because she was in charge of the founding of the original St. Joseph's Home for the Aged here.

Sister Mary Bernette, of the Third Order of St. Francis, a nursing community whose Mother House is in Springfield, Ill., had been back in the states a year after she was released from a Japanese war camp in China when she was sent in 1944 from Springfield to Monroe to found a home for the aged.

PREDECESSOR

The home was the predecessor of the beautiful and spacious non-denominational St. Joseph's Home for the Aged which is now located on the Sterlington Road here. Original site of the home was on the corner of Calypso and Hart Streets. Ten guests were accommodated at a time, with two to three persons per room, in the ten-room house.

After the ground was broken for the nursing home, Sister Bernette returned to Springfield. This was in March of 1947. She did not see the home, completed, until she returned to the city for a one-day visit in 1957. A trip to the home in early October was the first extended stay she had had in Monroe, she said, and it was her first time to really see the present building of the home she was sent to found.

"I feel very fortunate," she said. "I've seen evidence of wonderful progress here since my last visit. I am much impressed also by the change in the city itself. It has grown very rapidly since my last visit."

"I feel very close to the people here because we received such warm hospitality from Monroe residents in the '40's when we were planning for the home. People of all denominations contributed and were helpful to us in so many ways. The spirit of the people here was truly one of hospitality. My home visit (to the United States) would not have been complete without my coming here to renew my old friendships."

The nun is on leave from her duties at St. Francis Hospital at Nagasaki, Japan, a tuberculosis sanitarium, where she has spent the past eight years.

ATTENDED RETREAT

She was at the Mother House at Springfield recently when several sisters from St. Joseph's attended a retreat there and asked her to return with them for a visit before leaving for her next stop at Largo, Fla. Nov. 18, she and her traveling companion, Sister Mary Dolorice, who is stationed at St. Mary's Hospital at Himeji, Japan, were scheduled to return to their duties in Japan, the country in which they elected to serve, in spite of World War II memories.

Looking back over the years of the war and the years after it in Asia, the sister said she would not have preferred to be any place else. "We were needed there," she said simply.

CHINA

The sister had been assigned in 1936 to serve in a mission (hospital) in North Shantung, China. She went as a nurse, having earned her degree in medical technology. She was still serving here as a nurse when war broke out.

And so in early December of 1941, with about 1,800 others, including some 500 Catholic missionaries, several hundred Protestant missionaries and other civilians overseas, she was taken as a war prisoner.

"At first I interned at the hospital where I was," she said, "but afterwards, in 1943, we were sent to Weishen, China to an internment camp for five months before we got notice to repatriate."

Although the sister admitted food was terribly scarce and had to be strictly rationed, she did not give many details on the hardships of the war camp.

"Our camp was well organized," she recalled. "We had a variety of people with different abilities and talents and we organized ourselves into nine nine committees to take care of each realm of life—educational, cooking, hospital care — and we did the best we could. The internees ran the camp."

DIET PROBLEMS

Speaking of the nutrition problem caused by the lack of proper diet, the sister said many times those in charge of rationing food would grind egg shells into a fine powder to be mixed in with the food served the children in order to add calcium to their diet.

She had grown thin and weak, along with the others, Sister Bernette said, by the time they were allowed to repatriate.

"Those of us who were notified to repatriate boarded a Japanese boat at Shanghai," she said, "and we sailed for East India. The exchange of Japanese and American prisoners took place there — at Goa.

"Both boats, the Japanese boat and the Swedish ocean liner, the Gripsholm, stood in the Indian harbor for five days while comfort packages were transferred from one boat to the other for prisoners still in China. The exchange took place in October and it only took about an hour for us to get aboard the Gripsholm.

"Although there were 1,500 of us on board the Gripsholm, we were not cramped as we had been on the other boat. This was a luxury liner.

"From East India, the Japanese boat returned the former prisoners of the Americans to China. The Gripsholm sailed for Port Elizabeth, South Africa. We spent two days there, then went to Rio de Janeiro in Brazil for another two days. While stopped at both harbors, we were allowed to visit convents and churches in the immediate vicinities. While aboard the Gripsholm, we saw Red Cross in action.

"The many in need of clothing were helped and children were given toys to relieve some of the boredom. I was especially thrilled to be given a sweater which had been packed by the Red Cross Chapter of Buffalo, N.Y., as this was my family home then.

"From Rio, we sailed for New York and on Dec. 3, 1943, we arrived 'home.' "

MONROE

After a year in which to recuperate, the sister was sent to Monroe as the pioneer Sister Superior for St. Joseph's.

"When we opened this home here," she recalled recently, "it was at the request of the late Bishop Desmond of Alexandria, who wanted to do something for the aged."

Mrs. Annie Reim of Monroe donated the land for St. Joseph's, she remembered, and within several months, the ground was broken for construction of the building.

The temporary home had been located downtown. She said she spent her free hours visiting patients at Charity Hospital here and doing small tasks for the doctors, including nursing work and visits to shut-ins.

BACK TO CHINA

After leaving Monroe, Sister Bernette went back to China (May, 1947) and first attended a language school in Peking which was conducted by the Spanish Sisters. The following year, however, she and her colleagues were forced to leave China because of the communist intrusion.

"We refugeed to Shanghai," she said, "and stayed with the Community of Charity Sisters there for six months. Then, in January of 1949, the last of the Chinese sisters went to the states and I went to Japan at the request of our missionaries there."

She served in a nursing capacity in Japan and in 1950 cofounded the St. Mary's Hospital at Himeji. It had been an Army post and was renovated into a hospital. A modern hospital was completed there two years ago.

She also helped with the founding of a novitiate in Tokyo and with the organizing of the Nagasaki hospital where she still serves.

At Nagasaki an atomic bomb had been dropped during the war and there was much destruction.

St. Francis had formerly been a seminary but Canadian Franciscans had converted the building into a hospital during the war. It had been taken over in 1949 by the sisters at the priests' request.

Since that time, no funds have been available to rebuild the hospital, but it has been remodeled and presently hospitalizes about 100 tuberculosis patients and has room for a general hospital in which 30 beds are utilized.

The sister, who is as much at home in Japan as the United States, has helped found several Catholic institutions around the world, but she still hopes to see the rebuilding of the Japanese hospital in which she now is serving, she said.

AN EX-PRISONER OF WAR, Sister Mary Bernette poses beside the statue of St. Joseph in the lobby of St. Joseph's Home for the Aged here. The Catholic nun was sent in 1944 to found the original St. Joseph's Home which was first located on the corner of Calypso and Hart Streets. She recently visited in Monroe for a short while, her second visit since leaving the city in 1947. (Staff photo by John Fogleman)

Van Johnson Still Loner Moms Adore

NEW YORK (AP) — Van Johnson is a loner who doesn't want to be alone.

"I'll probably end up a recluse," he asserts, "but I'm not putting on dark glasses so I won't be recognized."

If this sounds mildly confusing, you just aren't properly tuned to the chap who 20 years ago was called "the most adored male in the U.S.A."

Having parlayed boy-next-door charm to box office bonanza through 90 films, Johnson, at 49, maintains insouciance unabated by career flipflops and a siege of serious illness.

Much of the Johnson fad was attributed to a knack for stirring maternal glow in the female sector of audiences. He readily acknowledges a debt to such momism.

ADVANTAGE

"An advantage of getting older is having all those moms still out there," he says. "Now they come around to the stage door and bring the kids.

"Then they go home and hit their husbands and say 'Fred, isn't it wonderful we're still together!'

"Sometimes they bring their husbands along and say, 'Would you mind coming outside and speaking to him? He's shy.'

"I understand why the husbands are shy — they've hated me for 30 years."

It was back in 1935 that the freckle-faced redhead from Newport, R.I., arrived on Broadway — as a chorus boy. Now, after a postcinema interlude of in-person appearances, stock performances and television, Johnson arrives this week — Oct. 27 — at the O'Neill Theater in "Mating Dance," a comedy by Eleanor Harris Howard and Helen McAvity about a publisher married to a woman senator and in love with a younger woman.

PASSED UP OFFERS

Since an abortive visit to Broadway in 1962 in "Come On Strong," Johnson passed up an assortment of offers, turndowns which he insists had nothing to do with the adverse critical judgment.

"The critics broke my heart years ago," he says like a man who couldn't care less. "I poured blood all over the set in my fourth or fifth picture, and one of those guys — he happened to be right — said 'Johnson gave a great imitation of Lionel Barrymore'".

His decision to try the stage again stems from having gotten "tired of laundry bags and room service on tour dates."

"You can play eight or 10 night club weeks a year," he declares, "and the money's terrific but it's a lonely life."

There's a big difference, he notes, "between being a loner like I am and being lonely."

SURGERY

Two years ago the Johnson career was interrupted for removal of a malignant tumor from his left thigh and a follow-up exploratory operation last year showed everything okay.

The 1963 episode didn't pass without Johnson indulging in a bit of humor.

"I wanted a color television set, but the store said it couldn't be delivered for a month. I called the manager and said, 'In a month I'll be dead.' So they put it in the next day."

Does he look at any of his own old movies on the late-night shows?

"I didn't even look at them when I made them," he replies. "Why should I look at them now?"

He'd much rather read — "I finish about five books a week," — enjoy the view from his bachelor penthouse overlooking the East River, or "Paint an orange in a tree."

His teen-age daughter, Schuyler, is interested in following in his show business footsteps. Johnson is ready with paternal advice, but is leaving any decisions to her.

NEW NAME

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The Eastman Dental Dispensary, established by the late George Eastman, has been given a new name — the Eastman Dental Center. Dr. Basil G. Biddy, director of the institution, says the name-change is more in keeping with the center's role.

SHERRY JACKSON, Frankie Randall and Cindy Malone star in "Wild on the Beach," a 20th Century-Fox musical filmed on location on the California coast. The picture opens Wednesday at the Jim Theatre.

CURTAIN CALL

Curtain Call wants to apologize for giving the impression last Sunday that some seats were still available for that afternoon's performance of "The Pleasure Of His Company." When the column was filed several days before, there were about 25 vacancies plus the 20 extra seats across the back (our "standing room"), but by Friday night every one of these was taken. In fact the last four performances of the show were filled to capacity, making total attendance the highest for a non-musical since "Auntie Mame."

If any of our members were disappointed by not being able to get reservations toward the end of the run, Little Theatre regrets it very much. Twice, however, we had over 75 empty seats which would have taken care of everyone, so once more we urge people to make reservations early and attend on the less popular nights if at all convenient.

SPECIAL PLEA

We also issue a special plea not to be a "No Show." If you find you cannot honor a reservation, please notify the Strauss Playhouse box office as soon as possible or even at the last minute. We can almost always use the seats you release to accommodate those on the waiting list, move people forward from the "standing room" or put a group of friends together. In turn, we can try to give you reservations for a later performance.

We found three pairs of gloves in the auditorium which may be claimed by calling 323-1235 during the coming week.

A gentleman from Oklahoma City arrived unexpectedly at one performance of "The Pleasure Of His Company," but the record for the most distant attendance was set by Willoughby Thomas' sister Betty who came all the way from New York to see his sterling characterization of Pogo Poole. Willoughby ended up with three Green Room ties for his roles as Pogo, as Gaston in "Gigi," and as Brian O'Bannion in "Auntie Mame."

IN REHEARSAL

Two shows are now in rehearsal at Strauss Playhouse, the off-beat comedy, "Everybody Loves Opal" which comes second in our membership series, and "Winnie-The-Pooh," a children's show, marking the first time that we have presented one in the fall. "Opal," of course, is rehearsing at night, and "Pooh" in the afternoon. The set for the latter will be out of the way in time to finish the set for the former, so our logistics are in order.

Murray Burfford advises that Marty Mullens has been added to the cast of "Winnie-The-Pooh." The stage crew will be drawn from members of the Theatre School classes. Ken Garrison and Rick Taylor are sharing the task of stage manager, while Betsy Taylor is assistant to the director.

FOUR PERFORMANCES

"Winnie-The-Pooh" will have four performances on consecutive weekends, November 6 and 7 and November 13 and 14. Curtain time will be 2:30 p.m. both Saturday and Sunday. Tickets may be ordered by mail in advance, obtained through the box office when it opens or bought at the door if seats are still available then. Although individual seats will not be reserved, special arrangements can be made for birthday parties. Cash admission will be the customary 75 cents for students and $1 for adults. As usual, punch and cookies will be served.

All over the country, community theatres are struggling to find permanent homes and often ingenious solutions are contrived. Le Petit Theatre de Terrebonne has just remodeled the old city hall at Houma into a playhouse, while the Little Theatre of El Dorado shares a newly rebuilt armory with the local symphony and art league. Odessa and San Angelo, Texas, have their building sites and are in the throes of fund-raising drives. It makes us realize our good fortune to have the facilities we enjoy at Strauss Playhouse.

MUSICAL ON MOMISM

NEW YORK (AP) — A satire about momism which made the bestseller list, "A Mother's Kisses," is being developed into a musical for the 1966-67 theatrical season.

Christine Keeler Marries British Engineer Friday

READING, England (UPI) — Christine Keeler, central figure in Britain's 1963 sex and security scandal was married here Friday, it was announced Saturday night.

The 23-year-old former playgirl married British engineer James Levermore, 24, by special license in a Registry Office of this county town 30 miles west of London. About 18 friends and relatives attended the wedding.

Miss Keeler, whose affair with former War Minister John Profumo eventually forced his resignation and almost toppled then-Prime Minister Harold MacMillan's Conservative government in 1963, almost succeeded in keeping the wedding secret.

But early editions of the London "News of the World" Sunday newspaper quoted her as saying:

"All I want to do now is to lead a normal married life like any other young girl. Everything that brought me into the news before is all behind me and finished with and I just want to start afresh completely as an ordinary housewife."

The events Miss Keeler referred to were so sensational that the same News of the World newspaper paid her a reported $47,840 for her life story at the height of the scandal.

"Jim and I want to do everything we can to keep our married name out of the papers so that people will forget about us altogether and there will be no pointing fingers in the street," she said.

Bay Springs Oil Field Hits 15th Straight Well

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The Bay Springs Oil Field of Jasper County has recorded its 15th well without a dry hole since its discovery last January.

Shell, Pan American and Pruett No. 1 Hall is flowing at the rate of 700 barrels per day from perforations in the Cotton Valley zone at 14,487-501 feet.

The field has produced over 600,000 barrels since February and should top a million before the end of the year.

Also at Bay Springs a well located inside the town limits is drilling below 14,200 feet for testing both the Cotton Valley and deeper Smackover lime zones.

The important test is Shell, Pan American and Pruett, No. 1 Arledge with a contract depth of 16 900 feet.

In Smith County, Shell is below 15,800 feet in its Carter-Longino located in the Sylvarena area. Contract depth is 17,200 feet. Operators were releasing no information.

Placid Oil Company is completing its fourth well in the recently discovered Stamps Field in Wilkinson County.

The well is the Pritchartt No. 4. The Pritchartt No. 5 is below 5,100 feet.

Pritchartt No. 2 informant released this week showed 114 barrels per day from a deep Wilcox sand at 8,154-60 feet and the Pritchartt No. 3K at 135 barrels per day from perforations at 8162-6y feet.

The discovery well in the rapidly developing field was completed in September and has been shut in for a number of weeks.

Another new field has been officially recorded in Adams County with Wade Fortenberry and Weco Petroleum Company finaling their Butler No. 1, in the Laurel Hill area.

The well flowed at the rate of 62 barrels per day from perforations in the Wilcox sand at 4,880-82 feet.

In Rankin County, Tidewater Oil Company is drilling below 16,300 feet and nearing contract depth in its Gooch No. 1 near Pelahatchie.

Enlistee Tells About His Tour In Viet Nam

By DIANE TAYLOR
World Staff Writer

Worrying about the unknown destination of his ship . . . eating two breakfasts to keep his weight up . . . seeing the scenic hillsides of the Philippines at sunset as the ship bypasses the islands . . . . experiencing suspense when he hears that his ship is being escorted by a submarine, but not knowning why . . . arriving suddenly in Qui Nhon, Viet Nam.

All these incidents make up the daily life of an Army enlistee from Monroe who is assigned presently to the Military Intelligence Detachment on the coast of South Viet Nam.

In letters received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Briscoe Trousdale Jr., 1405 Fairview, Sgt. Allen Trousdale has described many aspects of one phase of the Viet war.

A graduate of Tulane University School of Architecture in 1963, Trousdale volunteered the summer he graduated for the military intelligence.

The Monroe solider completed his basic training at Fort Polk in Vernon Parish and from there attended some nine weeks of intelligence training at Fort Holabird, Md. He next was assigned to Fort Benning, Ga., where he remained until Aug. 26 when he was shipped to Viet Nam. The trip abroad took a month.

The ship, which he said was "of World War II vintage" stopped at Guam and passed very close by the Philippines.

The ship, said Allen, was inadequate in almost all respects, including ventilation. He wrote home that, "I never thought that I would want to get to Viet Nam, but this boat is the worst experience I have ever gone through." Perhaps one of the reasons he thought so was because the crew, having little storage space for water, was required, at one point of the journey, to take cold salt water showers, and there was no laundry facilities at all.

A few days later, the weary traveler wrote that fresh water showers were finally available to the men and they were soon to get a clean pair of fatigues to wear.

One day in early September, he wrote, "A littel excitement for the voyage. A crewman told us this morning that we are being followed by an American submarine escort."

Allen wrote of the crew's study of the Vietnamese language and proudly told that his knowledge of the language was growing.

"I can now say 'Hello, how are you?' 'I am fine. And you?' 'Thank you,' and several other useful phrases," he wrote.

A graduate of Neville High School, the Monroe soldier seems to have a number of talents aside from his architectual skills. He is an amateur artist who had a one-man art show at the age of 12. His letters speak of writing short stories and keeping a log to pass away the monotonous hours aboard ship. He also has begun an English speech instruction class now that he has reached Viet Nam, and from the natives there, learned that his Vietnamese is progressively improving.

In the letters received by his parents during the past month, Allen has revealed much of his nature: a love of beautiful scenery and of beautiful words, a frustration voiced through his written disapproval of what he fears will happen in Viet Nam, a strong patriotism, a love of life that makes him reach out and absorb everything possible of the new culture he is discovering.

As the trip ended, he wrote in a letter to his parents, "We are now lying at anchor in the bay at Qui Nhon. I watched Viet Nam come over the horizon after breakfast this morning, under total overcast. It was bare and noncommital.

"The coastline is rugged and indented with high hills covered with green plants. As we came within sigh of our destination, some of the massiveness of the continuing buildup became apparent. The bay was filled with ships. Now at anchor, several hours later into the morning, I count more than ten freighters, mostly Lykes Lines, two small aircraft carriers, a large maintenance ship beside us, a large and luxurious looking troop carrier and a couple of destroyers and landing craft plying back and forth.

"The thing that worries me now," he continues, "is that living conditions are probably going to be atrocious. We now plan to go ashore at Cam Rahn which is roughtly 200 miles north of Saigon. We will likely be in tents, eating out of mess kits and that new Remington razor is going to be useless."

When settled, the soldier wrote, "I have been told by the little beach boys here that my pronunciation is very good. Now all I need is a good vocabulary."

"The children everywhere shout 'Halo, halo' when we come in sight and one night when we went wandering down a little alley just behind the main street, we were mobbed by 15 or 20 kids who raised such a racket that their parents yelled at them to quiet down. We still seem to be somewhat of a novelty. Three phrases that all the children seem to know are ' you,''number one' and 'number ten.' Number one is great and number ten is poor.

"The city abounds in cycolos, which are bicycles with chairs in front and canvas that can be pulled up like a baby carriage when it rains, and with side pieces that can be let down when it really rains.

"They are small people, and sometimes fitting a chair up under one of their tables is quite a task.

"Incidentally, they put us off the boat in Cam Rahn and drove us here, for 40 kilometers, by open truck. I loved seeing the little villages in the countrysides, the rice paddies and the water buffalo. Everything seemed so peaceful — the whole situation seems unreal, that there could be around us killings and atrocities.

"The bay here is large and beautiful with several islands closing it off in places from the open sea, and although they are not too large, they are high. At night the fishing boats go out all lighted up beyond the islands and they look like street lights or the lights of houses off in the distance. The first night here I couldn't figure it out because I was sure that I had seen nothing but open water out there in the afternoon. Later I found out what they were.

"Our work here is just going to be responsibility for the physical security of the headquarters building and the grounds for the near future. It will not be occupied until the end of the year."

As for what will come at the end of the year, the soldier does not know. Americans wait and pray that men such as he will return to their homes soon, and that freedom for the Vietnamese will be gained.

Little Imagination

JAKARTA (AP) — Not much imagination went into a flag the Communists prepared to fly if the Oct. 1 coup succeeded. The official news agency Antara said the flag found by mobs ransacking a party headquarters in North Sumatra had simply a hammer and sickle imposed on the Indonesian national red and white banner.

Rights Leaders In Milwaukee Set For Boycott

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI)— Civil rights leaders have threatened another boycott of Milwaukee public schools if their demand for speeded-up classroom integration are not met.

The boycott sponsor, the Milwaukee United School Integration Committee, planned to meet Monday to discuss future strategy.

Assembly Lloyd A. Barbee, D-Milwaukee, head of the group, said the boycott could be resumed at any time unless certain ultimatums are met. These included school board adoption of a policy of integration and the end to keeping classes bused from one school to another intact. He also asked for approval of a study of the school system, proposed by a leading civic group made up of whites and Negroes.

Hebert Talks On Non-Support From Reservists

ST. LOUIS (AP)— U.S. Rep. Edward F. Hebert, D-La., said Saturday that Army reservists who don't support fully the reserve program "unwittingly have given those bent on its destruction an opportunity to refer to it as the paper reserve."

Hebert, chairman of the House Armed Service subcommittee which opposed the merger of the reserve with the national guard, spoke to the 43rd anniversary banquet of the Reserve Officers Association.

Hebert was given the association's annual "Minute Man Hall of Fame" award for his fight against the merger plan.

Hebert said the "paper reserve" charge had some justification because some reservists give "only lip service to the reserve program.

"For example, in the Berlin crisis in 1961, many of the Army guard and reserve units mobilized were woefully incapable of meeting their operational readiness dates.

"Many of these units required . . . five to six months of intensive training beyond their scheduled date of readiness," he added.

Conservative Union Try At Natchez Set

NATCHEZ, Miss. (AP) — A new organization, the Patriotic Americans for Education (PAE) has been formed here to try to unite various "conservative" groups.

Donnie Clark, a Natchez salesman who acts as spokesman for the PAE, said a rally was planned today at the city auditorium.

Clark said speakers will include Mayor John Nosser and the Rev. Connie Lynch, a fiery segregationist who wears the Confederate Stars and Bars as a vest.

The Rev. Mr. Lynch, of Augusta, Ga., is head of the National States Rights Party. "The theme of my speaking is always on race," he said. "Black versus white."

Clark said Saturday the PAE would try to eliminate discord among white segregationist groups.

"If the Negroes can be united then the white people can be united," he said. "But this isn't just for segregation. We're not a radical group. We want to do it by getting people registered to vote."

The PAE does not necessarily endorse the ideas of the Rev. Mr. Lynch, Clark said. The preacher is of the Church of Jesus Christ, Christian, and appears frequently at points of racial tension.

Clark declined comment on the United Klans of America, which has its state headquarters in Natchez.

This Mississippi River city of 23,000 has seen several Negro protest marches since the Aug. 27 booby trap bombing of a Negro leader's car spurred a civil rights drive.

hints from Heloise

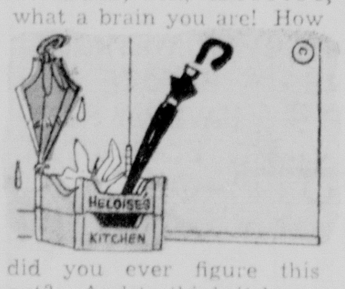
HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

DEAR FOLKS:

Once in a while something happens in our home that brings a good laugh. Something did last week . . .

I had two plastic stack-style vegetable bins standing by the front door (waiting to take them to the garage so my husband could use them for tools, etc.).

In came guests. It had been raining. They arrived with umbrellas, overshoes and wet mittens. One guest exclaimed, "Oh, Heloise, what a brain you are! How did you ever figure this out? And to think it has a place for my dripping wet umbrella, TOO . . ."



I gasped . . .

One guest immediately put her folded umbrella in the hollow tube which caught the drips, removed her overshoes and placed them in the bin part (where the potatoes usually go) and then put her son's wet boots in the bin.

What price discovery? Who knows? I never intended it for that purpose, but it was such a good idea that now we use it every time it rains.

Heloise

P. S. These bins are also wonderful on front porches and back porches . . . the postman can use them for excess mail, the milkman can put your milk in them, etc.

LESS WEAR AND TEAR

DEAR HELOISE:

To keep men's and boys' pants from wearing out at the cuff, attach a piece of iron-tape to the inside of the back of the cuff so the shoe will strike the tape instead of the pants cuff.

MRS. M. C. ARCHER

CLEAR, COLD WATER

DEAR HELOISE:

I have a suggestion to make regarding the problem of a metallic taste in coffee.

My belief is that the taste is sometimes due to the water, rather than the coffee maker.

Usually, the first step in making breakfast is to fill the coffee pot from the tap. I have found this water (which has been standing in the pipes overnight) has a metallic taste, and if I let it run a bit before filling the coffee pot, it loses the metallic taste.

This is especially true in the case of hard water.

Frieda Farmer

GOLF BRUSH-UP

DEAR HELOISE:

Felt-tip markers are wonderful for touching up scuff marks on shoes. They come in all colors.

I use them on my golf shoes . . . and it seems my wife is borrowing my markers all the time for one such job or another.

Gordon Steinmetz

HERE A SQUEEZE--THERE A SQUEEZE

DEAR HELOISE:

I put my hair-wave lotion into an empty squeeze bottle and apply it to the portion of my hair which I am setting. There is no waste or dripping such as one ordinarily has when you dip your comb into the waving solution and then over to your head!

If the wave lotion is too thick, you can thin it by adding a little water when you put it in the squeeze bottle.

Evelyn Fossati

FISH, BUT NO CHIPS

DEAR HELOISE:

For those who have rolling pins, potato mashers, etc., with painted handles that keep flaking off into your food . . . just cut off the fingers of an old rubber glove and slip them over the handles.

Result will be no more chipped paint in food, and the handles are easier to grip!

Grace

If you have a hint, problem or suggestion you'd like to share . . . write to Heloise in care of this newspaper.

If we keep working at it, we may find as many uses for old rubber gloves as we have for vinegar and nylon net!

Heloise

EASY ON THE EARS

DEAR HELOISE:

Many of us have earrings that we never wear because they hurt our ear lobes.

Well, I have discovered a method that works wonders.

Cut off a tiny piece of moleskin corn plaster and stick it to the underneath flap of the earring! Now I can wear all my earrings without that nagging pain. (Moleskin can be purchased at a drugstore or dime store.)

Jane

10-24

HANG THOSE REMNANTS!

DEAR HELOISE:

Tell all those gals who sew and always keep extra materials on hand, to stop digging through that box to find the piece of material they want.

I did this for years until I found that by hanging all my new materials on coat hangers and putting them in the closet, they were always at my fingertips. Keeps the cloth from having unnecessary folds, too.

For the smaller pieces that are difficult to keep on a hanger—put each piece in a small paper bag, pin a sample to the outside, and attach the paper bag to the hanger with a clothespin.

In place of paper bags, small plastic bags could be used, and since they are "see-throughish," it would not be necessary to attach a sample to the outside, eh?

DON'T SHELVE THIS!

DEAR HELOISE:

Here is a tip for those who have open book shelves . . .

After dusting shelves and books, take a long plastic garment bag from the cleaners, slit lengthwise, and put on the shelf. Arrange the books as usual, then fold the loose plastic back over the books to cover them.

Since these bags are of clear plastic, the titles are easily read.

It is much easier to wipe off the plastic than to dust each book separately. Saves time and energy and the books.

DEAR FOLKS:

If you use those little telephone flip-pads with the alphabet on the outside, you know that eventually the alphabet wears off!

I suggest (and I learned this after buying three of them in one year) that you put a piece of cellophane tape over the letters of the alphabet while the pad is still new. The painted-on alphabet won't wear off.
